10. McCain has said that he "doesn't really understand economics."

These are the thematic statements about McCain -- we need to cut 7. GQRR has listed the statements in the order they recommend using them:

1. [GROUP 1 OHIO, 4 NEVADA] [IRAQ - PRIORITIES] The war in Iraq has already cost us over 1 trillion dollars, and we're spending another 10 billion dollars every month, money that could be used to create jobs or provide health care here at home. Yet McCain proposes keeping our troops there for another hundred years. His policy would cost us trillions more over the coming decades.

2. [GROUP 2 OHIO, 3 NEVADA] [ENDLESS WAR –BUSH] On Iraq and Iran, McCain is an even bigger hawk than George Bush. Bush says we will be in Iraq for 50 years. McCain says we will be there for 100 years or more. Bush has threatened Iran. McCain says there will be more wars in the region and that we may have to bomb Iran.

3. [GROUP 1 OHIO, 4 NEVADA] [DOESN'T UNDERSTAND ECONOMY] With a housing market in crisis, increasing prices, stagnant wages and the first drop in jobs in nearly 5 years, the next President will need to have a good handle on the economy, but McCain admits that he "doesn't really understand economics" and will have to read Alan Greenspan's book to learn the ropes.

4. [GROUP 2 OHIO, 3 NEVADA] [ECONOMIC FUNDAMENTALS] With a housing market in crisis, increasing prices, stagnant wages and the first drop in jobs in nearly 5 years the next President needs to understand the real challenges facing our economy. But, like George Bush, McCain insists that "the fundamentals of our economy will remain strong" and that we're not headed for a recession.

5. [GROUP 1 OHIO, 4 NEVADA] [OUT OF TOUCH – WEALTH] McCain defended his opposition to a minimum wage increase by noting that he had forgone a pay raise in recent years and claiming this had caused a hardship for his family. But McCain makes over 160,000 dollars a year and is worth up to 30 million dollars.

6. [GROUP 2 OHIO, 3 NEVADA] [OUTSOURCING AND TRADE] McCain says that American manufacturing jobs that have moved overseas are (quote) "never coming back" (end quote) but he still thinks globalization is a (quote) "opportunity" (end quote) for American workers. McCain is a strong proponent of free trade; he supported free trade with China and NAFTA, which he claims has created millions of jobs.

7. [GROUP 1 OHIO, 4 NEVADA] [ENERGY] McCain has taken nearly half a million dollars from the oil industry and his campaign chairman is a lobbyist for Saudi Arabia. He has voted repeatedly to give billions in tax breaks to oil companies already making record profits. Last year he killed legislation that would have funded 13 billion dollars in investments in renewable energy by eliminating tax breaks and subsidies for Big Oil.

8. [GROUP 2 OHIO, 3 NEVADA] [HEALTHCARE] On the issue of health care, McCain is indistinguishable from Bush. McCain supported Bush's veto of a bill to extend health insurance to 10 million kids, and he has repeatedly voted to cut billions from Medicare. His health care plan, like Bush's, would give insurance companies more power to deny people coverage or jack up premiums.

9. [GROUP 1 OHIO, 4 NEVADA] [LOBBYISTS] McCain rails against lobbyists on the campaign trail but he has 59 of them raising money for his campaign, far more than any other presidential candidate. His campaign manager is a former lobbyist for telecom companies – the industry McCain oversees on the Commerce committee – and his campaign chairman made millions lobbying for Saudi Arabia

10. [GROUP 2 OHIO, 3 NEVADA] [FLIP-FLOPS] McCain says he is a straight talker, but he has changed many of his positions to run for president. He voted against the Bush tax cuts, but now he supports them. He said he would never overturn Roe v. Wade, but now he wants eliminate a woman's right to choose. He wrote legislation to give illegal immigrants citizenship, but now he won't even say if he would vote for his own bill.

WE SUGGEST CUTTING THESE MESSAGES.

11. [BUSH 3RD TERM] McCain would be nothing more than a 3rd Bush term. He has voted with Bush 90 percent of the time overall and 100 percent of the time on Iraq. Like Bush, he would keep our troops in Iraq for decades. McCain supported Bush's veto of the children's health care bill, Bush's plan to privatize social security Bush's tax cuts for millionaire and big corporations.

12. [SECURITY] McCain says he would follow Osama bin Laden to the Gates of Hell, but when asked how he plans to capture bin Laden, he dodges the question. McCain still insists that Iraq is the central front in the war on terror. His plan to keep troops in Iraq for 100 more years will keep our military stretched too thin to fight al Qaeda and other terrorists in Afghanistan or elsewhere.

13. [OUT OF TOUCH – NO WEALTH] McCain is out of touch with American families. He opposed increasing the minimum wage from 5 to 7 dollars but supports putting seniors' retirement funds at risk by privatizing Social Security. He wants to extend the Bush tax cuts for millionaires and big corporations and he even supported Bush's veto of the Children's health care bill.

14. [TAXES] Most economists support a short-term stimulus plan targeted at the middle class, but instead of backing measures aimed at helping middle class Americans, McCain's solution is to make Bush's tax cuts for those making over 200,000 dollars permanent and to cut taxes on big corporations by another 30 percent.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

15. [SOCIAL SECURITY] McCain not only supported George Bush's plan to privatize Social Security, he traveled the country with Bush to try to help sell it. The Bush/McCain plan would slash guaranteed benefits and risk seniors' retirement funds in the stock market while adding a trillion dollars to our national debt.

16. [ENDLESS WAR – NO BUSH] Not only does McCain wants to send even more troops to Iraq and keep them there for 100 years or more, he would drag us into other conflicts in the Middle East. He admits that if he becomes president there will be more wars and he says we may have to bomb Iran.

17. [IRAQ – STRAIGHT HIT] McCain said the war in Iraq would be easy and that we would be greeted as liberators. He has voted with Bush on Iraq 100 percent of the time, proposes sending even more troops to Iraq, building permanent bases like the ones we have in Korea and Germany and keeping our forces there for 100 years or more.

FYI - VA is in a very different position than most states (i.e. budget SURPLUS)... which provides us a unique opportunity.

ProgressVA Criticizes Governor for Disingenuous Budget Claims

$311 Million Projected Surplus Dwarfed by State's Debts And Outstanding Obligations

Charlottesville, VA - Governor McDonnell today announced Virginia has a budget "surplus" of $311 million. ProgressVA sharply criticized the Governor's handling of the state budget for failing to fully fund the state's obligation to the Virginia Retirement System while also cutting funds from vital public safety and health programs.

"The Governor's claims to fiscal responsibility are disingenuous at best," said Anna Scholl, Executive Director of ProgressVA. "Our debts and obligations far outstrip the projected budget surplus. The Governor has essentially run up the state's credit card and now wants a pat on the back for leaving a few dollars in the bank account."

While Virginia is constitutionally required to have a balanced budget, the burden of that balance has been laid on the backs of middle-class workers. The Governor's pension reform legislation has reduced the take-home pay for thousands of state employees while continuing the to leave the pension funds of teachers and police officers drastically underfunded. At the same time the state has cut general fund aid to localities, leaving localities with a choice between slashing police officers, school teachers, and children's programs from their budgets or increasing property taxes.

In addition to those cuts, Governor McDonnell has run up the state's credit card, pushing a $3 billion transportation bond plan through the General Assembly and putting off millions of dollars in contributions to the Virginia Retirement System.

"Its time for Governor McDonnell to level with taxpayers about the state's finances," said Scholl.

About ProgressVA

Subject:	Clinton Foundation Stories

Hi all,

It's been a little while since we've sent one of these, but given the attacks on the Clinton Foundation as of late, we wanted to send around some points in hopes that you will join us in defending the good work the Foundation does and will continue to do.

Below are some points that we hope you can hit when talking to reporters, are on air, or even just with friends and people in your communities. As you've probably seen reading the stories in the last couple of weeks, there has been little mention of the good work the Foundation does, and that it is without a doubt a world-class philanthropy.

Along those lines, we encourage you to visit the Clinton Foundation website to learn more about the work, and have included some specific links you may be interested in. As you may know, last week President Clinton completed a trip to Haiti to see the economic progress there, and this week President, Secretary and Chelsea Clinton will convene the 8th Clinton Global Initiative University in Miami.

Additionally, we're looking forward to two major events for No Ceilings: The Full Participation Project. On March 9, Secretary Clinton and Chelsea, together with Melinda Gates, will roll out our progress report in written form as well as in a series of data visualizations on noceilings.org to show the progress that women and girls have made around the world and the gaps that still remain since the U.N. Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing in 1995, when Secretary Clinton called on the international community to ensure that "women's rights are human rights." This is the culmination of over a year's collaboration among the Clinton Foundation, the Gates Foundation, The Economist Intelligence Unit, the WORLD Policy Analysis Center at UCLA, and Fathom Information Design. On March 10, Secretary Clinton will speak at the United Nations to articulate her vision to reach full participation for women and girls in the 21st century.

BHCCF Top-line Talking Points

- The Clinton Foundation is a philanthropy, period. They receive contributions from around the world, because they're doing groundbreaking, life-changing work around the globe.

- These contributions are important because they are responsible for millions of people getting access to life-saving HIV/AIDs treatment, more than 40,000 farmers in Malawi, Tanzania, and Rwanda improving their incomes by more than 500 percent; 33,500 tons of greenhouse gas emissions being reduced annually across the U.S.; supporting the Clinton

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Global Initiative whose members have made nearly 3,100 Commitments to Action to improving more than 430 million lives around the world and so much more. The list goes on.

- Let's remember why journalists are able to dig through all these records. Because unlike many other similar charities, the Foundation voluntarily discloses all of its contributors' names, right on the Clinton Foundation website. And it refuses to take anonymous contributions. No charity is required to do these, but the Clinton Foundation does it, on its own accord.

- As a result of that transparency, The Wall Street Journal was able to spend 9 months digging through all of this looking for signs of conflict and impropriety. Their conclusion? That, and I'm quoting here, "There is no evidence of that with the Clinton Foundation." The Washington Post and The Guardian said the same thing in their stories. It's a less sexy conclusion, but you'll find it buried in these stories.

- Something else you won't find? Anyone questioning the fact that the Clinton Foundation's work has improved the lives of millions across the globe. But you don't hear them saying it either. And it's important that doesn't get lost in all of this, because it's the most important part.

- It's a false choice to suggest people can't support political causes or candidates and also care about philanthropy and making a difference in the world.

- Without these contributions, it's clear what would have happened – fewer people would have access to affordable HIV/AIDS medication; fewer people would have access to clean water; fewer economic opportunities would be made available in developing communities in nations across Africa, Asia, and South; and fewer children in the US would have access to healthy foods.

- The Clinton Foundation is constantly re-evaluating its practices to ensure it runs as efficiently, effectively, and as transparently as possible. And it has said it will re-evaluate its contributor practices if Secretary Clinton runs, just as was done when she became Secretary of State.

- The bottom line: The ability to fund the Foundation is the ability to improve the lives of millions of people across the world. And while it's appropriate to raise questions to ensure that money is being used as efficiently as possible to achieve its mission, it's just as important to acknowledge that after much scrutiny, and when you cast aside those whose goal it is to make political hay, that this is a philanthropy, widely recognized as a successful one, and it does an enormous amount of good that the people who founded it and work there should be nothing but immensely proud of. Period.

Additional Points

- Almost all charities depend on outside support whether it's your local non-profit one or a global philanthropy.

- The work of the Clinton Foundation is effective, which is why it has bipartisan support from places like News Corporation, Chris Ruddy of NewsMax, and counts among its contributors and CGI participants President George H.W. Bush, Laura Bush, Condi Rice, John McCain, Mitt Romney, Carly Fiorina, and dozens of governors and mayors from both sides of the aisle.

- Every penny of the money Algeria donated for Haiti went to help Haiti. People forget about the outpouring of support for those debased by the earthquake and the need to get money and supplies there quickly. The United Nations asked President Clinton to head Haiti relief and encouraged countries to support the effort. President Bush partnered with WJC to set up the Bush-Clinton Haiti Fund in part because the Clinton Foundation had an expertise in addressing such challenges efficiently and effectively - as they previously did with the Tsunami is SE Asia.

- People are trying to make this political forget the human toll of HIV/AIDs or earthquakes or that as governments have fewer resources around the world. That's exactly where NGO's need to step into the void to help improve people's lives. When people call for the donations to be returned, they are dismissing the fact that lives will be affected, even lost.

Thanks, Dan

I am impressed. Think it manages to capture her particular sensibilities about everyone having a role to play while adhering to our middle class message imperatives.

Love the concept "only path to real and lasting prosperity is prosperity built by all and shared by all.' Including "built" really helps to round out the belief of everyone having a role/responsibility.

Think you all dealt with FDR deftly by comparing Great Depression to the Great Recession - and the focus on role of women during that era is an effective but subtle reminder of HRC as first POTUS.

Couple of concepts I thought were missing...

1) an acknowledgement that middle class has done their part and it is time for the well off to step it up. I agree with Jim that using "it is your time" - along with appropriate set up language - would help drive this distinction home.

2) think we could draw out more the benefits of shared prosperity and examples of what it would look like.

3). I think the Econ policy discussion doesn't quite match up with the lift of "shared prosperity built by all" from beginning of speech. Wonder if you could draw out the theory behind corporate purpose here more to get at what it would look like if all in America was working to make America stronger.

4) relatedly, mightvconsider adding notion of how America just doesn't figure out how to survive in a changing world - we figure out how to harness that change and benefit from it. That's what we have always done from the time of the cotton gin to the industrial revolution and now with the digital age. Embracing that concept may help give the Econ section more lift.

But, moreover, this is great work. Thank you to Lissa and Favs for continued above and beyond help. I

Dear Mac,

Really so wonderful to hear from you. As Tony said, so hard to believe 5 decades have passed since Nose. You know, I clearly remember (like yesterday) when you recited a JFK speech (was it Japan Night or American Night?) at Nose. I remember that you held a JFK silver dollar in your hand while you recited. Brought tears to my eyes then. Good grief, wasn't it just a few years ago?

I am very proud and happy to read of your successful career, and I could almost have predicted it given your keen intelligence and passion these many years ago.

Of course, I also remember Keiko. Very well. Please convey my best regards to her when you see her. I wonder if you also have kept in touch with Itachi-San?

Brief update, dear Mac: I went to law school for awhile, have Master's Degree in Journalism/Public Relations, some publications. I was a commercial banker for several years, and then a fed regulator for another several years (US Comptroller of the Currency). Married an Olympian and world champion gold medalist, who has since passed away. Have one beautiful brilliant son who is a classical pianist. I am now enjoying retirement years (way too much), but ought to be doing something more productive. I'm working in it. :-)

ATTACHED: a few photos of Nose I managed to preserve over the past 50 years. Keiko is in some of them. Perhaps you can share with her. At the moment, I cannot locate pictures of you, although I thought I had some.

[I am surprised to read you celebrated Nose anniversary last year because isn't 2015 actually the 50th anniversary? Perhaps we are counting differently. Not certain.]

Beyond happy to hear from you, dear Mac. Please do stay in touch. Give all from Nose days my best wishes.

Sincere and best regards,

Jan

Last night as I walked though the grounds greeting old friends and new, I noticed that the stress of organizing this gathering had lifted and the familiar joy was settling in. (Here's a photo from climb trainer Ruddy's morning walk.)

Convening these change agents each year is the most incredible thing Backbone Campaign does. What is most moving is that after six years of doing so, the community of people offering skills, pitching in, returning and bringing new friends has become just that, a community. Today, we'll be opening the camp with some remembrances of those who are no longer with us, and a welcome to those joining the circle.

Today will feature Sweetwater Nannauck of IdleNoMoreWA and then the Canopy Collective. Sweetwater's history of colonialism and Canopy Collective's Anti-Oppression/Collective Liberation presentations will start out the week with a consciousness about where we are, how we got to this place, and an acknowledgement of the differences as well as what we hold in our common story and aspirations. Tomorrow, we'll have an incredible nonviolent direct action training with our Rising Tide friends from around the country. Tomorrow night, the incredible Jim Diers will share comm unity organizing stories from people he's worked with around the globe.

Come enjoy and be part of this. You are welcome anytime during the week. If at all possible, please register to let us know to expect you. Here's the schedule . And here is a growing collection of resources from and to augment presentations. Check it out and join us. And know that whenever you show up, incredible things are happening.

In gratitude and community,

Bill Moyer

Subject: Hayworth ad up

Hey John,

Just heard: Congresswoman Hayworth's first ad is launching tomorrow!

They're going on air because the analysts all say our race is tighter than ever – POLITICO's even calling her a "top candidate." Both of us know this race is so close, we could win or lose tomorrow.

To fight back, we have to expand our own ad buy by 1 p.m. tomorrow. Every cent you give tonight is going directly on the air.

I can't let her become Boehner's newest Tea Party vote. Can you chip in so we can reach every voter in the Hudson Valley and win? https://secure.actblue.com/contribute/page/spmrapidresponse

Thanks, gotta run!

– Sean

P.S. Both Hayworth and Karl Rove know that this is a critical moment as well, and they're bringing in the big guns. Please give anything you can so we can win.

I agree on the auto bailout. It encapsulates why she is the better choice. Bernie was willing to let the auto industry collapse, go against the Democratic president elect and, for that matter, let the financial system fail--which would have brought down main street with it--because it wasn't the perfect piece of legislation matching his socialist ideal.

Subject: Deadline extended to have your gift matched

Dear John,

I have good news and bad news for you. On Friday we hit the midnight deadline to reach our $60,000 matching gift goal – but we came up short. Without these funds, we may have to scale back our efforts to target Senators who are on-the-fence on clean energy and climate legislation. This was a sorely needed chance to push the legislation forward and fight back against Big Oil's sleazy tactics.

But I have good news too: our generous matching gift donors have given us one more day to reach that goal. I've attached Friday's email below so you can see why our early campaigns are so critical. If you missed this chance on Friday, there's still time to have your gift matched dollar-for-dollar: Make your gift by MIDNIGHT TONIGHT to put us over the top.

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John,

The next few hours could be a double win for our fight to pass clean energy and climate legislation before this year's pivotal elections.

Time is running out to raise $35,507 to reach our matching gift goal by midnight TONIGHT. For only a few more hours, your gift will be matched dollar for dollar by generous donors.

John, now that the Supreme Court is letting Big Oil spend unlimited funds to kick our friends out of Congress, we can't pass up this opportunity to push clean energy forward NOW, before Big Oil ramps up its campaign of lies in an attempt to distort the public's view on clean energy.

Unless we raise $35,507 by midnight, we'll have to scale back our fight against Big Oil at the ballot box this fall.

Our pro-environment champions are counting on us to come through in these last critical hours – please don't wait!

Have your gift MATCHED by midnight TONIGHT!

Please don't wait a minute longer. Have your gift matched now to help LCV fight TWICE as hard to pass clean energy and climate legislation before this year's elections!

If we can't meet our goal, LCV may be forced to scale back crucial efforts to support clean energy and climate legislation in the districts of on-the-fence Senators – efforts like paid ads, voter education and grassroots lobbying that have proven to cement wavering votes in the past.

Without your support, LCV will have to scale back these key initiatives in 2010:

- Creating a powerful media presence on television, radio, and the internet. Use these outlets to deliver research-driven messages proven to show the public why clean energy is key to job growth.
- Driving massive public education campaigns in the districts that matter – including door-to-door canvassing, phone banks, and targeted mail.
- Telling constituents exactly where their Senators stand on clean energy – and why passing clean energy is key to creating new jobs and reducing our dependence on foreign oil.
- Bolstering environmental support at the state level – supporting pro-conservation governors and building pro-conservation majorities in state houses.

If we can count on you to help us take advantage of this critical matching opportunity, LCV has the savvy, the passion, and the grassroots muscle to use each dollar more efficiently and effectively than Big Oil.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Don't let this opportunity pass us by. Give before midnight TONIGHT, and your gift will be matched, dollar for dollar, up to $60,000.

Don't wait. Taking full advantage of this rare opportunity is critical to our success – and to the planet's future.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski

Subject: Fred Baron

1) Here is the original request from Lisa, Fred's wife

Please please call them. I need tthem to ask people on the board why fred can't have this drug. This drug has been tested with freds tumor in a testube and is efficaous. The drug is in the hospital that fred is in AND this drug is being used in clinical trials on myloma (but fred doesn't qualify). It's bullshit. If I am unable to get drug I will take out full pg add in boston globe to ceo and board members. Fred is running out of time. He's so sick and needs this drug. Thanks so much

2) The Background

From a Friend Describing the problem
Fred Baron of Dallas, good friend, is in Mayo now with Multiple Myeloma(sp?). There is a drug-Tysabri- made by Biogene that is given for multiple sclerosis, but is now in clinical trials for use on Multiple Myeloma. Fred's drs at mayo think this drug is his only chance, but Bogene won't approve for fred because he is too sick and if it fails him, it could skew the outcome of the trials(this told to me by his wife). According to his wife, sen. Kerry called andy von eschenbach on friday, andy called biogene, and got this reply from the company. Fred needs a compassionate use release from the company, whose ceo is James Mullin ph: 617-679-2000. I would like to call him on monday to argue that they could release this drug for mayo drs to administer to fred, and have the FDA "carve" it out of being factored in the clinical trials. So, early monday I need Von eshenbach ph #, and arrange a call later with mr. Mullin. See what info you can get me on him, and who represents them in dc. Thanks.

From his Dr. Lust, Fred's Doctor
We are requesting approval from Biogen/Idec to obtain compassionate use of Tysabri (natalizumab) for a patient we have that has end-stage myeloma and has exhausted all other treatment options. We have discussed the potential risks including the development of PML and the patient wishes to proceed with treatment. The Mayo Clinic has been approved to dispense this medication and our neurologists have been using it for the approved indication, multiple sclerosis. We also have an IRB approved clinical trial with this agent for myeloma through Biogen Idec entitled "A Phase I/2, Two Arm Dose Finding Study of Natalizumab for the Treatment of Subjects with Relapsed or Refractory Multiple Myeloma. Our patient does not meet the eligibility criteria for this trial and the treating physicians would like to treat him with Tysabri off study. If there are any additional questions please contact me at 507-250-3606 (cell phone).

From Harkin

On Sunday
I got through to Mullen. He had already had extensive conversations with Senator Kerry and Lance Armstrong and had heard from President Clinton, too. The answer he gave in every case was "no. I believe that I understood it correctly that Kerry had organized a conference call with Mullen and FDA Commissioner Von Eschenbach. I hear that Von Eschenbach said it was fine with him for the drug to be used in Fred's case. However, Biogen believes that Von E does not have that authority given the strict FDA conditions on the use of the drug. (FDA had withdrawn the drug from the market because of its harmful effects. It's the only drug that has ever been reapproved – but its reapproval was with very strict limitations.). I'm having people look into FDA's authorities in this area. Mike, it would be great if Bill Schultz could, too. Also, I'm told that Mayo is what's called an FDA "touch approved program" – which means that it's one of the institutions in the country authorized to administer Tysabri. Might be worth asking Schultz if there are authorities there that could allow Mayo to go ahead even without Biogen or FDA OK. We're exploring that, too.

On Munday after the call with the FDA
I just had a disappointing call with Dr. Von Eschenbach. FDA had a phone conference with the medical and science officers from Biogen. FDA told them there would be no prejudice to the clinical trial if this drug were used for Fred. They were appreciative but gave no indication they would change their position, which is that a corporate decision has been made they would not go outside the clinical trial. I am really upset about this, personally, since FDA has been great to help. I have not had the time today to reach out to some on the board of Biogen, but hope to do so yet today. I felt last night, after talking with Andy von Eshenbach, that with clearance from FDA, the company would be ok.

6) On The Canadian Option

Dr. Trudel spoke with Dr. Lust about 30 minutes ago. I suggest you connect with him and hear his point of view of the conversation.

From what Dr. Trudel has told me:
- Dr. Lust still has confidence in the US as an option
- In Canada, this procedure would be viewed as experimental
- There would be some need to engage with the hospital executives to secure permission and the appropriate process for paying for the drug (which is different in the socialized medical system), but my sense is that this would ultimately be manageable
- There is the potential that permission from the manufacturer would be required given the use-case of the drug is different than it's intention, but she does not know for sure if this would be required.

Dr. Lust has her contact information. She is waiting in the wings, if put into action she will instruct the pharmacy to do the appropriate investigation and put the wheels in motion to make it happen.

She also told me that Princess Margaret is the likely the only institution in the country capable of doing this type of advanced work in the Myeloma field.

I will add: Hospitals in Canada are chronically underfunded, and a donation may grease the wheels. I would consider this and be up front with a proposal in conversations you have with senior members of the hospital executives.

7) Other Things that have happened:

Nate Landow who is a major Democratic Funder is on the Board of the Mayo Clinic, and is reaching out to his contacts at Mayo to see if they can make this happen around the company. Paul is going to contact Harkin's person to see if she can figure out a way working with Mayo to administer the drug.

Alan Solomont who has contacted a close friend of his, Will Muggia, who has a major interest in Biogen and he is going to reach out to a number of the Board Members to see what he can do.

Steve Grossman contacted Senior management in the company to request the treatment.

Al Dwoskin is reaching out to Walter Moore at Genentech he knows who is close to this company.

March 4, 2016

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. – Bernie Sanders on Friday said “disastrous” trade deals backed by Hillary Clinton decimated Michigan manufacturing, threw Michigan workers out of decent-paying jobs and are “one of the reasons that the middle class in the country is disappearing.”

“If the people of Michigan want to make a decision about which candidate stood with workers against corporate America and against these disastrous trade agreements, that candidate is Bernie Sanders,” he said to cheers from 2,125 supporters here at the Streeters Center.

Starting with the job-killing North American Free Trade Agreement, Clinton supported trade deals when she was secretary of state, a U.S. senator and first lady.

Sanders joined picket lines to protest NAFTA and other trade deals “crafted by “the big-money interests and corporations,” Sanders said.

“Hillary Clinton was on the other side of many of these trade agreements,” Sanders added.

Not only was Clinton on the wrong side of a series of business-backed trade deals, she also has only grudgingly questioned the biggest trade deal of all time. Until an election-eve conversion, she had backed the Trans-Pacific Partnership, a proposed 12-nation Pacific Rim trade deal which would be the biggest in history.

Meanwhile, Sanders’ campaign responded to Clinton’s assertion in Detroit that she has a plan to restore manufacturing jobs. “The American people are sick and tired of establishment politicians who promise to create manufacturing jobs during campaign season but support trade policies that make it easier to outsource these jobs the day after they get elected,” Sanders said in a prepared statement.

Meanwhile, Sanders’ campaign on Friday distributed a video showing Clinton in India in 2012 discussing what she said were “pluses and minuses” to outsourcing U.S. jobs.

Subject:	[big campaign] McCain Selects Anti-Choice Sarah Palin as Running Mate

Picture (Metafile) <No%20AttachName>
FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE August 29, 2008
McCain Selects Anti-Choice Sarah Palin as Running Mate
Selection of anti-choice Palin shows just how extreme McCain presidency will be Washington, D.C. – Nancy Keenan, president of NARAL Pro-Choice America, said that Sen. John McCain's selection today of Alaska Governor Sarah Palin as his vice presidential running mate is further evidence that a McCain presidency will be just another four years of the same old Bush-style anti-choice policies. Just like McCain, Palin opposes a woman's right to choose. Palin has also stated her opposition to abortion even in cases of rape or incest.
"John McCain's choice of Sarah Palin as his running mate proves just how rigid and extreme his administration would be when it comes to a woman's right to choose," Keenan said. "For 25 years, McCain has opposed a woman's right to choose, and we know that he will continue to push anti-choice policies in the White House. McCain's pick of anti-choice Sarah Palin is further evidence that his White House will be just another four years of Bush-style policies. Any remaining doubts about McCain's extreme anti-choice position should be put to rest when voters learn about the combined anti-choice records of Sarah Palin and John McCain."
Palin, a member of the anti-choice group Feminists for Life, said during her campaign for governor that she is opposed to abortion, even in cases of rape or incest. [Juneau Empire, "Abortion Draws Clear Divide in State Races," accessed 8/29/08 and Anchorage Daily News, "Governor's Race: Top contenders meet one last time to debate," 11/03/06.]
"Americans are tired of the kind of divisive anti-choice policies that Sen. McCain and Gov. Palin have pledged to continue to support. The contrast between pro-choice Sen. Obama and anti-choice Sen. McCain is clear. Voters are looking for a leader who respects women's freedom and privacy. Barack Obama is that leader."
Sen. McCain's selection of Palin as his vice-presidential running mate is especially troublesome for the unique audience of women voters NARAL Pro-Choice America is targeting: Independent and Republican pro-choice women in suburban and exurban swing districts. These women play a pivotal role in the presidential election. Recent polling confirms how, once these voters know McCain's extreme opposition to a woman's right to choose and family planning, they will switch parties to support Sen. Barack Obama.
NARAL Pro-Choice America, which tracks all choice-related votes in Congress and ranks all 50 states on the status of women's reproductive rights, classifies Sarah Palin as anti-choice.
Information about the polling can be found here [link to: <http://www.prochoiceamerica.org/assets/files/naralpollmemo061608.pdf> http://www.prochoiceamerica.org/assets/files/naralpollmemo061608.pdf]. Dear John,
Are you mad that George W. Bush has pursued the failed energy policies of the past for eight long years? Are you mad that John McCain continues to support Bush's tax breaks for Big Oil? Are you mad that corporate polluters work tirelessly to block clean energy legislation?

If so, then it's time for a change and it's time to take action.

Please join the League of Conservation Voters and John Slattery of TV's smash hit Mad Men for LCV's Obama Canvass Kickoff event in Northern Virginia on October 11th!

John Slattery, who in addition to starring in the Emmy winning Mad Men on AMC has also appeared on Will & Grace, Sex and the City and Desperate Housewives, will be joining LCV volunteers and supporters for a door-to-door canvass for Obama.

Join John Slattery of TV's Mad Men for LCV's Obama Canvass Kickoff event on October 11!

Election Day is only 28 days away, which means we have only 28 days to engage critical swing voters in conversation about Obama's plan to secure a clean energy future that strengthens the economy and curbs global warming pollution.

Virginia has emerged as one of the most important battleground states. In 2006, Jim Webb defeated Dirty Dozen member George Allen by only 9,000 votes – and the race for Virginia's 13 electoral votes will be just as close this year. That means every door we knock on and every voter we engage can make the difference on Election Day.

Join John Slattery, the League of Conservation Voters and other volunteers on Saturday, October 11th, to help bring about the change we need in this country.

Subject:	FOR APPROVAL: Tweet on Trump Mocking Disabled Reporter

Hi John-

Our political team has been getting incoming from disability groups asking for the campaign to hit Trump for mocking the NYT reporter with disabilities. Reynolds and Schake think it'd be a good one for you to Tweet. Here's what they propose:

Donald Trump, Republican frontrunner, has taken to mocking people with disabilities. A new low for both him and the party.

I voiced concern that this Tweet doesn't acknowledge that we're a few days late to the story here, but Reynolds thinks that since it happened over Thanksgiving it's ok for this to be late.

HEADS UP: I'm working on a blog post and Tweet storm about the Paris talks to send out from YOU on Monday. These would accompany the HRC oped from KLC that is being pitched online outlets. Will send to you for approval tonight or tomorrow morning once the digital and policy folks can take a look at it.

Thanks much,
Milia

Subject: I-395 Cosntruction Note -- A Five Week Look-ahead

Dear colleagues,

As we approach the end of the semester, I imagine some of you are wondering how the construction project might affect students during the examination period. I have been working with the BBC Construction team to minimize disruptions during the examination period. We have come up with a work-schedule that reduces noise and vibration between December 9 and December 20 but allows the construction team to continue working on the utility replacement. The following is a description of what we can expect from the construction team between now and the end of the year as they continue utility work along 2nd Street. Work will also be intensifying along Massachusetts Avenue, but except for traffic concerns, that will not affect us.

During the week of November 24, BBC will be working on three utilities during the day along 2nd Street. They will be completing the water lines and making the final connections. There will be no more water shutoffs at Gewirz and no night work.

Installation of electrical lines will reach F Street and a new manhole will be installed near G Street. There will be some noise and vibration from earth compactors as the construction team backfills the trenches. The noise and vibration should be minimal and should not be louder than that which we heard last week.

In an effort to minimize noise during final examinations, Washington Gas will begin saw cutting trench lines in 2nd Street this week as a prelude to excavating the street for the new gas lines.

During the week of December 1, work on the water lines will be completed. Work on the electrical lines will continue along 2nd Street going north from F Street towards Massachusetts Avenue. It will take about three weeks to complete the electrical work. Backfilling and compacting will continue this week. Work on 2nd Street will occur only in the daytime.

The concrete surface of 2nd Street will be demolished to open the trenches for the gas lines. Washington Gas will be pulling the concrete up from the street surface rather than hoe-ramming it. Gas lines are shallower than the other utility lines so they will not be lowering deep supports into the trench. As such, we expect that the noise accompanying these activities will not be too disruptive. Removing the concrete will be completed by the end of the week.

A great deal of work will be occurring at the corner of Massachusetts Avenue and 2nd Street so you can expect some serious traffic disruptions.

During the weeks of December 8 and 15, final examinations will occur. I have had a series of conversations with the utility companies and BBC and we believe that the only noise we will hear will come from the ground compactor as work on gas lines and electrical lines continue. I have stood in the classrooms on the second floor and believe that the sounds coming from the compactor will actually be drowned out by the sounds from our own fan coil units. Nonetheless, we will have some sound-baffling insulation ready to install over the windows if that becomes necessary. The Registrar will provide ear-plugs in each room during finals. I doubt that the students will need them but we will have some available just in case. Work along 2nd Street during this period will occur only in the daytime.

Sometime after December 20, probably as late as January 1, the gas company will begin to install a gas-line that runs down the Tower Green. You can now see the path staked out on the Green. This will involve removing some pavers on the south sidewalk in front of the Gewirz exit, excavating beneath the Tower Green, and then laying the new gas pipeline. This new line will provide redundant service to Gewirz, thereby eliminating the possibility of long-term gas shut-offs in the future. We may need to create a small temporary sidewalk in front of Gewirz so that residents will be able to cross over the excavated ditch. The work in the Tower Green is expected to take approximately two to three weeks depending on the weather.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The construction team has been given sub-surface drawings of our property to ensure that none of our services are disrupted. Reconstruction of the Tower Green, however, will not be completed until the spring planting season.

Sometime after January 1, work will begin on the highway itself. The work will include dismantling the retaining walls along the highway, lowering piles into the earth, and setting lagging boards to hold back the earth when the current retaining walls come down and the platform foundations are set. I will provide more information about that as we get closer to the date.

A variation of this email will be sent to the students after Thanksgiving. I hope you all have a joyful holiday.

I wanted to alert you all to what I have heard indirectly are requests from CHAI for another Haiti grant of $1M. We currently don't have the funds to grant them. We have enough to cover the work that we need to finish in 2012. BC would like additional money (that we would need raise) – approximately 500K to announce additional small grants in 2012. So there is no money for CHAI unless we want to raise an additional $1.5M for Haiti if you assume we want the additional 500K for 2012 CF grants for education, capacity building, agriculture and investment project support, our focus areas. I know there is a CHAI board call tomorrow so wanted to flag it for you and I will also mention to BC shortly when I see him – not to make any commitment and to downplay expectations until we have our year end meeting and decide on whether we will stay status quo on Haiti (which we can cover within our remaining CF Haiti Fund money) or go for the additional grant money up to 500K that BC wants (which we would have to raise). I am finalizing a haiti strategy memo (already have 2 budget options) to help inform our decision at the cf year-end meeting.

Bush wants to allow offshore drilling for oil

AP foreign, Tuesday June 17

2008 WASHINGTON (AP) - President Bush plans a renewed push to get Congress to end a long-standing ban on offshore oil and gas drilling.

With oil prices soaring and motorists paying $4 a gallon for gasoline, political pressures have been growing for more domestic oil and gas production.

White House press secretary Dana Perino tells The Associated Press that Bush believes Congress shouldn't waste any more time. She says that on Wednesday the president will urge lawmakers to lift the ban on offshore drilling.

Congressional Democrats have opposed lifting those prohibitions. The ban has been in effect for more than 80 percent of federal Outer Continental Shelf waters for more than a quarter-century and includes both the East and West coasts.

I don't really have any written instructions for AnyConnect. But when you are installing the software, you will reach a point where you have 4 checkboxes (3 are selectable and the first is not). Uncheck the last 3 boxes only and complete the installation. Those 3 items aren't necessary for the functionality of the VPN.

Subject: Puerto Rico Vote

It has been reported to me the GOP has decided that to win Florida and offset losses in the So FL Cuban community they have decided to target the Puerto Rican vote in Orlando.

The plan was developed by Ricky Rosello's campaign manager, who is GOP (which explains the Carson photo op) and Puerto Rico St Sen Jennifer Gonzalez, who is a statehooder running to replace current resident commissioner Pierluisi, who is also GOP and supports Bush.

The plan is based on the following facts/assumptions:

1) That Obama got 83% of the Puerto Rican vote in Florida and that number isn't sustainable in 2016

2) The size of the Puerto Rican vote in Florida has doubled since 2012 because of the financial crisis on the island

3) That there are more Republican elected Puerto Ricans in central Florida than Democrats (true)

4) That 75% of the Puerto Ricans in central Florida support statehood (have we polled this?)

5) That the Commonwealth Party is in disarray on the island (true) and that the Statehood party will win the 2016 elections there by a landslide

The plan has several parts:

1) Have every GOP Presidential candidate endorse statehood (Bush, Rubio, Carson have already done so)

2) While our position on status is neutral, paint HRC as pro-Commonwealth using Tony Podesta's works for the Commonwealth Governor and Cong. Nydia Velasquez' support of HRC as the links (they are already doing this)

3) Have the GOP in Congress support Chapter 9 for Puerto Rico (which would treat Puerto Rico like a state) while the Obama administration is pushing a "super chapter 9" position which would treat Puerto Rico as a special case, which apparently is the Commonwealth position

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

4) Paint the Obama administration as pro-commonwealth using the fact that Anita Dunn works for the Commonwealth Governor

5) Turn the election in Central Florida into a Statehood vs Commonwealth referendum.

This was passed to me and while I cant verify any of this, it wouldn't surprise me if it was true. It sounds like a plan created on the island because they are obsessed with the statehood versus commonwealth fight and only see the world in those terms.

Key issue is can they turn Orlando into the next battleground for that fight? Only polling will tell us that.

There are several bills pending in Congress dealing with the Puerto Rico debt issue. Sen Hatch apparently wants it dealt with before the Christmas break but the administration isn't engaged on the issue.

I don't have a recommendation about anything going on in Congress but I do think if this is resolved now as opposed to fighting it out during a general election we would probably be better off.

NEW SURVEY FINDS AMERICANS SKEPTICAL THAT FCC REGULATION OF THE INTERNET WILL BE HELPFUL; FAVOR MORE DISCLOSURE

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The Progressive Policy Institute (PPI) today released the results of a new survey finding that most Americans are unfamiliar with the term "net neutrality," want greater disclosure of the details of the FCC's proposal to regulate the Internet, and think that the government regulating the Internet like a public utility will not be helpful.

The nationwide survey, by Hart Research Associates, was conducted from February 13 to 15, 2015 on behalf of PPI. The survey was conducted by telephone (both landline and cell phone) among a cross section of 800 adults age 18 and over. It found:

- Three out of four (75%) Americans are unfamiliar with the term "net neutrality" and what it refers to.
- 73% of Americans want greater disclosure of the details of the FCC's proposal to regulate the Internet.
- Nearly eight in ten (79%) Americans favor public disclosure of the exact wording and details of the FCC's proposal to regulate the Internet before the FCC votes on it.
- Only one in three Americans thinks that regulating the Internet like telephone service will be helpful.

"The public neither understands nor supports the FCC voting on net neutrality rules without greater disclosure of the exact wording and the details of the proposal," said Peter Hart, Founder of Hart Research Associates. "Net neutrality is near net zero understanding: just one in four Americans knows what the term refers to, and just one in 10 Americans has positive feelings about it. In addition, a majority of Americans think 'the government should not take a stronger and more active role in overseeing and regulating the Internet.'"

"These findings suggest that the FCC's bid to impose outdated telephone regulations on the Internet is driven more by professional activists than by the public, which seems instinctively to resist the idea," said Will Marshall, PPI President. "That's why Congress should take a closer look at what the FCC is up to and make sure these issues get a thorough public airing."

The survey's margin of error is ±3.46 percentage points for 800 adults at the 95% confidence level. Sample tolerances for subgroups are larger. This is the first of several public opinion surveys PPI plans to release on issues related to regulation of the Internet and telecommunications law.

One thing missing is that there's a sense of the "underlying problems". Any way we can adjust it for that so that we give a nod to ACA issues. (Also some will interpret that as mismanagement or structural issues. All of which is also good). Shows she gets that there's a lot that needs to be done.

Puerto Rico's debt crisis is not theirs alone. We must partner to find smart solutions to stabilize & grow PR's economy and help people thrive.

HRC wants to do a tweet on Puerto Rico regarding the debt crisis (see attached memo if you want brief background on the issue).

Our goal with the tweet is to be empathetic to Puerto Ricans, make clear we are in this together b/c their health and well-being is ours and b/c many Americans hold PR municipal bonds as part of their retirement portfolios. We don't want to suggest a bailout, but we do want to suggest that we should partner to solve the problem

SUGGESTED tweet (in need of Lauren's magic and 3 characters over):

Puerto Rico's debt crisis is not theirs alone. We must partner to find smart solutions to stabilize & grow PR's economy and help people thrive.

Mr Podesta,

My name is Stelios Georgoulas. I am very honored to be writing this letter to you, with which I would like to express my passion and desire to support you as a volunteer in your role as Chairman of Secretary Clinton's campaign.

I am a 36-year-old Eye Surgeon in London UK with a PhD from University College London and a Masters of Science in Management, Organisations and Governance (with Distinction) from the London School of Economics.

I have been trying to find your email address or your office fax numbers in order to contact you but I have had no luck. I sent you a few weeks ago an email at your Georgetown University account and a letter to Hillary for America Offices in Brooklyn, which I am not sure if you have received.

I trust that I can contribute significantly to your work. I am a passionate individual, and am willing to work very hard both individually and as part of a team to support you. In addition to my mixed medical and management background, I possess deep insight into European politics, which will be important to you since the ISIS, immigration and financial crises are key topics in the presidential debate. I also have significant work experience with an advanced public healthcare system, the UK National Healthcare System, which displays commonalities with your new, improved and more democratic US Healthcare system.

My dream is to work in Greek politics in the future and make my imprint in Greece, by giving hope and a better future to my people. I believe that by working close to you I will have the unique opportunity to watch you in action, to observe your thought and decision-making processes, and how you lead and inspire others.

I would be deeply honored if you could give me the opportunity to send you my CV and visit you in New York in order to discuss it further.

I very much look forward to hearing from you.

Before you go to bed tonight, do me a favor and read Barack's note.

We've always known this election was going to be even tougher than the last one. All across the country, supporters like you have stepped up to give your time and energy to help move this country forward. We can't let that hard work be undone by our opponents' unlimited spending on negative TV ads.

If we win, it will because of what you do today, and for the next 77 days. Please donate $3 or more now:

https://donate.barackobama.com/77-Days

Thanks for everything you do for Barack and this campaign.

Michelle

P.S. -- Make a donation of $3 or whatever you can before midnight tonight and you and a guest will be automatically entered to meet Barack and me at the Democratic National Convention in Charlotte. We'll cover your flight and hotel expenses, and, for today only, each entry counts as two chances to win.

Friend --

I just got back from Iowa, where we are being outspent 2 to 1 on the air. Voters there mentioned it to me more than once.

We expect Mitt Romney and the Republicans to outspend us.

What I will not abide is getting outspent by a margin that negates all the hard work our volunteers are doing -- talking to voters, knocking on doors, making calls.

We are in control of that outcome, but our time to close the gap is dwindling. After three consecutive months of being significantly outraised, it couldn't be more urgent.

Will you make a donation today?

If we win this election, it will be because of what you did.

I don't get to tell you enough how grateful I am.

Thank you,

Barack

P.S. -- In a few weeks, I'll accept our party's nomination for president onstage in Charlotte, North Carolina. I wouldn't be there without you. Any donation you make today automatically enters you and a guest for a chance to join me and Michelle as VIP guests of the convention. Hope to see you there.

> The Best Way to Vilify Clinton? G.O.P. Spends Heavily to Test It
> By ASHLEY PARKER and AMY CHOZICK
> JULY 11, 2015
> ORLANDO, Fla. — Inside an office park here, about a dozen women gathered to watch a 30-second television spot that opened with Hillary Rodham Clinton looking well-coiffed and aristocratic, toasting champagne with her tuxedoed husband, the former president, against a golden-hued backdrop.
> The ad then cut to Mrs. Clinton describing being “dead broke” when she and her husband left the White House, before a narrator intoned that Mrs. Clinton makes more money in a single speech, about $300,000, than an average family earns in five years.
> The message hit a nerve. “She’s out of touch,” said one of the women, who works as a laundry attendant.
> “Her reality is just so different than mine,” murmured another, as operatives from American Crossroads, a Republican “super PAC,” watched closely from behind a one-way mirror.
> In rooms like this one around the country, an expensive and sophisticated effort is underway to test and refine the most potent lines of attack against Mrs. Clinton, and, ultimately, to persuade Americans that she does not deserve their votes. While the general election is 16 months away, Republican groups are eager to begin building a powerful case against the woman they believe will be the Democratic nominee, and to infuse the public consciousness with those messages.
> Shaping a Campaign Against Hillary Clinton
> American Crossroads, a Republican “super PAC,” conducted two four-hour focus groups in Florida to test a series of attack ads against Hillary Rodham Clinton.

The effort could ultimately cost several hundred million dollars, given the variety and volume of political organizations involved.

The typical voter has not necessarily fully tuned in to election coverage or followed the intricacies of Mrs. Clinton's use of a private email account or foreign donations to her family's foundation. But Republicans are acutely aware that early attacks labeling Mitt Romney as elitist were impossible for him to shake in 2012, and they view these next several months as critical in laying the groundwork to taint, and ultimately defeat, Mrs. Clinton.

That is why, on a rainy night here, Crossroads, which was founded by the Republican strategist Karl Rove, gathered about 50 voters representing groups that it believes can be persuaded to vote against Mrs. Clinton — an all-white mix of young men, low-income adults, married mothers and politically moderate women.

One problem in developing negative messages about Mrs. Clinton, Republican strategists have found, is that she and her husband have survived so many controversies by dismissing them as partisan attacks. So the Republican organizations are seeking to develop lines of attack that resonate more deeply or raise unsettling questions about Mrs. Clinton's character.

They showed the voters, who received $100, sandwiches and soft drinks for their time, more than a dozen 30-second ads. (Crossroads allowed a reporter to observe the focus groups under the condition that the participants' names be withheld.)

The ads highlighted Mrs. Clinton's deleting of emails from her private account, tried to tie her to President Obama, portrayed her as distant from middle-class Americans and sought to persuade women that they do not need to support her because of her gender.

But many, essentially, struck the same theme, depicting Mrs. Clinton as untrustworthy, an image that even Democrats supporting the Clinton campaign acknowledge is a weakness. About 57 percent of Americans do not believe Mrs. Clinton is honest and trustworthy, according to a CNN poll released June 2.

Photo
An ad shown to a focus group contests Mrs. Clinton's comments that she and her husband were "dead broke" when they left the White House.

"She's got an open wound, and part of our job is to pour salt in it," said Glen Bolger, a co-founder of Public Opinion Strategies, the Republican polling firm that conducted the focus groups.

Mrs. Clinton's allies point to relatively low trust numbers for Mr. Clinton in the 1992 and 1996 elections and his ability to win voters despite his personal failings.

An ad titled "Shadow," which ranked among the most effective ads that Crossroads tested in Orlando, argued that scandal trailed Mrs. Clinton like a menacing shadow. "Whitewater, Travelgate and Filegate," a narrator began, referring to scandals from decades ago, including one over a real estate deal. Then the narrator moved on to more recent controversies, including her deleted emails, the foreign donations to her family foundation and the four Americans killed in the 2012 attacks on the United States compound in Benghazi, Libya.

"There's a sense of distrust, a sense of unease about her authenticity and her candor, that isn't hard to stimulate," said Steven Law, the president of Crossroads.

In modern campaigns, given the fragmented way media is consumed, television ads are important but not always enough to create a narrative, especially over a long period.

Crossroads plans to use a kaleidoscopic approach for its anti-Clinton campaign. In order to target particular voters with tailored messages, the campaign will feature tools including television and radio spots, digital ads on mobile devices, and pre-roll, the commercials that play before videos online.

Crossroads is eager to establish itself as the leading attack dog against Mrs. Clinton, but it is a crowded field, especially as other super PACs are emerging as bigger players in the Republican money world.

Right to Rise, a super PAC supporting former Gov. Jeb Bush of Florida, recently held its own briefing for Republican groups to highlight data it gathered from its own focus groups and polling of women, information that can be used in attacks against Mrs. Clinton. It stressed that Mrs. Clinton's "dead broke" comments were particularly devastating, as were her deleted emails, though they required more explanation. Though the Clintons were in fact dealing with debt and legal fees when they left the White House, Mrs. Clinton later called her comments "inartful."

In addition, America Rising PAC, an opposition research group that focuses heavily on attacking Mrs. Clinton, began its effort with Twitter and other online posts more than a year ago before moving to paid digital ads.

Mrs. Clinton's campaign and Democratic groups believe that attacks on her trustworthiness and wealth could be the most damaging if they do not aggressively combat them. Rather than debating policies that would help working Americans, "they're trying to make her Mitt Romney in a pantsuit," said David Brock, the founder of several pro-Clinton outside groups and author of the forthcoming book, "Killing the Messenger: The Right Wing Plot to Derail Hillary and Hijack Your Government."

The Clinton campaign has also tried to turn the trust issue around by arguing that while voters may not trust how Mrs. Clinton handled her email as secretary of state, they can trust her more than Republicans to look out for middle-class Americans.

Christina Reynolds, a spokeswoman for the campaign, said billionaires funding the attacks "are committed to keeping the policies in place that keep the deck stacked in favor of them at the expense of the voters she talks to around the country."

Democratic political groups, of course, will undertake their own offensive to attack a Republican nominee or front-runner, much as they did with Mr. Romney. But their task has been made more difficult by the large and uncertain Republican field.

Both sides agree that the work undertaken long before the election, often in the year before it, creates the foundation for the most damaging attacks.

Photo

Ahead of the 2004 election, Mr. Rove and others involved in President George W. Bush's re-election campaign tried to convince voters that Senator John Kerry was an opportunistic flip-flopper. The critique did not catch on until March of that year, when Mr. Kerry, in response to a question about funding for the military operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, said he "actually did vote for the $87 billion before I voted against it."

"The groundwork had been laid pointing out all the examples of flip-flopping in the past," said Colin Reed, the executive director of America Rising.

Republicans could hardly hide their giddiness when Mrs. Clinton made her "dead broke" remark last year. To many in the political world, the comment evoked Mr. Romney's misstep at a 2012 fund-raiser where he said "47 percent" of Americans were overly dependent on government.

Long before Mr. Romney made that comment, Priorities USA Action, the Democratic super PAC, had devoted months to portraying the Republican candidate as "a plutocrat who doesn't care about people like you," said Bill Burton, a Priorities co-founder.

"The best thing you can do is set the table for a key vulnerability and hope the candidate lives up to the hype, which they likely will do," Mr. Burton said.

In Orlando, the "dead broke" ad emerged as the most effective spot, partly because it captured the gulf between Mrs. Clinton's life and those of the less affluent people gathered.

"She's broke at another level," said one man, who owns an electrical company and makes less than $50,000 annually. "She could be broke, you know, compared to the people in her world. O.K., in her status. 'Oh, my God, I can't buy a jet this year — we're broke, we're not going to Europe, sorry.' "

Another ad that resonated, called "Throw Away," opens with Mrs. Clinton saying she never throws anything away and is "two steps short of a hoarder" before a narrator points out that she deleted about 30,000 emails from her time at the State Department.

But Crossroads still has some fine-tuning to do. A few women watching expressed sympathy for Mrs. Clinton, saying they sometimes felt like hoarders, too, and often deleted spam and other personal emails. Maybe that was what Mrs. Clinton had done?

"They could have been from Bed Bath & Beyond," one woman said of the emails. "Who knows?"

Subject:	Environmental jihad?

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Wisconsin Senator Ron Johnson just called our climate action campaign "an environmental jihad." We need every LCV supporter to help us push back. Tell him to apologize for his offensive rhetoric and stop blocking congressional action on climate change now >>

John,

Wisconsin Senator Ron Johnson just crossed a line.

This week, we launched a campaign to get climate change deniers like Senator Johnson to accept the science and take action to curb global warming.

Before the first day of the campaign was over, Senator Johnson responded by writing in an email:

"The League of Conservation Voters is not an organization with a balanced approach to a cleaner environment. They are an extreme left group on an environmental jihad*."*

John, I don't even know where to start. But let's try this:

Tell Senator Johnson to apologize for his offensive language and to stop putting our children's future at risk by opposing action on climate change.

Senator Johnson's rhetoric is extremely offensive and inaccurate on multiple levels, and his determination to block action to cut carbon pollution is even worse.

It's true that we are spending $2 million to put ads on the air in four states across the country -- including Wisconsin -- to call out climate change deniers in Congress. And we did organize 16 successful, constituent-powered rallies on Tuesday at the district offices of climate change deniers like Senator Johnson.

But all we're asking for is that decision-makers in Washington support common-sense action to protect our health, our environment, and our future.

Senator Johnson started attacking us before even seeing our ad, which only points out that:

- He doesn't believe in climate change;
- He has taken a lot of money from the oil and gas industries;
- He has voted against limiting the amount of carbon pollution that power plants can spew into our air.

Watch our ad. If you find it to be as common sense as we do, tell Senator Johnson to apologize for his inflammatory rhetoric and to support action on climate change >>

As a member of Congress, Senator Johnson has the power to do something about the climate crisis before it's too late. But instead he chooses to block environmental initiatives by reasoning that global warming is just "sunspot activity" and carbon pollution "gets sucked down by trees and helps the trees grow."

That's just wrong, John.

It doesn't matter whether you live in Wisconsin, Florida, or New York. We all will have to pay the consequences for the lack of action on climate change in Washington. And Big Oil-backed, climate-denying senators like Ron Johnson are responsible for it.

We can't let him use name calling to distract from the damage he is doing by siding with polluters over people. So that's why we're asking every LCV supporter across the country to help us send Senator Johnson a message today: we expect him to change his stance on climate and we won't back down.

Will you help us reach our goal of 20,000 signatures on our petition telling Senator Johnson to apologize and stop denying climate change?

Thanks for standing with us and speaking out today.

Best,

Thanks Angel, dear Ami --

This is fantastic news.

I'll leave Christian to comment on the details, but my understanding is all translations are verbatim, and the cast list is as set out when we originally discussed.

I'm sure a picture would be useful, both of the President in Profile and anything from the library stocks of the Florence conference.

I don't know the answer to the online question. I do know that we'd like to produce this as a Global Progress pamphlet later, and have our CAP partners translate this at a later stage too. But perhaps we can save this for a discussion after your weekend celebrations as part of a broader conversation?

Thank you so much for making this work. I know this has been an incredibly busy few months for you, and I know the Library Anniversary this weekend is also a huge undertaking, so I'm very grateful for you all for prioritising this.

Best of luck, and speak soon.

The real deadline is nov. 14th but I need to translate the article.

The issue will be out on November 28th, just a week after the 15th anniversary of the Third Way meeting in Florence with the President and Blair. Valls was there too as an aide to president Jospin and Florence of course is Renzi's city.

I really hope this could work.

Subject:	Just announced - LCV's Capital Dinner!

Dear John,

We are delighted to invite you to participate in the League of Conservation Voters' (LCV) Capital Dinner on Wednesday, June 12, 2013 at the Reagan Building and International Trade Center in Washington, DC. LCV's annual Capital Dinner is the premier gathering for the national environmental community, and we ask you to lend your support by serving as a sponsor of this exciting evening.

LCV continues to work with our national network of more than 30 state LCVs and other allies to advance strong policies on climate change and clean energy at the state and federal levels. We will grow our membership base across the country and mobilize supporters to urge leaders to move forward on climate change, while engaging key constituencies such as Latinos and youth. We are urging the Obama administration to build on the progress from their first term by cutting carbon pollution from power plants and rejecting dirty fuels, while pushing for state and local solutions such as renewable energy standards. These efforts are bolstered by our proven track record of winning elections and holding elected leaders accountable for their votes with our National Environmental Scorecard.

Your partnership plays a decisive role in helping LCV and our state league partners seize opportunities, fight threats, and build for the future. We are counting on your support to make this year's Capital Dinner a success. To confirm your participation as a sponsor with a contribution of $5,000 or more and reserve your table, please click here or contact Jonathan_Tracy@lcv.org or (202) 454-4583 by Friday, April 12, 2013 so that we can proudly list your name on the formal invitation. This is a critical year for environmental priorities, so please consider increasing your support and making as generous a donation as possible.

Thank you again for your continued support of LCV's work and your commitment to environmental values. Together we will secure a better future for our planet.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski
President

Georgetown Law and Jesuit Refugee Service/USA will co-host "Legal Challenges Facing Central American Asylum Seekers" on Thursday, July 16, 2015, from 2:00 - 3:30 p.m. on the 12th floor of the Gewirz Student Center, located on the Georgetown Law campus at 120 F Street, NW, Washington, D.C.

In early 2015, Jesuit Refugee Service/USA and 13 Jesuit law schools, including Georgetown Law, launched a partnership to identify and address the legal challenges faced by families and children from Central America seeking protection in the U.S. This event will explore these challenges, and related recommendations, which are documented in the June 2015 report, A Fair Chance for Due Process: Challenges in Legal Protection for Central American Asylum Seekers and Other Vulnerable Migrants.

Subject:	Our Record

Dear John,

When I first ran for State's Attorney in 2002, we won a very competitive election because of an outpouring of grassroots energy around our proactive solutions to challenges like violent crime, recidivism, struggling schools and domestic violence.

We brought members of the community together to tackle these problems:

- We cut the crime rate in half by working with the police and the community to identify suspects and steer at-risk youth to make better decisions than committing crime.
- We rallied the faith community and small businesses to ease the transition back to civilian life for ex-offenders.
- We established an in-school reading volunteer program to help struggling second graders catch up with their peers.
- We dedicated a unit in the State's Attorney's office to domestic violence prosecution and prevention that help put away some of the most violent offenders.

Together we saved lives.

In Congress, I will be a strong leader in the fight to improve education for all of our young people, to expand job opportunities, to raise wages for our families, and to reform our criminal justice system.

But I need your help to communicate our record with voters.

With the most important deadline of this campaign just 30 days away, I am asking you to help me raise $4,000 by the end of today.

Click here to donate $50, $100, or $250

We have done so much good together in the past. Help me bring that approach to Congress. So help us get our message out by making a contribution today.

Thanks for all that you do. This campaign for change cannot be won without you.

Dear Project New West Subscriber,

We have been commissioned by Americans For a Fair Democracy, a new Project New West subscriber, to conduct research and testing with Celinda Lake of Lake Research Partners and Dr. Drew Westen, author of The Political Brain, on media that has been developed to detoxify race in an electoral and post-electoral environment. With a team of social scientists led by Dr. Westen, they have completed the most sophisticated testing yet done on political and nonpolitical ads of this sort, testing both people's conscious and unconscious responses to the ads and their potential electoral impact. The testing was aimed particularly at non-college-educated white voters over 50.

Please join us for a webinar/phone briefing of this research and paid media. Two briefings, one for our independent subscribers and one for our candidate/coordinated subscribers, will be conducted:

IE Briefing: Friday Oct. 24th, 11am EDT/ 8am PDT
Coordinated Briefing: TBD, most likely will occur Sat. Oct. 25th. Details will be sent soon.

Lexington Herald-Leader: "Rand Paul predicts 'big' Republican wave in November elections"

By Sam Youngman

October 11, 2014

U.S. Sen. Rand Paul took a break from his Lexington weekend to offer some free advice to Kentucky media who sponsored a poll showing U.S. Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell trailing Democrat Alison Lundergan Grimes.

"I'd re-check it if I were y'all, because I think you're probably an outlier," Paul said.

In an interview Saturday morning before he headed to Commonwealth Stadium for the Kentucky Wildcats football game, Paul voiced confidence that McConnell will win in November and took a few swipes at Grimes and Bill and Hillary Clinton.

Joining in on the media and Republican onslaught over Grimes' recent refusal to tell the Louisville Courier-Journal's editorial board whether she voted for President Barack Obama, Paul called Grimes' evasion "bizarre" and "really unbelievable."

"Everybody knows who she voted for," Paul said. "She knows who she voted for, and she's not going to tell us, and I think that's an unacceptable answer. I think she still could have a chance when she acknowledges it, but it just shows you how unpopular the leader of her party is and how unpopular her party is nationally."

Grimes spokesman Preston Maddock replied, "What's really bizarre is that Rand Paul has had an impossible time explaining why he supports Mitch McConnell in this race."

Paul also took aim at the Clintons, something he does with regularity as he continues to consider a 2016 run for the White House. Paul has been intensely critical of Hillary Clinton's tenure as secretary of state, specifically how her department responded to a terrorist attack on the U.S. Embassy in Benghazi, Libya.

When asked whether he thought Hillary Clinton would be of help to Grimes when she comes to the state to campaign Wednesday, Paul argued that the popularity of the Clintons in Kentucky has been overstated.

"I think they've fooled themselves on the whole popularity of the Clintons in Kentucky," Paul said. "You know Clinton won Kentucky when there were three candidates in the race."

Bill Clinton won Kentucky in 1992 with 45 percent over former President George H.W. Bush and Ross Perot. In 1996, Clinton won the state with about 46 percent of the vote over Perot and former Kansas Sen. Bob Dole.

"I don't think that really means he's that popular," Paul said. "I think they've fooled themselves to think that he — or she — will help Alison in the end."

Mary Rutherford Jennings, a spokeswoman for the pro-Hillary Clinton super PAC Correct the Record, said Saturday that "the only one who's fooled himself is Rand Paul thinking Americans are interested in taking a step backward with his extremist policies. Hillary Clinton's focus on moving our country forward is what makes Americans, and Kentuckians, so excited about her."

In May, the Herald-Leader, along with the Courier-Journal, WHAS-TV and WKYT-TV, polled a hypothetical showdown between Paul and Clinton and found Paul leading the former secretary of state 48 percent to 44 percent.

Paul, who is drawing increasingly larger media crowds as he continues his tour of states that hold early contests in presidential races, making stops to help Republicans along the way, said he anticipates a "big" Republican wave this year, similar to what Republicans enjoyed in 2010 in what Obama later referred to as a "shellacking."

"I think the wind is at our back," Paul said. "We're a fairly evenly divided country, and so sometimes if the wind's blowing strongly at the end you can pick up quite a few seats, sometimes even more than anybody predicts."

He continued: "My sense is it's going to be big, and that we are going to take over the Senate. But we're not taking anything for granted. I'm trying to help as many candidates as I can get across the finish line."

Paul's travel schedule is hectic. On Friday, he took in the horse races at Keeneland after meeting with community leaders in Ferguson, Mo. On Saturday, he attended the football game as part of the University of Kentucky's parents' weekend. Two of the senator's sons attend UK.

A relative by marriage, Jesse Benton, was Paul's campaign manager during his successful 2010 race, but resigned as McConnell's campaign chief in late August after his name was connected to a bribery scandal in the closing days of the 2012 Iowa presidential caucuses.

"I don't really have any comment on that," Paul said. "He's been a good friend and he's married to my niece, and I'm supportive of him, and I believe that everything will work out in the end."

McConnell and a number of other top Republicans in the state are scheduled to gather in Bowling Green on Sunday for Paul's "Barnburner and BBQ" event, a fundraiser for the Rand Paul Victory Committee.

Paul reiterated that he is still mulling a White House run, with a spring decision likely.

The senator said that even as he travels around the country building support and trying to grow the Republican Party's brand, he gets back to Kentucky almost every weekend and feels confident he will win his Senate re-election bid regardless of whether he pursues the presidency.

"I haven't sensed any real problems with people thinking I'm not doing a good job," Paul said.

KFMB-AM: "Heckler interrupts Hillary Clinton speech"

By Shannon Handy

October 12, 2014, 9:13 p.m. EDT

SAN DIEGO (CBS 8) - Hillary Clinton visits San Diego but is rudely welcomed by a heckler who interrupts her speech.

Clinton was in San Diego Sunday to address the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics. Hundreds lined up at the Convention Center to see the former first lady and secretary of state.

Hillary Clinton was just minutes into her talk Sunday when someone in the 3,000 plus crowd began to heckle her using a bullhorn. Without flinching, the former secretary of state made a joke and moved on.

"You know, there are some people who miss important developmental stages," Clinton said.

Clinton, who spoke for nearly 30 minutes, was at the annual conference to promote early literacy. She referred to her daughter Chelsea and her first granddaughter born just two weeks ago.

"When I look into the eyes of my baby granddaughter, that's what I see, and I'm so grateful," she said.

Clinton commended the room full of pediatricians, and their role in making sure government doesn't get in the way of medical care for children.

"Your letter to Washington really makes clear the stakes of this -- congress must not gamble with our children's future," Clinton said.

Attendees we spoke with were impressed with her words.

One woman said, "She talked very naturally, and she reached out to everybody as a professional, as a politician and as a grandmother...new grandmother. I think that touched our hearts."

Another attendee said, "I thought it was spectacular, just spectacular. She did phenomenal job in both the political side of things, and the reading literacy emphasis. I thought she did a spectacular job."

San Diego Union-Tribune: "Hillary Clinton says no iPad time for babies"

By Peter Sullivan

Hillary Clinton was heckled by a man with a bullhorn at a speech in San Diego late Sunday.

The man sounded an alarm on the device in the middle of Clinton's speech to the American Academy of Pediatrics. Clinton flinched and stopped speaking as the shouting man was quickly taken away by security.

Clinton, who was speaking about early childhood development, came back with a joke.

"You know there are some people who miss important developmental stages," she said.

It is not clear what the man was shouting about.

Clinton announced a new partnership between the Clinton Foundation's "Too Small to Fail" program and the Academy to provide toolkits for doctors to encourage parents to read to their children from an early age.

"As we have learned in the last 15 years, scientists can literally watch the synapses and the neurons firing when parents are reading and talking with children from their very earliest days," Clinton said, according to the San Diego Union-Tribune.

"We don't have enough research, but I think what we are learning is that the earliest years before a child is 2, televisions, iPads and screens are no substitute for actual parent-child interactions like talking, reading and singing," she added.

Hillary Clinton lent encouragement Sunday to pediatricians who are trying to promote parents reading to children, while weighing in on the debate over how much electronic screen time is healthy for infants and toddlers.

At the San Diego Convention Center, Clinton announced the distribution of an early literacy tool kit to help promote the verbal development of young children. The effort capitalizes on the trusted role of pediatricians in encouraging parents to read out loud, chat freely and even sing more with their young children from day one. The tool kits will be shared with 62,000 members of the American Academy of Pediatrics, which is holding a conference in San Diego this week.

“As we have learned in the last 15 years, scientists can literally watch the synapses and the neurons firing when parents are reading and talking with children from their very earliest days,” said Clinton, a former U.S. Secretary of State. The Academy of Pediatrics touched off a national debate about the use of electronic devices by young children in June when it recommended no TV or electronic screen time for children under the age of 2, and less than two hours for older children.

Clinton, the author of “It Takes a Village: And Other Lessons Children Teach Us” and “Dear Socks, Dear Buddy: Kids’ Letters to Their First Pets,” embraced those concerns during extended comments about the “word gap” among children whose vocabulary development falters in early life.

“Now technology is of course changing how Americans read and in many ways it is opening up exciting new avenues for learning,” Clinton said. “We don’t have enough research, but I think what we are learning is that the earliest years before a child is 2, televisions, iPads and screens are no substitute for actual parent-child interactions like talking, reading and singing.”

The academy has joined forces on literacy development with the Bill, Hillary and Chelsea Clinton Foundation and Next Generation, the California-based policy group on Climate change and childhood issues. Their initiative, dubbed “Too Small to Fail,” responds to a growing body of research highlighting language sensitivity starting in infancy.

Speaking for nearly 30 minutes on stage without a Teleprompter or notes, Clinton touched on health care policy milestones of the 1990s, including the defeat of her own health care reform initiative as First Lady.

Clinton brushed off a jarring interruption by a man with a megaphone and siren who was escorted out of the room.

“You know there are some people who miss important developmental stages,” she said to applause.

Among those in the audience, Clinton’s prospects as a possible presidential candidate in 2016 were on almost everyone’s mind.

“I think they would be lying if they weren’t interested,” said Maria Fung, a Boston-area pediatrician in her mid-30s.

Beth Pollard, a history professor at San Diego State University, heard notes of politicking in Clinton’s remarks.

“She started to talk about the erosion in our leaders and people working hard to make ends meet,” said Pollard, who watched with her father, a pediatrician, and her own 7-year-old daughter. “She was beginning to distance herself from this administration.”

New York Times: First Draft: “Midterm Results Could Speed a Possible Clinton Announcement”

By Amy Chozick

October 13, 2014, 7:20 a.m. EDT

Hillary Rodham Clinton may not have the luxury of waiting until early next year to declare her intentions to run for president in 2016.

If Democrats lose control of the Senate in the midterm elections, the party may need to quickly pivot to the presidential campaign, several people close to Mrs. Clinton said.

The Democratic Party would look to Mrs. Clinton “as its Noah’s ark,” a vessel on which voters and donors could channel their enthusiasm and frustration, said one of these people, who could discuss the internal deliberations only on the condition of anonymity.

Until recently, Mrs. Clinton was expected to announce around Feb. 15, 2015, which would give her campaign plenty of time to staff up and raise money.

But that timing is now being reconsidered as Democrats contemplate a scenario in which they suffer significant losses.

Mrs. Clinton could feel pressure to at least file the requisite paperwork to start an exploratory committee before the end of this year. The committee would allow her to start to raise money, and she could still delay an official announcement until early next year.

Mrs. Clinton has a packed schedule this week, campaigning for Democratic candidates in Colorado, Kentucky, Michigan and Nevada.

Bloomberg: "Julian Castro Does Not Want to be President, Now or 'Ever'"

By Steven Yaccino

October 12, 2014, 12:04 p.m. EDT

[Subtitle:] The 40-year-old rising star in the Democratic Party was unequivocal on the question of a White House bid.

Julian Castro, a rising star in the Democratic Party, dismissed speculation on Sunday that he is being groomed for the White House, saying he had no plans to run for president – "probably ever."

"I guarantee you I'm not going to run for president," he said in an interview with ABC's "This Week" that aired Sunday morning.

"I have never woken up in the morning and seen in my future, when I look in the mirror, and said, 'Oh, I think I could be president,'" Castro added.

Castro left his job as the mayor of San Antonio to work as head of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development earlier this year. He's been traversing the country in recent months, meeting with state and local housing officials, and lending a hand to Democratic candidates like Senator Mark Begich, who is trailing his Republican challenger in Alaska.

On Sunday, Castro also tried to dampen rumors that he will be on the short list of possible running mates for Hillary Clinton if she decides to run for president in 2016.

"I don't believe that I'm going to be vice president," he said, adding that he planned to stay in Washington until Obama's term ends, then return to Texas.

All of this isn't to say that Castro hasn't thought about higher office. When asked if he would be interested in become the executive of his home state, Castro finally gave the calculated non-answer you'd expect from a young, ambitious politician.

"There were definitely mornings where I work up and wished there was a different governor of Texas, that's fair to say," he said. "I'm 40 years old right now, and so I feel like I have a lot of time to figure out where the opportunities are."

Washington Post blog: Reliable Source: "Polish filmmaker Agnieszka Holland says she hopes Hillary Clinton becomes president"

By Helena Andrews

October 13, 2014, 8:38 a.m. EDT

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

On Friday night, Oscar-nominated Polish filmmaker Agnieszka Holland made a pit stop in Washington, taking a tiny break from directing two episodes of Netflix's "House of Cards" in Baltimore.

Speaking at an event at the Polish ambassador's residence in Forest Hills, the semi-suburban Northwest D.C. neighborhood that many foreign diplomats call home, Holland wouldn't reveal too much about the show, of course. But she did call out one of Ambassador Ryszard Schnepf's famous neighbors.

When asked if she thought calculating first lady Claire Underwood, the series' close approximation of Lady Macbeth, might make a run for president in seasons to come, Holland said that television "often predicts real life," adding that she hoped former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton would one day be president. The Clintons have a home around the corner, on Whitehaven Street.

The "Cards" production is not Holland's first time filming in Baltimore. She directed five episodes of David Simon's "The Wire" there.

In 1992, Holland's Holocaust film, "Europa, Europa," was nominated for an Academy Award.

"She's maybe the most political filmmaker they're having direct 'House of Cards,' " said Washington-based filmmaker Aviva Kempner, who plans to film a documentary on Holland's career.

The Daily Beast: "How Red-State Democrats Can Throw Obama Under the Bus"

By Michael Tomasky

October 12, 2014

[Subtitle:] Let's be blunt: Democratic Senate candidates in red states—like Alison Lundergan Grimes in Kentucky—need to say 'Barack who?' But doing so can look craven, or it can be crafty.

Monday night's a big night in this campaign season. In Kentucky, Alison Lundergan Grimes gets her one shot at Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell in a debate. I know most of the smart people have written the Democrat off. But a major Kentucky poll last week put her up two points. And she seems to be drawing big and enthusiastic crowds. And McConnell keeps making mistakes. In other words, there's oxygen.

Grimes is going to hit her themes—that McConnell hasn't delivered jobs to the state and that he's a big part of the Washington problem. McConnell will hit his—that GrimesObama isObama aObama shiftyObama DemocratObama by the way did I mention this guy Obama? But as we all know, if there ever is a clear victory in any of these debates, it usually come down to a moment, one good or bad moment that gets replayed over and over on local TV news and masticated on the state's political radio shows. And for Grimes, unless she has a great putdown stocked away she's been working on, fate has recently decreed what that moment is likely to be.

As you should know by now, Grimes has been refusing to say whether she voted for President Obama. It's been embarrassing. Chuck Todd even said she'd "disqualified herself." That's a bit over the top, but it was plenty bad. And of course she is going to be asked this question on Monday night, and of course everyone is going to be waiting, and of course she is going to have to be ready.

I've been a reporter covering these things. In 2000, when Hillary Clinton was debating Rick Lazio in Buffalo, we all knew that she was only partially debating Lazio. She was also debating Tim Russert, the moderator who had been a Javert-like figure in his capacity as Meet the Press host vis-à-vis the Clintons and the Lewinsky scandal. So all the reporters gathered in the studio of Buffalo's public television station that September night were waiting for the moment when Russert would hit Hillary with the Monica question.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

When it happened, interestingly, it was Russert, not Hillary, who blew it. He asked her if she regretted “misleading the American people” that first morning she went on the Today show to talk about the “vast right-wing conspiracy” out to get Bill. But she believed what she was saying at the time, and everyone accepted that. So Russert’s over-aggressive question helped Clinton, as did Lazio’s subsequent pushiness.

Grimes can’t count on that. She will likely get a tough but fair and straightforward question: i.e., Why won’t you answer the question? You’re a Democrat, what are you ashamed of? And at that moment—that pivotal moment in her career and life, and potentially that crucial moment for the contemporary Democratic Party and indeed for Obama himself, inasmuch as how Grimes handles the moment could help decide whether Obama has to deal with Harry Reid or McConnell for the last two years of his public life—what must she do?

The temptation here for people like me is to insist that she should stand up and say “you’re damn right I did,” and Obamacare this and Kynect that. I’d love for her to say that, but alas the reality is such these days that the opposite might be better. All the McConnell campaign wants at this point is a three-second clip of her saying, “OK, maybe I did vote for him, but...” That would be edited down to “I did vote for him” and replayed nine jillion times in attack ads.

One can see the argument that she shouldn’t give McConnell the satisfaction of having that clip. So maybe she has to throw the president under the bus. Obama got 41 percent of the vote in Kentucky in 2008, and 38 percent in 2012. His approval rating right now is 30 percent. Behind numbers like that, it’s kind of hard for her to say, “You’re damn right I did.” But what exactly should she say?

Here we arrive at what I believe to be a central tenet of campaigning that lots of candidates forget when they’re under the klieg lights: When you have to deal with an uncomfortable reality, you can do it in a way that suggests to voters that you’re weak and waffle-ish, or you can do it a way that makes you look like you have “character.”

What would character mean in this case? It means answering the question in a way that reduces it to the importance it deserves. Because it’s an unimportant question. We all know Grimes voted for Obama. Of course she did. She’s a Democratic office-holder. There is a way for her to acknowledge this winkingly without really admitting it while saying to voters, “Isn’t this whole thing kind of ridiculous?” That’s the best play she has: Turn the whole question into an indictment of McConnell and the gotcha media and the whole electoral process. This was done masterfully by Newt Gingrich in the debate before the South Carolina primary. I was in that hall. The rage of the crowd—on his behalf, as he answered CNN’s John King’s question about his alleged open marriage, was as palpable as anything I’ve ever felt.

Gingrich emerged that night looking bigger than King, bigger than everyone on stage, and he won the primary. Granted, voters tend to see the personal life as more off limits. But if Grimes can summon some outrage within her that’s something like what Newt did that night, she can take the Obama question out of the conversation once and for all.

I think the race for who the Democratic nominee will be should be decided by the voters, not by a handful of party elites. If you agree, please sign my petition with Democracy for America calling on all Democratic superdelegates to pledge right now that they will support the candidate who wins the popular vote.<http://act.democracyforamerica.com/sign/RobertReichSuperdelegates/?t=1&akid=7396.2141088.--fppZ>

This isn't the first time that Democrats have raised concerns over the superdelegate system.

In 2008, when the race between Barack Obama and Hillary Clinton was at its closest, some people thought that superdelegates would be able change the results of the nomination process.

My friends at Democracy for America took action then as well. In 2008, more than 60,000 DFA members signed and delivered a petition to Democratic Party leadership asking superdelegates not to overturn the will of the voters. And that year, they didn't. Most superdelegates either changed their support or waited to choose a side until after Obama won the majority of delegates pledged through the primary process.

Unfortunately, the party failed to reform this unfair and undemocratic part of the nomination process in the years since President Obama was elected. Now, we're facing another potential crisis in the party.

If supporters of either candidate walk away from this process feeling cheated because party insiders nullified their votes, it will be impossible to put together a winning coalition in November.

Holding on to the White House in 2016 is extremely important. We can't afford to let party elites jeopardize that by ignoring the will of the voters. Join me and DFA in telling superdelegates to pledge to support the popularly-elected winner of the nomination now.<http://act.democracyforamerica.com/sign/RobertReichSuperdelegates/?t=2&akid=7396.2141088.--fppZ>

NEW WAY FOR NEW JERSEY
PHIL MURPHY, CHAIR

John --

My mom was a secretary. My dad never graduated high school and took any job he thought could help support our family -- even working as a paid pallbearer.

They taught me the importance of hard work and a good education, and I remember these values by keeping a photo beside my desk of my mother meeting President John F. Kennedy.

Throughout my life, I've worked to honor my parents, and the spirit of Kennedy's legacy, by giving back to the community through efforts that bring people together.

That's what New Way for New Jersey, and this new video, is all about. I hope you'll take a moment to watch and share it with your friends and family:

I built a successful career by learning how economies grow and create jobs. I've led charities to help troubled teens and domestic abuse survivors, and these organizations have changed thousands of lives for the better.

I've started New Way for New Jersey because I know if you look for answers in the same old places, you'll just end up with the same old problems.

Let's get started building a better tomorrow for New Jersey families -- watch and share the video:

Dear Robby

Thanks for the update. I think this makes sense - though I would might move Analytical up to the extent it is a partner with Technology, it's newer for her and it is important to understand how it reshapes traditional campaign strategy/planning.

She has not reverted yet on the days I sent but I think the process of first doing conceptual issues as you have here works really well for her. She likes to get smart on issues/areas/mechanics and then act and so this approach plays to her strengths.

I would move staffing to be after this process as she will better understand the staffing she will need to meet the objectives after these discussions, which would ideally would be right after the election. Then I would shift to what it means to staff for what she will more deeply understand with this context.

best.

Check out our latest blog post, Restoring a Watershed One Community at a Time by Alicia Neal. In today's post, Alicia talks about how an EPA Small Grant funded a rain garden which not only helped to offset runoff pollution and mitigate floods in the Lower Ninth Ward of New Orleans, but also brought together community members to reconnect after the damage of Hurricane Katrina.

Also, check out our new Climate Justice in Action Series , which focuses on reframing the conversation on climate change to include environmental justice issues. Read our kickoff post featuring a video from Administrator McCarthy, and contribute success stories from your local area on our interactive climate justice map. In the most recent post in the series, Sherrell Dorsey discusses the positive, transformative impact that community planning and an HUD grant have had on Bridgeport, a low-income community which was further devastated by Hurricane Sandy.

NEA President: Obama's budget keeps America moving forward

Students take back seat in House spending proposal

WASHINGTON— President Barack Obama today released his Fiscal-Year 2012 budget, making the tough choice to focus scarce financial resources on education. His budget comes on the heels of a proposal by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Hal Rogers (R-KY) to make draconian budget cuts in the FY 2011 Continuing Resolution Obama requested.

"Money is tight in every American household," said NEA President Dennis Van Roekel. "In tough economic times, it's reassuring that President Obama continues to make education a national priority by calling for important investments in quality public education to keep America moving forward. Reckless cuts, like those proposed by the House Appropriations Committee Chairman, would dash the dreams of countless American students and stall the engine that drives our economy. We urge House Republicans to rethink their approach and ensure that our students can 'out-innovate, out-build and out-compete' the world."

Rogers is seeking deep budget cuts to the tune of $100 billion in the FY 11 Continuing Resolution that President Obama requested, effectively gutting special education grants to local school districts, Head Start for children and Pell Grants to disadvantaged college students, among other proven programs.

The proposed cuts would put additional strain on states' budgets already cut to the bone. Wisconsin faces a two-year budget deficit of $3.6 billion. Ellsworth Community School District in Wisconsin is slashing 24 of its 150 school personnel positions to save $1.1 million. Educators and students already are feeling the economic pinch.

One of the educators not returning to school next year is Shelly Moore, a 13-year English and drama high school teacher at Ellsworth Community High School. Moore teaches grades 9-12. She also is the school's only Advanced Placement instructor. Moore took her message to Congress last week, pleading with lawmakers to put students first and reminding them that investing in education is the right thing to do for students, communities and the nation.

"Policymakers need to make tough choices to restore fiscal discipline, but we hope they do not jeopardize our students' education, which is tied to all of our futures," said Van Roekel. "How many working families will see their children's future vanish before their eyes if one wing of the House Republican caucus has its way?"

NEA is urging Congress to oppose any proposals that put the nation at great risk by decimating public education and other programs that ensure a competitive workforce and future economic vitality. "We know that there is a diversity of opinion within the House of Representatives about our national budget priorities," said Van Roekel. "We encourage House leaders to allow for a full debate and hope that a majority of the House will support investments that support students and our country's progress."

John --

There's only one way to wake up the morning after an election -- with no regrets.

There's only one way to be sure that's how you wake up on November 3rd: giving everything you've got in the last five days.

That's why I'm out there day after day, doing exactly what you're doing -- talking to voters.

These kinds of conversations are the most effective thing we can do in a campaign -- you know it. I know it. They're how we brought change to this country after years of Republican malarkey. They're how we won the White House.

I know what you're doing is working because, when I'm on the road or the President's on the road, the crowds are fired up and ready to go. I'm seeing positive signs everywhere, and millions of our supporters -- including tens of thousands who have never voted before in a midterm election -- are voting early.

But we have less than a week left, and we need everyone to dig deep.

Because none of us is alone in this work, Organizing for America is pairing every grassroots donor who gives this week with another individual giving the same amount. All of us want to make an impact in these final five days, and this is a way to double it.

Please chip in $3 or more right now.

I'd never bet against this movement.

You're out there week after week, defying expectations. You knock on doors day after day. You make calls night after night.

Someone told me she couldn't believe that Organizing for America was reaching out to 7 million voters this week, and I told her that she shouldn't be surprised. You don't wait for the moment to come to you, you go out and seize it. Just Tuesday night I was in New York talking with a roomful of volunteers who were making calls and getting out the vote -- and it was a powerful thing to witness.

But we can't let up now.

There are campaign offices out there that need to add extra phone lines because they're packed with volunteers ready to make calls. There are volunteers ready to go canvass, but they need flyers to go door to door. There are kids on college campuses working to get their classmates to vote, and they need our help, too.

I don't want to let any of them down -- not now, not when we're so close.

So I need you to join another supporter and commit to this work, together.

Please donate $3 or more today:

https://donate.barackobama.com/NoRegrets

Thanks for all you do,

Joe Biden

Democrat for Congress

Friends,

This is such a special time of year: more time with friends and family and the chance to come together around the table to share a holiday meal. For most of us, the holidays are a time of joy and celebration but for our neighbors struggling with hunger, it's often a time of pain and stress.

Food insecurity is something that most of us don't think about everyday, but it quietly affects people of all ages across the nation throughout the year and is most poignant at the holidays. The Northern Illinois Food Bank reports that nearly 600,000 people in Northern Illinois rely on food pantries and meal programs to feed themselves and their families throughout the year. Most are families with at least one working member of the household. Each day, they have to make the tough choice between paying for food or rent, heat, medicine and other essentials.

Our Congressional campaign has made it a priority to shine a spotlight on the year-round need for food security in our communities. Our on-going food drive to assist 10th Congressional District food pantries continues. Join us by donating non-perishable, non-expired food donations at Nancy Rotering for Congress Headquarters.

Donations are accepted at campaign headquarters at 1910 First Street, Suite 1S, Highland Park, Monday through Friday, 10:00am – 7:00pm and Saturday from 11:00am – 4:00pm. Campaign staff and community volunteers transport the food to district pantries.

Use this link for more information, to volunteer or to share your ideas about how to fight hunger.

As a Mayor, I have championed the issue, partnering with area organizations to take action and will continue to do so. Parents should not have to worry about a sending a hungry child to school and seniors should not have to wonder when they will have access to a nutritious meal.

With your continued help, we can deliver food – and hope for a brighter future to our most vulnerable neighbors now and year-round.

Sincerely,

Nancy

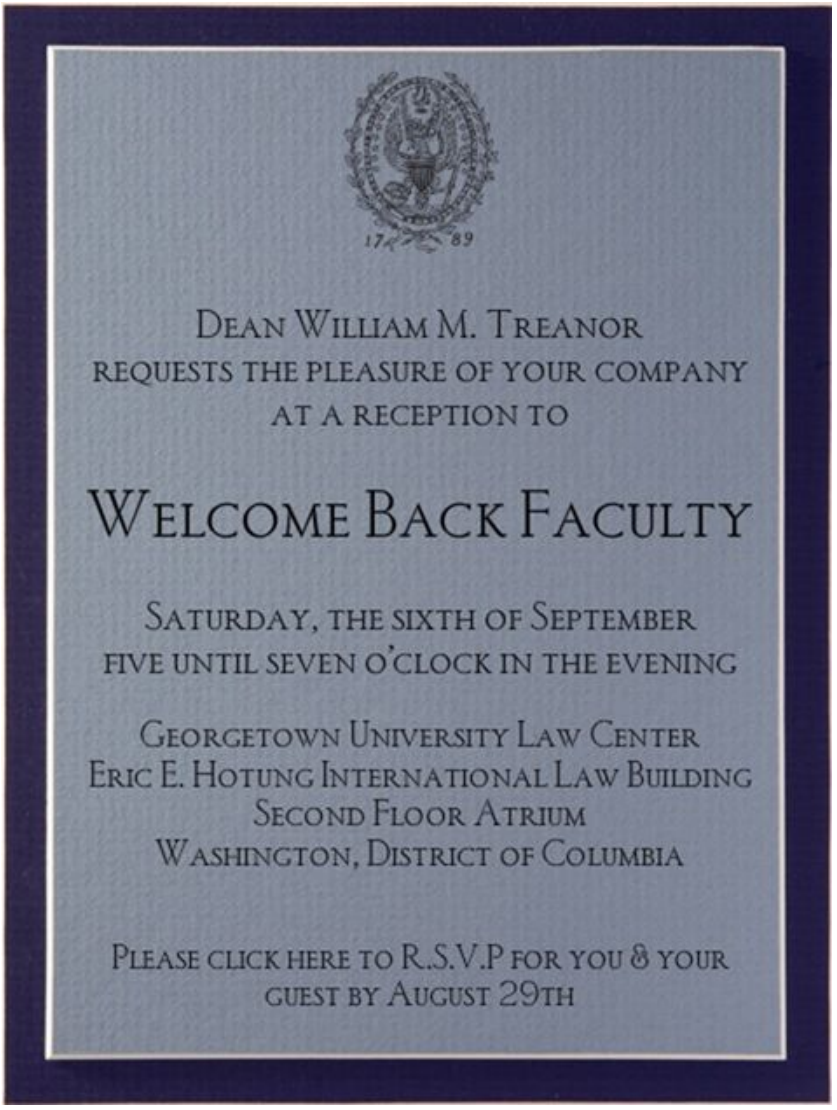
HRC wants to do a tweet on Puerto Rico regarding the debt crisis (see attached memo if you want brief background on the issue).

Our goal with the tweet is to be empathetic to Puerto Ricans, make clear we are in this together b/c their health and well-being is ours and b/c many Americans hold PR municipal bonds as part of their retirement portfolios. We don't want to suggest a bailout, but we do want to suggest that we should partner to solve the problem



SUGGESTED tweet (in need of Lauren's magic and 3 characters over):

Puerto Rico's debt crisis is not theirs alone. We must partner to find smart solutions to stabilize & grow PR's economy and help people thrive.

We'll come back with a list but I would like Marc to have a chance to do table setting memos before we do a meeting.

So hold on this for a bit until he has a chance to do that and we all then can get on the phone and add to things.

Catholics United Condemns NRCC Effort to Defeat Pro-life House Dems

NRCC shamelessly uses abortion issue to mislead voters

Washington, DC – The social justice group Catholics United is denouncing a new Web site sponsored by the National Republican Congressional Committee aimed at defeating 15 House Democrats who voted for final passage of the health care reform bill. The Web site falsely claims that the new health care law funds abortion and suggests that Congressman Bart Stupak (MI-1), the leader of the Democratic pro-life caucus, sold out his principles by voting for health care reform. Readers of the site are asked to sign a petition that reads, "Tell the Stupak Sellouts that the federal funding of abortion is wrong." This generalized statement is not supported with any corroborating evidence and suggests that the true intention of the NRCC is to use the life issue for political gain. Multiple news outlets and policy experts have verified that that the new health care reform law does not include federal funding of elective abortion.

"The Republican Party has once again demonstrated that it is more concerned with using the abortion issue for its partisan interests than it is in having a serious conversation about what constitutes a culture of life," said Chris Korzen, executive director of Catholics United. "Members of Congress who voted for health care reform should be commended for expanding affordable health care to 32 million uninsured Americans and providing vulnerable pregnant women with additional support, all while maintaining the existing ban on federal funding of abortion."

In the lead-up to the final health care vote, Catholics United ran "Health care reform is pro-life" ads in 5 congressional districts whose representative is now being targeted by NRCC,. These representatives are Chris Carney (PA-10), Kathy Dahlkemper (PA-3), Joe Donnelly (IN-2), Steve Driehaus (OH-1) and Tom Perriello (VA-5). After the vote, Catholics United ran "Thank you" ads for two of the members of Congress who voted for health care reform and are now NRCC targets. These representatives are Chris Carney (PA-10) and Tom Perriello (VA-5).

Subject: Short Iowa data update

Hey everyone,

I wanted to give a quick update.

Over the course of the weekend, we've been conducting analytics tracking calls to check in on our models and see if we need to make any last minute adjustments. Though we are not changing our Friday forecast of a four point lead, I wanted to update you on the calls we have conducted since then.

The weekend data has been encouraging -- voters are telling us that they support us at higher rates than we expected and indicate slightly more enthusiasm and caucus awareness than Sanders supporters. However, the sample from the last two days is too small to change the topline.

And none of this is to say that Monday will not be extremely competitive (it will be) nor that the caucus process is still inherently favorable to a candidate like Sanders who appeals to the activist base (it still is), but I wanted to share that the limited recent data has been promising.

I'm going to set up a call for later today to discuss. In the meantime, please let me know if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Hello John,

Attached please find the cash flow budget through 2017.

A few things to note:

1. This budget includes the hiring planned for 2015 as planned. Therefore, any changes would be deletions, not additions.
2. The lowest monthly balance is $477k in November.
3. The income assumptions are, I believe, conservative.

Our contract CFO thinks this looks good and recommends we move forward, but I'm eager to hear your reactions. Please let me know what you think — I'm around all weekend @ 202.549.3452

Best,
Heather

To close the loop here, HRC will tweet this as soon as President Obama concludes his remarks this evening, followed by this statement, which I will circulate to our press list and anyone who asks. HRC will get the question tomorrow evening when she sits on stage with Walter Isaacson at an event for the New York Historical Society.

Huma/Dan/Ethan, anything to add?

Tweet
"Thanks to President Obama for taking action on immigration in the face of inaction. Now let's turn to permanent bipartisan reform."

Statement
I support the President's decision to begin fixing our broken immigration system and focus finite resources on deporting felons rather than families. I was hopeful that the bipartisan bill passed by the Senate in 2013 would spur the House of Representatives to act, but they refused even to advance an alternative. Their abdication of responsibility paved the way for this executive action, which follows established precedent from Presidents of both parties going back 70 years. But, only Congress can finish the job by passing permanent bipartisan reform that keeps families together, treats everyone with dignity and compassion, upholds the rule of law, protects our borders and national security, and brings millions of hard-working people out of the shadows and into the formal economy so they can pay taxes and contribute to our nation's prosperity. Our disagreements on this important issue may grow heated at times, but I am confident that people of good will and good faith can yet find common ground. We should never forget that we're not discussing abstract statistics – we're talking about real families with real experiences. We're talking about parents lying awake at night afraid of a knock on the door that could tear their families apart, people who love this country, work hard, and want nothing more than a chance to contribute to the community and build better lives for themselves and their children.

Below were Wendy's thoughts on the polling list memo Robby prepared.

In particularly in asking her how she would do branding, I asked if she could ride any polling that was done by team - she asked the nature of that polling before she could opine and I shared his polling list memo ($2.1M) one.

Cheryl,

I wanted to give you immediate reaction to the polling and research materials you sent yesterday.

At a high-level, I believe the plan that Robby has outlined is robust and appropriate to an ongoing polling approach. Additionally, I believe it can have utility from a brand positioning and tracking perspective. I see the quantitative polling piece as an ongoing tracker that will allow us to understand results on key imagery metrics that will inform ongoing work.

That said, there are particular aspects I have questions around.

1. While I believe in the mix of online and telephone surveying, I question how representative the home phone population are to our necessary target reach. Additionally, we should think hard about polling calls to mobile phones, not sure how socially acceptable that is. As a point of reference, Coke's continuous tracking survey fielded 365 days a year is all handled online. As a point of input I have asked a friend at AT&T for home phone penetration and attrition numbers so we can better consider.

2. I think the ongoing online discussion boards are a great idea. I have this in place and use it often with a firm called Communispace -- I had mentioned this when we spoke. I'd be interested in understanding the recommended firm for this and having a dialog around the methodology.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

3. For the qualitative groups, I would really like to engage/lead these, the methodology, the desired outcomes, the firm that would lead, etc. These will be material to brand positioning and there's a great opportunity to not duplicate efforts.

4. I'd also seek involvement in the engagement of an analytics firm. The materials indicate Blue Labs. I'm familiar with Bluefin Labs which is an exceptional analytics firm. Not sure if this is the same. More broadly, among our analytics deliverables we should be able to tie the movement in key attributes/imagery to likelihood to vote. This is a key need of the analytics model which can then be tracked continuously through the polling.

5. I recognize that sub groupings will follow this initial push out. That said, understanding multicultural voters -- unacculturated, acculturated and bi-cultural Hispanics, African Americans and multicultural Millennials as a starting point -- will be important. Also other clusters are certain to materialize -- women/Moms, community activists, youth/millennial, etc. We will want this understanding post exploratory to truly inform actions/content once a campaign is underway.

6. The media consultant at GMMB appears to be an earned media expert (vs paid). Would want to confirm this. I am familiar with GMMB with my work with the American Beverage Association, they've done a good job there. On paid media I would want to leverage a general market media firm.

7. On the handful of mentions RE branding and design (website, etc) I agree with the input -- eg branding's role. That said we'll want to lift the role of branding to overarch all decisions and outputs under the moniker of Everything Communicates. So being on-brand will be critical and a starting point for everything we do and execute.

8. On the production of any materials logo/mark, exploratory or announcement videos, website development and all associated content, I would want to lead these aspects. I believe the exploratory materials will be judged as the equivalent of announcement materials. They must set the tone, create momentum, be shareworthy... I could keep going. They're really important. $45k for videos is a bit tight in my mind, but again, we can be creative on this.

9. A final thought on research and measurement. As a basis we need to be asking all of these questions against "the ideal leader" and then in reference to our candidate. The qualitative learning on the ideal candidate and our candidate starting point informs the ongoing imagery that the polling would track which informs our messaging and content adjustments in realtime.

10. Ok, I lied, now a real final thought. One area of exploratory research we need is to understand the role and importance of a movement. Change was a movement and BO became the leader of that movement. On our discovery we need to probe for this in terms of what the ideal candidate represents and the learnings around voters mood, desires, actions wanted, etc. and then spend time thinking about the packaging of the position and whether it can/should be a movement. Movements are important and welcomed by Millennials particularly. There is something for us to truly understand and potentially leverage in a big way, IF the data supports. This also helps to deflect the negativity toward her versus the movement. It's an interesting strategy but again has to be authentically true of her/her agenda.

I really look forward to engaging directly with Robby. I believe we are complementary in talent set and can create a win/win approach (and outcome) together. I like/support his thinking in these documents.

I owe you email 2 on the communication/cadence for me here that I know will inform the timing of my meeting with Robby.

Working on that shortly.

Thanks. Wendy

Subject: GEI Call for Proposals: Funds for Scholarship Related to the Environment

Dear Colleagues:

The Georgetown Environment Initiative (GEI) is pleased to announce the competition for funds to support scholarship related to the environment.

To bolster academic work related to the environment, the University is providing funds to support faculty scholarship made possible through a generous gift to the GEI. Managed by the GEI steering committee using a competitive award process, aims are to build the capacity to define and engage compelling questions related to environment and help shape the conditions society requires to use such knowledge well.

Three categories of grants will be funded:

- Planning Grants (of up to $20,000 each) will fund the development and writing of innovative, ambitious or collaborative major external grant proposals. Such external proposals may be for the support of research or for research training, or curriculum or educational program development that produces scholarly products or lasting programmatic impacts.

- Collaborative Grants (of up to $30,000 each) will fund the efforts of two or more scholars from different departments or schools at Georgetown who come together to spark innovative directions in their research.

- Partnership Grants (of up to $30,000 each) will fund projects undertaken jointly by Georgetown scholars and external partners with the promise of contributing to knowledge, building lasting collaborations, and forming partnerships that lead to independent funding for shared work.

An additional category of grant is available in 2015 in cooperation with the McCourt School Massive Data Institute seed grant program (http://mccourt.georgetown.edu/massive-data-institute).

- GEI-MDI Research Pilot Grants (of up to $30,000 each) will fund projects undertaken by Georgetown faculty that employ large data sets and associated quantitative and computational approaches to address questions centrally related to environment. Proposals must involve collaboration between faculty in different departments and must show promise of contributing knowledge to a question with clear relevance to the environment, building lasting collaborations, and forming partnerships and preliminary results that lead to external funding.

Please visit The Georgetown Environment Initiative web page (environment.georgetown.edu). Click on the Research & Collaboration link at the top of the page and then select 2015 Call for Proposals which explains the criteria and application process, and includes a link to a cover sheet that must accompany all submissions. Information on past awards is also available at environment.georgetown.edu .

Proposals are due no later than Wednesday, March 4th 2015 at 5 PM EST.

Please direct any questions to Prof. Matthew Hamilton (matthew.hamilton@georgetown.edu).

Best wishes,

Matthew B. Hamilton

it's an honor to virtually meet you. I should preface this by saying I'm a jailhouse lawyer as a result of being around Cheryl and others for so long and so intensely.

Here is what we are thinking and hoping you can help us with: this kerfuffle with the Secretary's email is obviously one we are trying very hard to work through and to explain to people. Comes down to the right to know, transparency, etc. Which we strongly believe in, and why we turned over her email. Obviously, the committee investigating the Benghazi attacks have latched on to this, as well as others in and out of Congress who claim this subverted several processes, including FOIA. We do not agree with that, but in the course of this we've discussed an ironic hypocrisy that we believe the public would benefit in knowing before judging anyone's intentions and practices:

Congress is exempt from FOIA.

Because Congress exempted itself from FOIA.

Congressional offices do not have to even respond to FOIA requests, let alone fulfill them. I worked on Capitol Hill for seven years and always found it hypocritical (right before I filed the request in the circular cabinet as they say). So while the Republicans and conservative groups tie the Federal Government up in stitches working on FOIA requests for my communications with reporters or Cheryl's with HRC, their own communications with entities such as the RNC or FOX where they are likely coordinating – or at the very least discussing – is blinded from the public eye.

So we thought one way to demonstrate this would be for someone to submit a series of FOIA requests to a number of Hill offices, specifically, the Chairman of the Select Committee, Rep. Trey Gowdy, along with his fellow Republicans on the Committee, as well as others such as Darrell Issa, Jason Chaffetz, Lyndsey Graham – all those who pound their chests about the public's right to know how their government functions. Just not their 1/3 of it! And let them respond or not. My guess is that most requests would come back on letterhead with a standard answer. And btw, there is nothing preventing someone from voluntarily complying with such a request. Obviously, those responses would be very compelling to the news media.

You can probably guess who we thought that someone could be. Given your stature and career, we can't think of anyone better to make the point that the representatives of the people, including the People's House, does not want the people to see what they are doing.

Happy to discuss by phone, and thank you for entertaining what you may consider a harebrained idea.

Best,

Philippe

Dear John, been meaning to write this since we heard the news that you were giving the country another year of service. We are so thrilled and happy that you are headed over to the White House. I guess your plans for spending the summer in Truckee have been delayed, right? But if you do come out for a break now and then please do let us know. I plan to be in DC more often this year, especially since Christopher is now back on the mend. He's recovering albeit somewhat slowly and has stepped down as dean. He's totally focused on raising money for implementing the recommendations from the Each and Every Child education report that he co-chaired for Arne Duncan and Obama--we've got some firm commitments and there are going to be some great opportunities to work with folks in DC including CAP. i will be teaching this spring immigration (and hope that we can see some positive action by the time the semester ends, though it is a very slim hope). Will also be working on our 2020 redistricting effort, food institute and latino civic engagement (while also coping with beginnings of teenage years!).

We just got back from Cabo San Lucas where we rested, swam and just relaxed. It was a resort so we really didn't see much of anything but that was okay by us. How about you--did you and your family enjoy Cabo (where did you stay?)--By the way, while we were in Cabo we ran into one of our Berkeley alums who was in the marines, did two tours in Iraq and then went to law school. Paul is now a colonel in the Reserves- and works for ViaSat in San Diego. In talking to him we thought of Gabe and others who are lawyers but also connected in some way to the military which then led us to think that might be good for our students to hear about these interesting career opportunities--best way to reach Gabe? Anyway, hope you and Mary have a great year and don't forget to call us if there's anything we can do either professionally or personally.
Maria

All, thanks for the helpful feedback. I've worked with Jen on a new draft which we think is now in a better place. Kept a few light jokes at the top, but it no longer feels like a stand-up routine and the rest of the speech includes more of the points Jen suggested about the challenges facing journalists today. Please send along any final reactions, and I'm going to share with HRC as well.

Been on a plane.

I'm going to defer to Jen on this.

That said, I think humor is important.
I'm ready to try an email joke , maybe the suggestion of something between her and reporters…
I thought the joke about her daughter nora as editor of paper was cute.

And I'm not as allergic as everyone else to the idea of making fun about her relationship with press (just wouldn't do it so much of it). I think that would signal a change, perhaps.

Overall, though, I think jen's point about making sure this feels like it's about robin, not HRC, is the most important note. I felt we were too self-focussed by the time I finished.

Out of power, sending this.

So, my take is that the best way for HRC to connect with this audience is to show some empathy as opposed self-deprecating humour which at some level is making the event about her.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Let's pretend everyone in the audience is a serious, on the level journalist trying to get the story right and cover serious issues in an absurdly difficult environment where speed and mass appeal are over valued. Have her commend them on how hard they all work in this difficult environment to tell the facts, unearth important stories (maybe we can reference some good stories on important issues that we would not know about where it not for nyt and other outlets). Robin is the model for getting to both substance and telling the human side of the story. Robin hasn't been gone for very long, but it has gotten even harder in the intervening years to do what she did - think if HRC acknowledges that and says she and all thoughtful people appreciate the struggle the reporters in the room face, and how impt it is that they keep at it, how needed they really are - think that would go over really well. The press is the most hated profession and they are all losing heir jobs to 23 yr old bloggers who make listicles about drinking games at Northwestern. Let's give them an ego boost.

HRC is also a victim of the new speed and click bait above all else, but she doesn't have to bring it back to herself - the audience will do that on her own.

She should poke fun at herself but I would maybe do it along the lines of how press thinks she doesn't like them, but what a life-changing revelation it was to her to read the nyt as a young woman (I know she now thinks less of them, but still) and how much she loves npr and all the wonky stories. I would also do an email joke - maybe some emails between her and the press, I will think more about that.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

We had talked about a few possible goals for this speech: 1) clear the air a bit with the press, possibly with self-deprecating humor; 2) explain the important role that serious, fact-based journalism plays in our democracy, as opposed to gotcha-style politics of personal destruction; 3) and play a little offense on health care given that Monday is the 5-year anniversary of the ACA.

Of these sections, the first one is where I could really use your input. Do the jokes in here work? Do you have suggestions for punching any of them up? Robin's husband Peter likes the idea of HRC being funny up there, and she says she is open to it as well, but we'll have to see if she really goes for it.

Thanks

Dan

Voting Rights Advocates Condemn Senate Committee Passage of New Voting Restrictions

Richmond, VA - The Virginia Senate Privileges and Elections Committee this evening approved SB719, new voting restrictions that could make it harder for hundreds of thousands of Virginians to cast a ballot. Voting rights advocates sharply condemned the proposals.

"The integrity of our elections is paramount, but the real threat to democracy are politicians who are trying to change the rules to make it harder for hundreds of thousands of Virginians to vote," said ProgressVA Executive Director Anna Scholl. "Our elections should be free, fair, and accessible. Mandating eligible voters show a specific kind of ID, which these politicians know many voters don't have, reduces access to democracy."

Virginia Organizing Chairperson Sandra Cook also spoke out on the restrictive new legislation. "Voting is a sacred right in our democracy. Requiring a specific ID creates a barrier to access to the polls and it is unfathomable why our legislators would choose to support efforts to decrease civic participation.

Any new Virginia voter ID requirement would likely be subject to pre-clearance by the federal Department of Justice under Section 5 of the Voting Rights Act. Contrary to insinuations in the hearing by Committee Chairman Mark Obenshain and Senator Tom Garrett that no voter education would be necessary on new restrictions, the Commonwealth would be required to submit such a plan to DOJ. In 2012, the State Board of Elections spent close to $2 million dollars educating Virginians about the new voter ID law. Additionally, the state would be required to provide identification free of charge to any citizen without appropriate photo ID under the new restrictions.

there is no picture of who these folks are that actually make them “sympathetic,” which is what we need to make this relevant and popular.

> First, another board member: What would you think of inviting Christiana Figueres to join the Board? It's a little unorthodox that I would make such a suggestion by email, but here's the backstory: Charlotte was in Europe this past week, where among other things she participated in a discussion with Christiana and others about her (CF's) next steps, after she leaves her position in July. That conversation got Charlotte thinking about moving relatively quickly to discuss amongst ourselves (within our CWF Board) the possibility of approaching Christiana about a spot on the CWF board. Charlotte and I talked about it today. I personally think that Christiana would be a fabulous addition, and we'd be lucky to have her. You may have other perspectives, so I'm inviting you to weigh in. The reason I'm bringing this up by email rather than in Executive Session at the Board meeting itself is timing: Christiana will be in San Francisco during the week of the Funders Table, and will likely be leaving town by Friday. (She has a scheduling conflict and had to decline our invitation to join our dinner on Thursday.) If we thought that it were a good idea to raise the topic with CF, Charlotte would be able to do so during sidebar discussions prior to our meeting. That would only happen, though, if we all think it's a good idea in general and if we think it's a good idea to jump so quickly. If you think it might be a good idea but you'd like time to discuss it, then of course we will take whatever time is needed to have that discussion. And some of you may have reasons to think it's not a good idea at all, so please speak up. In any event, this is a > Second, please get your toasts ready! This will be Bill Reilly's last board meeting as 'Emeritus Chair' (after which he'll transition to being invited to special events but will not attend regular board meetings). At the dinner on Thursday evening ahead of the Friday Board meeting, we'll have a chance to celebrate his service to ClimateWorks from its Day One. I'm hoping that each of you might be willing to say a very brief word of two to honor him. Carol, if you think it's appropriate to mention something about his prior service at the Packard Foundation, feel free. And John, if you think there's something special to say about his government service, feel free to add that too. The Board dinner will also include representatives from the Funders Table foundations, so I think we'll want to make these relatively brief but still memorable comments.

Third, at our Board meeting, we're anticipating two possible topics to discuss informally during lunch. John: would you be willing, once again, to share your thoughts about the current state of affairs on the various stumps? And John and Larry: would you comment on the implications of the Supreme Court's stay of the Clean Power Plan? I'll chime in with my own two cents after you, but I think it would be really interesting to hear your legal perspective, Larry, and then your policy/political view, John. I'll be happy to share what I know/ hear about from the perspective of states' actions.

Ok, that's it. Sorry for the long message.

Statement Regarding Subpoena Compliance and Server Determination by Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton

Washington, DC—Select Committee on Benghazi Chairman Trey Gowdy today issued the following statement regarding former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton's response to the committee's subpoena. She failed to produce a single new document and refused to relinquish her server to a neutral, detached third party for an independent review of potential public records:

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

“After seeking and receiving a two week extension from the Committee, Secretary Clinton failed to provide a single new document to the subpoena issued by the Committee and refused to provide her private server to the Inspector General for the State Department or any other independent arbiter for analysis.

“We learned today, from her attorney, Secretary Clinton unilaterally decided to wipe her server clean and permanently delete all emails from her personal server. While it is not clear precisely when Secretary Clinton decided to permanently delete all emails from her server, it appears she made the decision after October 28, 2014, when the Department of State for the first time asked the Secretary to return her public record to the Department.

“Not only was the Secretary the sole arbiter of what was a public record, she also summarily decided to delete all emails from her server ensuring no one could check behind her analysis in the public interest.”

“In light of the Secretary’s unprecedented email arrangement with herself and her decision nearly two years after she left office to permanently delete all emails and because the equities at stake involve not only those of the Select Committee and Congress more broadly, but also those of the American people and their right to the full record of her tenure as secretary of State, we will work with the leadership of the House of Representatives as the Committee considers next steps. But it is clear Congress will need to speak with the former Secretary about her email arrangement and the decision to permanently delete those emails.”

A note of caution on the "appear herself." Since November, I've said she was ready (on appropriate notice) to come up and testify about Benghazi once, in public. The R's have dragged their feet, using document production as an excuse. Recently, Gowdy has said he wanted her to testify twice, the first time about emails, maybe by deposition. My response to Gowdy's staff has been: she'll come once, in public—you can ask her about emails then, if you want. I would hate for us to say something that might give them leverage on a two-appearance push.

I attach a draft of the Gowdy letter, but it's very near final. Please don't send outside the group.

I await advice on release. Philippe has raised a concern about sending it to Gowdy, then immediately releasing it to the public. Since Gowdy released his server request last Friday very quickly, he may release our letter as soon as he gets it. I'm agnostic.

How about this, then? And should we add in that she has asked state to make her emails public since letter to Gowdy notes state's role in approving release of emails?

Secretary Clinton has already turned all of her work emails over to the State Department, and the Department has been responsive to the committee, and will continue to be. Representatives of Secretary Clinton's office have been in touch with the committee (SHOULD WE ADD " AND THEY STATE DEPT?") to make clear that she would like her emails made public as soon as possible and that she's ready and willing to come and appear herself.

Subject: [big campaign] Media Monitoring Report - Morning 05/13/08

Main Topics: West Virginia Primary, Natural Disasters

Summary of Shift: The wrath of Mother Nature continued to dominate news coverage. The death toll from yesterday's Chinese earthquake could top 12,000, wildfires rage in Florida, flooding in Maryland and Virginia is causing trouble, and the clean up after the Myanmar cyclone continues.

The West Virginia Primary eclipsed all other political stories this morning. John McCain received little coverage. President Bush departs for Israel today, which is the first step in his Middle Eastern tour. The price of oil continues its record-breaking streak.

Highlights:
1) CNN's John Roberts characterizes McCain's GI Bill alternative as "far less generous"
2) Obama and Clinton: McCain "does not go far enough" to combat climate change
3) CBS Local News highlights McCain is different from Bush on climate change

Clips:

Highlight #1
Roberts Characterizes McCain's GI Bill alternative as "far less generous" (CNN 05/13/08 06:23am)
JOHN ROBERTS: A war brewing on Capitol Hill today over educating our veterans. A new GI Bill, essentially guarantees a full ride scholarship for service members to any instate public university as long as they serve at least three years. Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama are on board but John McCain opposes it. Floating an alternative bill that's far less generous"

Highlight #2
Obama and Clinton: McCain "does not go far enough" (CNN 05/13/08 08:24am)
KIRAN CHETRY: Senator John McCain looking for some crossover appeal by highlighting his plan to combat climate change.

[Clip of McCain's OR environment speech]

CHETRY: By 2020 McCain says that his plan would cut greenhouse gas emissions where they were in 1990 both Senators Clinton and Obama say that that just doesn't go far enough.

Highlight #3
CBS Local News Highlights McCain is different from Bush on Climate Change (CBS-WUSA-DC 6:09am)
ANDREA ROANE: On the Republican side, Senator John McCain is unveiling his plan to combat global warming, a big difference the candidate says from the Bush administration. Senator McCain called for caps on carbon emissions and he asked for China and India to join the effort. McCain will be in Washington State today.

An ad showing all her hard work and stumping not only hits Sanders on his Johnny-come-lately stuff (she's stumped for 506 democrats, he's run against 23 - made up stats, but you get my drift) but actually shows that far from feeling 'entitled' Hillary's hard, hard work for the Democrats started in college and has continued every year and decade since. She is the least 'entitled' person imaginable compared to an in-it-for-myself opponent who joined your party last bloody year!

Final shot to camera a popular democrat with whom HC has stumped

"For the last forty years Hillary Clinton has fought for us Democrats - not just herself. She's stumped for over x Democrats in congress - Y democratic senators - and Z democratic presidents " [start with carter or whoever, linger on Obama, and finish with a very warm image of bill and hill kissing]. Bernie Sanders has only ever worked for himself. He became a Democrat - last year." Pause. "Hillary. I'm with her - because she's with us."

Word is that the Army Corps of Engineers will let Cordovan's know by year-end whether they approve the application to build the road and deep water port at Shepard Point. Along with many community members, EPC has been monitoring this project for over 18 years. Improved oil spill response for Cordova will be better served by a "practicable, environmentally less damaging and available" location. That important statement is the National Environmental Policy Act terminology that will determine the decision.

Defend Our Oceans: Navy Military Exercises in the Gulf of Alaska
EPC's expansive regional outreach and action culminated in an unprecedented response from our communities and the Navy/ Alaskan Command. Although the Navy did carry out training exercises in the Gulf of Alaska this summer, EPC saw meaningful change and will continue to work on this issue throughout the fall and winter. The recent settlement between NRDC/ Earthjustice and the Navy is a good sign of things to come. Stay tuned to EPC more details and updates.

I sent a correction yesterday to what the policy wason foreign contributors - it was not a blanket no foreign contributions (though that is what happened in practice); it was no foreign contributions for CGI; for other initiatives like CHAI (Aids), CCI (climate change), CHDI (development in Africa), it required approval by DOS/WH to accept NEW contributions (or significant increase in an existing one).

So question would be - if a country like Germany decides to contribute to funding aids drug that the foundation facilitates through a low-cost consortium, is answer no, the Foundation wouldn't do it or yes, it would and would immediately disclose it - that is more likely situation facing Foundation.

Contributions are made because of a strong belief that the Foundation's programs improve the lives of millions of people around the globe. The Clinton Foundation has a record of transparency that goes above what is required of U.S. charities, including peer organizations. This includes the voluntary disclosure of contributions on the Foundation's website. Should Secretary Clinton decide to run for office, we will continue to ensure the Foundation's policies and practices regarding support from international partners are appropriate, just as we did when she served as Secretary of State."

Subject:	Nightly Labor Update

Hi everyone
A quick labor update tonight.

1. Lots of AFL-CIO internal drama around the AFT endorsement this week. AFSCME, IAM, IAFF holding strong. The contingent of unions upset with AFT include: ATU, APWU, CWA and Nurses (these unions are on my Sanders watch list).

2. Need to lock down IAM and AFSCME for endorsement. There are two events we need to schedule to secure their endorsement.

IAM Executive Board Meeting
IAM is letting me know if August 13th is a option for HRC. Their request was August 14th. I will know Monday. This event would be HRC accepting their endorsement.

AFSCME Small Member Roundtable-Iowa
The last step in AFSCME's endorsement process, we need to lock down. AFSCME's board meets to endorse HRC on September 10-11th. In order for the endorsement to happen I need 60 minutes in Iowa with AFSCME members and HRC in August. Can this be scheduled around another Iowa trip in August? AFSCME is after me for the date.

3. Next week AFT and IAFF-I have scheduled two days of in person meetings with the H4A team next week.
Tuesday, July 21st 11-3pm AFT Senior Staff
Wednesday, July 22nd 1-5pm IAFF Senior staff

Please stop by if you can! Both days I have scheduled for them to meet with Communications/Digital, Policy, Political, States and Delegate Selection. IAFF also requested a meeting with Advance. (*Robby please note dinner with IAFF on 7/22)

4. AFL-CIO Executive Council Prep-Please let me know if I can do anything to assist. I flagged some issues for your attention around TPP (Malaysia), Cadillac Tax and HRC statement yesterday $15 in NH. Those are issues areas I think will come up.

5. SEIU-I've touched base with Peter Colavito with SEIU Intl. They would like to know about California dates for their home care event. In order to circle back with Local 1199, John would you be willing to touch base with George? I'm trying to think of a creative way to keep them with us while we move the home care event with HRC to California. Advice is welcomed!

6. NEA New Hampshire-I've kept in touch with our New Hampshire team and HRC is still on track to receive the NH NEA State endorsement, likely August 4th. This will be the first endorsement after AFT.

HRC met with the United Farm Workers (UFW) and earned their endorsement by the end of the meeting. Julie captured this unexpected moment on video--it was special! We'll be working with UFW to discuss the roll out plan. They've asked their members to hold the news.

- She reiterated her commitment to fight for CIR with a pathway to citizenship; protect and implement DACA and DAPA; and explore other ways to protect undocumented people via executive action ("create new categories").
- She stated support for UFW's legislative proposal to expand overtime pay for farm workers in CA, so overtime is av. after 40 hours/week or 8 hours/day.
- She was asked to help in the dispute between the UFW and CA-based Gerawan Farming. She said she's do everything possible. After the meeting, she had a private conversation with Arturo and expressed caution b/c of campaign.
- She was asked about healthcare for the undocumented community. Stated her support for all undocumented people to be able to buy in the exchange, but acknowledged that most people don't have the resources to afford it. She also said she would work to make the exchanges available to all, including subsidies, but immediately linked it to CIR. Also wants to work with states like CA and the UFW to explore other ways to provide HC
- Re Central American kids, she said government funded legal counsel for UCs and working with El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras to take down drug cartels and build the region.
- She was asked if she would appoint Obama to the SCOTUS. She said he would be a very good candidate, but she wouldn't have that power...and he probably wants a normal life. It was a fun exchange bet. her and the farm workers.

Just met with the farm workers for an hour here in Palo Alto. Very positive experience. I'll let Lorella expand, but from outside the room there was a lot of clapping and cheering, and chanting of Sí Se Peude.

Two SC radio interviews today:

1) We did a repeat with Cynthia Hardy that ended up being a very brief conversation HRC joined in progress about health disparities in communities of color.

2) She did a slightly tougher but ultimately very strong interview with Judi Gatson of 103.1 KISS FM. She asked HRC about her recent comments on not being in this for herself, and said that some doubt that. The answer was very strong, and invoked a little reflection on sexism. She asked about youth, but the framing was interesting, which was that BdB and Eric Garner's mom endorse, but children of BdB and Eric Garner's sister do not. The other question most of note was Judi observing that she hears people in the community say that HRC embraces Obama only to pander to the AfAm population. Interesting that that broke through, (Stephanie if you talked to her I'd be curious to hear more about how often she's hearing that), HRC's answer was good, she said that Senator Sanders claiming that was offensive, that she nominated him at the convention, campaigned for him, worked for him for 4 years, and that it "affects" her "personally" to hear Sanders and his supporters say that stuff.

Finance event in Atherton was largely uneventful. She did take questions. She dinged Uber when talking about the Kalamazoo shooter, which thrilled many in the audience here in Silicon Valley, I'm sure. No encryption questions.

One more finance event and then we're off to LA to spend the night.

Left there and dos two back of house visits, Caesars and Harrah's. Bernie was at Harrah's immediately before us, stayed 5 minutes and left. We spent about 25 shaking hands and telling people where to caucus.

Left there and went to 2 caucus sites, the second of which she's working the (long) line at as we speak.

We visited the home of Vicki Early, a retired California utility company employee who moved to Nevada to buy her first home, and installed solar panels on the roof, which she could afford with the Public Utility Commission offsets on her fixed income until they got rolled back. She and her boyfriend Tyrone showed HRC the panels in the back yard and told her story. HRC had the press come in closer to listen and then dos brief remarks of her own on the importance of this issue for people like Vicki. Pretty great stuff.

Next we went to Youthbuild, an organization with a Nevada chapter that builds houses for Habitat for Humanity. We walked through a big warehouse where HRC individually met about 15 workers. She was intrigued by how most of them found the place, which was through Craigslist, and probed them on what they were learning and what they wanted to do next. Most wanted to continue in the building trades. She spoke briefly, and invited the Youthbuild and Habitat folks to speak as well.

We've also squeezed in two SC radio interviews. Both went well, talked about the Clyburn's endorsement, support for President Obama, her plans on college affordability.

Headed to the town hall with high school students now.

Women and Families Roundtable:

Very engaging discussion, topics ranged from early childhood education to food deserts to Flint. HRC brought up Flint proactively, and a woman stood up and said that she had family there, appreciated HRC saying that, her work there, and that her assessment was exactly right. Audience was diverse across the board, lots of millennials and lots of young people who work for various NGOs and advocacy groups with a lot of very good questions and passionate comments. At the end HRC commented on her life's work, figuring out how to make difference in people's lives as opposed to promising them the moon, and making sure lives are better when you're done than when you started. Wasn't too hot but poignant and noticeable following 45 minutes of discussing the importance of reading to your children every day.

We're now going to divert course and make a pit stop at a woman's house who has been affected by the Nevada Public Utility Commissions retroactive rate changes on people selling solar back to the grid. Pool is with us.

South Carolina was quite something. Good crowd of about 450/500 at Denmark-Olar Elementary School (home of the Vikings). HRC stuck largely to her remarks and outlined her $125 billion plan to improve underserved communities, and took questions on just about everything: social security, health care multiple times, body cameras, Flint, homeless vets, Trump, student loans, who she's pick for VP, and a little girl who gave her a drawing that said on it: "I'm not bossy I have leadership skills." It was a very engaged, high-energy affair.

Following the town hall and a long ropeline, we did 2 TV stand ups and a print interview. Discussion in both revolved around race relations, the state of the race, and education, which HRC discussed at length in a dilapidated older locker room with paint people off the walls in the background.

Our print interviewer, Princess Williams, was really impressive. She won an award last year for best student journalist in a college under 5000 students from the South Carolina Press Association. She was nervous but did a great job, asked HRC about education, what we can't do beyond government programs to help level the playing field, attracting young voters, and what life is like off the campaign trail.

We're in the air now headed back north to St. Paul for the Humphrey-Mondale Dinner.

We took a few more photos and talked to WMUR for a few minutes, which will air at noon.

Now we're in Nashua now headed to another location and on the phone live with Mike Pomp of WTSN radio. Good conversation, she's talking about her experiences up here, basically a perfect Election Day drive time interview.

More to come.

HRC and WJC stopped by Chez Vachon for breakfast. Nice greasy spoon with a French Canadian twist. HRC and WJC worked the tables, ran into some longtime supporters, took a lot of selfies. President Clinton was excited to see his photo still on the wall from when he visited last.

Dan O'Neil, former Dodd and O'Malley supporter but '92 Clinton supporter joined them for omelettes. Following breakfast, some more selfie-taking ensued as did a conversation with a couple of vets. Restaurant felt overwhelmingly supportive.

We went back to the hotel and taped 6 TV interviews with local and Boston affiliates. Lots about the state of the race here and the weather. Most asked about Warren which she handled well, a couple of transcripts questions and a good exchange with FOX on sexism in politics.

From there we went to Manchester Community College. Crowd of about 1100, she did a few things differently, including calling Bernie out for accepting DSCC money that came in part from Wall Street.

We taped Rachel Maddow after the event. It opened with the staffing question and then covered the waterfront...Flint, trust, attacks, transcripts. We let it go so Rachel would spend more time on the positive which she did.

After Maddow we went to the Velcro factory. She went table to table in their cafeteria which looked like a Johnny Rockets, shaking hands, sometimes sitting down for brief conversations. Press pool got some good stuff.

We're now back at the Radisson waiting to depart for WMUR where we'll do a quick live hit on WMUR, she'll simply make a one minute pitch to voters direct to camera.

HRC met with mayor and an usher briefly, and she said that she fight to keep the lights from dimming on this.

The crowd was extraordinarily supportive. Her remarks were brief (12/15) but strong, with powerful response.

Afterwards she took photos, she did a very quick local standup in the sanctuary (all about Flint), met with a group of local pastors and went into the stakeholders/electeds meeting with the mayor.

On the way to the airport we called the editor of the National Newspaper Association, quick 5 minute interview on the importance of Flint and their being many other Flints. Transcript to follow.

Descending back into NH now, going to do an OTR at the Puritan Backroom (!!).

Subject:	CHAI fund and advisory board

You probably already are aware but just to be sure: yesterday in the CHAI board meeting, Ira discussed the formation of an advisory board for CHAI – he said he is targeting 10 people to each give $500k per year for 3 years. He mentioned the names below. He also said he is looking to do a series of dinners on the west coast, east coast, and overseas to raise money for a CHAI Innovation Fund that would "invest" in projects / businesses that CHAI deems worthy. He said the first dinner is on west coast with 30 people and hosted by Christian Anthony who he said he found via the Brown University alumni network. Given the enormous range of things that Ira is proposing the Fund be empowered to invest in, it occurred to me that IF the organization is comfortable with the creation of such a Fund bearing WJC's name (via CHAI), then why not have CF do it, so that CF can decide whether to invest in CHAI projects or also in other things like a farm in Africa, etc – and also to give WJC better control of it? The proposed CHAI Innovation Fund seems poised to go well beyond what we would consider to be the core traditional work of CHAI on HIV/AIDS, malaria, etc (at least based on the investment examples in the documents Ira provided) and I therefore just wondered why we'd cede this to CHAI to do/control. It's probably safe to assume that any Fund that bears WJC's name will attract "investors" or donors or whatever we call them. Maybe I am over-thinking this, but just wanted to brainstorm aloud and I'm happy to drop this if it's not worth discussing further. Thanks, Ami

- Tood Fisher, Chief Admin Officer at KKR (also via Brown U)
- Bill Shuster at Evercore

May 17 Brown v Board of Education Separate Is Inherently Unequal and Violates Equal Protection of the Laws US Supreme Court

A unanimous U.S. Supreme Court held in Brown v Board of Education on May 17, 1954, as follows:

> Today, education is perhaps the most important function of state and local governments. Compulsory school attendance laws and the great expenditures for education both demonstrate our recognition of the importance of education to our democratic society. It is required in the performance of our most basic public responsibilities, even service in the armed forces. It is the very foundation of good citizenship. Today it is a principal instrument in awakening the child to cultural values, in preparing him for later professional training, and in helping him to adjust normally to his environment. In these days, it is doubtful that any child may reasonably be expected to succeed in life if he is denied the opportunity of an education. Such an opportunity, where the state has undertaken to provide it, is a right which must be made available to all on equal terms.
> We come then to the question presented: Does segregation of children in public schools solely on the basis of race, even though the physical facilities and other "tangible" factors may be equal, deprive the children of the minority group of equal educational opportunities? We believe that it does.
> To separate them from others of similar age and qualifications solely because of their race generates a feeling of inferiority as to their status in the community that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone.
> We conclude that, in the field of public education, the doctrine of "separate but equal" has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal. Therefore, we hold that the plaintiffs and others similarly situated for whom the actions have been brought are, by reason of the segregation complained of, deprived of the equal protection of the laws guaranteed by the Fourteenth Amendment.

Attachments:	2015-07-29 Cuba - 9pm.docx

Team, attached please find a draft of HRC's Cuba speech for Friday in Miami. We make the case for lifting the embargo and pursuing a strategy of engagement, and then stepping back to offer a vision for U.S. leadership in the Americas and a broader contrast on foreign policy with the Republicans. In this draft we don't hit Rubio or Jeb by name, so that's one question to consider.

HRC is excited about this one and thinks we're in a pretty good place, so that's encouraging. Would be great to hear any comments or concerns on Thursday morning.

Also, most of you have met our new speechwriter Megan Rooney, who wrote for HRC for four years before going to work for President Obama. I am super excited to have her on board and I'm sure you'll soon love her as much as I do. Later this evening she'll be sending around an Urban League draft.

Thanks as always
Dan

Cheryl,

Hope you're well and surviving the crazy cold!

Recognizing that your schedule is insane, I was hoping you might be willing to carve out a little time, by phone or in person, over the coming weeks to talk.

From various conversations I've had (and what I've read) I understand that staffing up has begun for a potential HRC run and I wanted to discuss with you whether there may be a role for me. Below is a copy of my bio and LinkedIn profile for a little additional background on my experience.

Look forward to chatting.

Subject: Lots - we mean LOTS - of polling on Cuba!

June 13, 2014

Dear Friends:

This week, when the Miami Herald released its survey of 400 registered voters in Miami-Dade County, it contained startling results, including a finding that the Cuba issue is not having much effect on Florida's race for governor. (This is not something you would have guessed reading the Herald's headline: Cuban voters weigh Crist down in Miami-Dade.)

A few days ago, Public Policy Polling released a poll showing a majority of Floridians supporting an end to the embargo.

Next week, the Cuban Research Institute at Florida International University will release results from its 2014 survey of Cuban Americans in South Florida.

So, there's a flood of new data. Since public opinion research had a rocky week in Washington - just ask Rep. Eric Cantor, or, even better, ask his pollster - we thought it would be a good time to look at recent surveys on Cuba policy and think about how public opinion affects public policy.

If foreign policy issues turned less on how politicians calculated their domestic political interests and more on how public servants weighed the national interest, U.S. policy toward Cuba would have changed long ago.

After all, Mikhail Gorbachev ended the Cold War before the invention of the Internet. U.S. intelligence agencies, in a report published in 1997, said "Cuba does not pose a significant military threat to the U.S. or to other countries in the region." Foreign policy elites - including diplomats known to fear communist influence in the region - recently united behind a letter to President Obama urging meaningful changes in the policy.

As with national experts, public opinion in the U.S. settled the Cuba debate decades ago. Since 1974, as Gallup reported, "a majority of Americans have consistently said they support establishing diplomatic ties with Cuba, with the exception of one poll conducted in 1996."

Yet, the policy, conceived in the Cold War, is largely unchanged. This produces truly loopy outcomes - consider a recent House-passed defense bill that prohibits U.S. cooperation with Cuba on efforts to control drug trafficking despite Cuba's exemplary record in this area - along with the more troubling and continuing U.S. efforts to overthrow Cuba's government.

Cuba continues to be, as the Atlantic Council says, "the third rail of Latin American foreign policy in the United States," thanks, as the data consistently shows, to inaccurate positioning of Florida's importance in electoral politics.

Until the 2008 presidential campaign, when Senator Obama promised to reopen family travel to Cuba, and expressed his willingness to negotiate with Cuba's government , no serious candidate - Democrat or Republican - promised anything less to Florida voters than complete loyalty to the Cuba sanctions agenda. Until former Secretary Clinton released her memoir last week , no serious contender offered to undo the embargo before declaring for the White House.

The received wisdom for standing behind a failed policy was simple. Candidates were told they could not win office, nationally or locally in Florida, without carrying the Cuban American community, because it was resolutely opposed to normalizing relations with Cuba's government.

That is why we suggest paying close attention to the data released this year, this week, and next Tuesday.

In February, the Atlantic Council released a comprehensive survey that found substantial support nationally for normalizing relations with Cuba (56% to 35%) but even greater support in Florida for re-engaging. Floridians supported normalizing relations by a 63% to 30% margin, and approved of eliminating all restrictions on travel by 67% to 29%.

Public Policy Polling , which conducted a Florida survey this month, recorded 53% of Floridians, including 64% of independents and 57% of Democrats, supporting an end to the embargo with only 22% of respondents in support of maintaining the embargo.

But the bigger news came in a Miami Herald poll , which tested voter preferences in Miami-Dade County for Florida's upcoming Governor's race. As we previously reported, former Governor Charlie Crist astounded observers when he called for ending the embargo and announced plans to visit Cuba in the midst of his campaign against the incumbent Governor Rick Scott.

Crist's announcements have had no effect on the state's most feared voters. Despite losing the county's Hispanic vote, the Herald reports that Crist leads Governor Scott by a 47%-35% margin; sustained by 84% support among African-American voters, 58% support among "White Anglo" voters, and a 49% to 49% split among voters of Cuban descent born in the U.S. More telling, 67% of all respondents said that Crist's Cuba position had no impact on their vote.

Given the link between public opinion in Florida and public policy on Cuba in Washington, these results are really important.

In recent years, hardliners have demonstrated they will not give up the perception of their lock on Florida's votes without a fight. In 2008, they predicted Obama would lose Florida when he promised to restore family travel. He won 35% of the Cuban vote, won Florida, won the election, kept his promise, and family visits surged from 50,000 in 2004 to nearly half-a-million in 2013.

When the President restored people-to-people travel in 2011, Capitol Hill Cubans called it a sure way to lose votes. After he won Florida by a larger margin in 2012 than he did 4 years before, and split the Cuban vote with Governor Romney, Mauricio Claver-Carone said, "I have a problem with exit polls," and his organization later issued a report aimed at disproving Cuban American support for the President. When the Atlantic Council poll demonstrated vast support in Florida for changing the policy, he and others denounced it as a push-poll.

This is why we're eager to see the 2014 results from the Florida International University poll, the longest-running survey of public opinion in the Cuban American communities of South Florida. When FIU began its project in 1991, 87% of Cuban Americans favored keeping the embargo in place without changes. When FIU released its last survey in 2011, that figure had fallen to 56%. We won't be surprised if the 2014 results - in line with these other findings - show even less support among Cuban Americans for the embargo.

Two points in conclusion. At a time when more than 400,000 Cuban Americans are returning to the U.S. after visiting their families on the island each year, it's hard to imagine that they are unaffected by what they see. As these visits affirm that travel to Cuba helps their families, Cuban American support for further reforms in the policy, in our judgment, is likely to grow. So, we predict more positive movement in the FIU poll (thanks, we should say, to President Obama's family travel policy).

Alternatively, if you prefer to believe that nothing has changed, you can consult the Capitol Hill Cubans website . There, you will find a presentation from 2009 showing that the existing embargo policies are strongly supported by the Florida Cuban-American community. Keep in mind, the analysis is based on a survey by McLaughlin and Associates, Eric Cantor's pollster.

Still, you can't predict polls. With you, we'll wait to see what the Florida International University survey says next Tuesday.

Hillary Clinton elaborates on position against embargo

Former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton spoke at the Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) Thursday, June 12 about her book Hard Choices. Richard N. Haass, president of CFR, led the discussion. Among other topics, Clinton talked about the revelation in her book that she advocated privately for loosening the embargo on Cuba as Secretary of State.

Secretary Clinton offered several reasons for supporting changes in U.S. policy, including her belief that the U.S. needs to "change the psychology of this issue." She said that moving on the embargo would eliminate the opportunity for Cuba and other Latin American countries to place blame on the U.S. for the stagnation of U.S.-Cuba relations. She also measured the impact this would have on the foreign relations of the U.S. in general:

> "Probably the most important long-term commitment this country can make is to a much closer, more constructive relationship within our own hemisphere. And if we do that, we will be much better positioned to deal with all else that goes on in the world. It will be difficult to get it to the point I would like to see it unless we clear away the accusations against the United States over the embargo."

In a report on Secretary Clinton's "Hard Choices" interview on NPR, reporter Frank James sees Clinton's public opposition to the embargo as "something close to a sea change in American politics."

The Havana Times suggests that U.S. policy toward Cuba could become a major issue in the 2016 presidential election if the contest is between likely candidates Sen. Marco Rubio (FL) and Clinton. Rubio criticized Clinton's support of normalization, saying, "Now we see how far Secretary Clinton came to undermine the defenders of democracy in Cuba to try to help the Castro regime get more dollars with which to continue their repression."

The CFR discussion of Cuba starts at the 34:50 mark of this video .

Poll measures Miami-Dade voters' opinions on Cuba, governor's race

In the same week that Public Policy Polling released results from its survey showing that 53% of Florida voters want to end the embargo and only 22% want to continue it, the Miami Herald/Nuevo Herald released its own poll, looking only at voters in Miami-Dade County. It focuses on Cuba policy and examines the impact on the preferences of Cuban-American voters, following the announcement by gubernatorial candidate Charlie Crist that he plans to visit Cuba and supports lifting the embargo.

The poll, conducted June 3-5 by Bendixen & Amandi International, sampled 400 Miami-Dade registered voters with a margin of error of +/- 4.3 percentage points. Overall, Crist leads the incumbent Governor Rick Scott by a margin of 47-35%, with 18% undecided. To put these numbers in perspective, Crist led Scott in March 2013 by a margin of 50% to 34% according to a survey conducted by Quinnipiac University Polling Institute.

The Herald reports that Crist's positions on Cuba are hurting him politically among certain survey respondents in the Miami-Dade electorate:

> "Cuban American voters, who accounted for more than half of Hispanics polled and dominate the county's political power structure, back Scott over Crist 58-30 percent. Hispanics overall account for 55 percent of the county's 1.3 million registered voters."

However, the Herald also reports, "67 percent say Crist's Cuba position makes no difference in their vote between him and Gov. Rick Scott." In its demographic breakdowns, the poll shows that Crist has a sizable lead among blocs identified as "White Anglo" and "Black," and among voters ages 18-64. Scott leads in the crucial senior citizen

Five Days for the Cuban Five presents concert, rally, videoconference

A series of planned events called "Five Days for the Cuban Five," held from June 4-11, included a concert by hip hop group Dead Prez on Friday, June 6 and a rally outside the White House on Saturday, June 7. The White House rally drew 500 people to Pennsylvania Ave., reports the International Committee for the Freedom of the Cuban Five .

René González and Fernando González, the two released members of the Cuban Five, participated from Havana in a videoconference with U.S. panelists on Tuesday, June 10, reports EFE . The panelists, along with René and Fernando, said that they felt encouraged by recent pushes for change in U.S. policy toward Cuba, but emphasized that now the U.S. government needs to act.

State Dept. condemns detentions in Cuba

The U.S. Department of State issued a statement on Thursday condemning Cuba's government for its recent detentions of pro-democracy activists. The State Department said that among the detained were Jorge Luis García Pérez ("Antúnez") and his wife, Yris Pérez Aguilera; Berta Soler, spokesperson for Ladies in White; and Angel Moya, Soler's husband. In addition, journalist Roberto de Jesus Guerra claimed that a "plainclothes agent" beat him, UPI reports. Over forty dissidents in total were detained, and most were released the same day.

One day earlier, Florida Representative Ileana Ros-Lehtinen issued a statement about the arrests, which read in part: "The Obama administration must immediately condemn this new repressive wave and stop providing concessions to the Castro regime."

U.S. seismologists visit Santiago

Experts from the U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) visited Santiago de Cuba from Wednesday, June 11 to Friday, continuing USGS's cooperation with Cuba on earthquake tracking, reported Progreso Weekly . The group toured Oriente University and Cuba's National Seismological Service and met with Bladimir Moreno Toirán, the director of Cuba's National Center for Seismological Research, the agency of the Ministry of Science that monitors earthquakes.

Cuba is prone to earthquakes because it lies atop the Oriente fault line. The largest earthquake in Cuba this year was a 5.0 magnitude quake on January 9.

"Coincidentally," Progreso reported, "a 3.2-magnitude tremor shook the area as the Americans arrived for their meeting with Moreno."

CUBA'S FOREIGN RELATIONS

United Arab Emirates will open embassy in Havana

The United Arab Emirates will open its own embassy in Cuba, reports Cuba Standard . The UAE government will also be opening embassies in Angola and Mozambique, as well as a consulate in Toronto.

While statistics vary, there are approximately 104 foreign embassies and consulates in Cuba. The U.S., which does not recognize Cuba's government, signed a bilateral agreement with Cuba during the presidency of Jimmy Carter, which permits both countries to operate "Interests Sections" in Havana and Washington.

Editors of Catholic magazine Espacio Laical resign

Roberto Veiga and Lenier González Mederos, editors of the Catholic magazine Espacio Laical, announced their departure from the publication, reports the Associated Press. The two men have edited the magazine, a project of the Havana Archdioceses' Felix Varela Cultural Center, for a decade. Veiga and González announced their departure in an email to colleagues and friends:

> "We want to inform you that after a decade of hard work, in which we sought to help build roads for prosperity and stability in our country, we have been dismissed as Editor and Vice-editor of the magazine...It's been a pleasure being able to share with you during this time, clinging to the belief that building a better Cuba is possible. Without you this beautiful adventure would not have taken place."

The AP reported that Veiga and González had submitted their resignations on May 2, but the magazine only now accepted them. Café Fuerte and several other sources had originally reported that the editors were dismissed.

Veiga and González issued a clarifying message confirming that they chose to resign, and explaining that they had noticed divisions the magazine was causing in the Church community, and felt that:

> "It was not morally right to continue managing a publication that was provoking divisions within our own ecclesiastic community, which contains the positions of those who think that the Church should not interfere 'in politics' and those who think that it should not open its spaces to all the members of Cuban civil society. In this sense...we came to understand the impossibility of maintaining the editorial line of the magazine Espacio Laical as it has been..."

The magazine, a publication of the Archdiocese of Havana is overseen by Cardinal Jaime Ortega, the Archbishop of Havana. The editors say that on two previous occasions they had submitted their resignations to Cardinal Ortega; however, the Cardinal had not accepted the resignations until now.

The publication has come to represent a space for dialogue-based, politically moderate debate in Cuba. Espacio Laical is described by the AP as "a rare exception" to government-controlled media, publishing both pro-government and critical articles written by authors from both within and outside of Cuba. The online version of the magazine describes its objectives:

> "We want to create a space for everyone. A space for different spheres of social, political, economic, and cultural activity..., with the purpose of inserting ourselves and contributing in a humble way to the creative work of a society that is more prosperous and fraternal every day."

Gustavo Andujar, the director of Espacio Laical, said that a new team would take over following Veiga and González's departure, and that the magazine "will have its defenders and detractors, just like now, though criticisms and praise will not necessarily have the same content or come from the same groups as now."

Four murdered in Artemisa province

The bodies of four homicide victims have been found west of Havana, reports the BBC. According to state newspaper Granma, the bodies were found on Tuesday, June 10 in the municipality of Bauta in Artemisa province. According to Cuba's Ministry of the Interior, the deaths were related to a plan to leave the country illegally "with outside support," and six individuals have been detained in relation to the deaths.

Private businesses take out leases in Santiago

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The Santiago de Cuba municipality is renting vacant commercial properties to private businesses as part of a larger urban renewal project for its historic district, reports Cuba Standard. The Office of the Curator in Santiago is directing the project. Those leasing the buildings will pay rent based on their budget and the type of business they are running. Rent will include the cost of any renovations to the buildings. Santiago's strategy is important, writes Cuba Standard, because it differs from that program in place in Old Havana, where the state oversees all businesses in the historic district.

SALVATION OF MANKIND BY NARCOTIC VEGETATION ERADICATION FROM THE AIR BY UNMANNED AIRCRAFT VEHICLES

Mr. President,

Unmanned Aircraft Vehicles

Development proved being capable of hitting even point targets. It is well known that Afghanistan has World record of Poppy Opium Production of about 200 tons annually yielded from a cultivated 157,000 hectares area. That enormous dope amount (90% of world opium production) is in my opinion the main financial source for Terror Organizations' Weaponry Acquisition. According to my assessment, UAV could have been Redemption for Entire Mankind if being utilized as follows: 2,4 D Defoliant is splashed on the Narcotic Vegetation causing its Desertification within several days inevitably. The following favorable consequences might have been anticipated:

1) Severing of Terror Organizations from their Financial Source that dry up with Narcotic Vegetation Desertification
2) Salvation of millions of Potential Drug Addicts from Awful Agony and Death
3) Rehabilitation of US Deterrence that has weakened considerably after Nine Eleven Horrendousness
4) Precipitation of NATO Troops Evacuation from Afghanistan as a result of UAV Bombardment Intensification resulting in Terror Suppression Reinforcement
5) Deterrence of El-Qaida Reactivation by leaving a Souvenir of dry Poppy-Opium Bushes from pulling out NATO Troops
6) I suggest having a Debate in the Senate that might hopefully lead to successful termination of the Afghan War after being stuck in its Marsh for 12 long years
7) Waiting for your Response as US friend since 1948
8) There could not have been any doubt about terminating the Armed Conflict in Afghanistan Honorably averting an Ignominious ending up as currently impending.
9) Similarly, Central American Dope Smuggling could have been drastically diminished by UAV Utilization for Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Grown on Mountainous Gradients. Very large amounts of Dope are smuggled annually into the US having found hitherto no efficacious way of overcoming that calamity
10) Please contact me by scheduling a meeting at US Embassy in Tel -Aviv for Clarifications with your experts' participation specializing in Explosives, Electronics and Aviation
11) I have got all the required specifications for getting mankind be extricated from the two conjugated calamities, Drugs inundation and Terror attacks of Innocent Population thanks to UAV activities.
12) To my great astonishment, my correspondence versus US Senate Committee on Armed Services has been irresponsive despite the extraordinary importance for entire Civilization Meanwhile as many as one billion of Muslims are threatening America encouraged by their Nine Eleven Precedent Success
13) In reminiscence, as many as 50,000 Aircraft were ordered according to Presidents' Roosevelt Ordinance after the Japanese Attack of Pearl Harbor while 7000 UAV by comparison are being idled in Storage letting the Afghan Armed Conflict be continued indefinitely.
14) Please let me explicate for US Air-Force an efficacious way emerging victorious from Afghan Entanglement in favor of Entire Mankind instead of suffering an ignominious defeat.
15) To my great surprise, US Does not exercise its Self Defense Right according to UN Charter Chapter 51 (1946), enabling Criminal Organizations of Third World Countries attacking it with impunity. Nine Eleven Catastrophe could have been averted if the US had utilized its complete Arsenal particularly UAV in high numbers instead of being kept idle in Magazines.
16) I propose meeting your Experts for UAV, Explosives and Electronics at US Embassy in Tel Aviv for thorough debate about Dual Headed Monster Decapitation in favor of beleaguered Mankind believing in great success of my Innovative Unprecedented Method as an only feasible efficacious expedient against it.
17) Is White House Correspondence Team busy to such an extent being unable responding even most important letters?

18) To my great Astonishment Dereliction of US Air Force results in smuggling of Tremendous Dope Amount from Central America via Mexico into the US with its Awful damage for many millions American's Health
19) I don't see any reason for hesitancy! The President may issue tomorrow an ordinance in order to open emergency Magazines, getting ten thousands of UAV
Aloft in order to achieve Narcotic Vegetation Desertification with achievement for Posterity
20) Emerge preferably with an Upper hand honorably instead of being ignominiously defeated!
21) Despite being Non US Citizen I think to have done my best in assisting ending up
Afghan War victoriously thanks to my Innovative Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Method, however not a single word of Acknowledgement has hitherto Reached my mailbox! In my opinion, Disparagement and Ungratefulness are conjugated at least according to my feeling!
22) There could not have been any justification keeping as many as 7000 UAV unused in magazines instead of operating them against Nine Eleven Cruel enemy. Moreover, US taxpayers have already paid for that arsenal!
23) I believe Mr. Attorney General that Narcotic Vegetation Desertification Utilizing UAV is the only Feasible way of getting Mankind been extricated from the Doubling Stricken Menace Grabbing, Drug and Terror Simultaneously.
24) November election is going to be beginning of President Obama last Congress Tenure working with but if the President is being able Indicating Monumental achievements. He might have been eligible into the Parlor of great Leaders having annihilated Drugs and Terror calamities for Posterity affluence
25) Wiping out Narcotic Vegetation and launching consequently an Overwhelming
Strike on Terror Organizations by UAV Utilization might have been an Unprecedented Achievement of Entire Mankind and President Obama personally.
26) Incredibly, no reaction has come from the White House in latest four years despite
My pure intention for assistance for the US as well as Entire Civilization!
27) In my opinion Nobel Institute might have contributed to a very great extent to Drug and Terror Monster Decapitation in favor of Entire Civilization.
28) Prime Minister of Israel might have contributed a great role in exerting an influence on US and Western Governments in General in a Universal Effort of Dual Headed Monster, Drugs and Terror simultaneous eradication

Be successful

Gideon Rodeh

There is no justification losing an Election Campaign Ignominiously instead of emerging Victorious honorably! The Democrats should have mobilized the entire US Media attacking the Republican for an Exploitation of US Contingency to vote against their own Interests in favor of big Oil Corporations! Such incessant Transmissions would have been a very efficacious Deterrence for most Democratic families to abstain from voting against their own Interests!

Be successful

Gideon, this is huge. Led by eight stalwart Democrats, the Senate Judiciary Committee has passed a constitutional amendment to overturn the awful Citizens United and McCutcheon Supreme Court decisions.

The next step will be a vote in the full Senate.

Sign the petition: The U.S. Senate must pass a constitutional amendment to overturn Citizens United and McCutcheon .

Citizens United and McCutcheon opened up the floodgates for unlimited campaign spending by the 1%, and we will keep seeing horrible court decisions like these until we change the U.S. Constitution to end the absurd notion that money is "speech."

That's why we are doing something amazing before the final Senate vote. Together with our progressive partners, we are going to deliver more than 2,000,000 signatures in support of the constitutional amendment to the offices of the 20 key Senators who will decide the outcome.

Gideon Rodeh, please sign your name before we deliver this mega-petition: The U.S. Senate must pass a Constitutional Amendment to overturn Citizens United and McCutcheon .

Keep fighting,

Dear Sir,

Subject: Disentanglement from Afghanistan

I have been conducting a pertinacious correspondence with your Committee in latest four years trying exerting pressure on US Establishment that might have eventually got NATO Troops been pulled out of Afghanistan. According to TV Program dedicated to US Arsenal as many as 7000 UAV are being stored unused in Magazines instead of attacking targets in Afghanistan with the following emerging advantages:
1) Severing Terror Organizations' from their Financial Sources
2) Salvation of millions of potential Drug Addicts from awful agony and death.
3) Acceleration of Troops pulling out from Afghanistan due to Intensification of Aerial raids.
4) Restoration of US Deterrence as a result of UAV strengthening.
I believe in Terror Overwhelming defeat under those circumstances.
5) I remember UN 1946 Chapter 51 (self defense right that every country deserves) but being surprised by US failing of its Exercise in spite of its Technical Preponderance
6) Despite my Thorough UAV Special Version Design for Narcotic Vegetation Eradication even one word of Acknowledgement has not reached my mailbox hitherto.
7) Ignominious for a Super Power isn't it?

Sincerely,

Gideon Rodeh

In case useful. Is there a time that is good talk?

The Clean Water Rule does not create new permitting requirements for agriculture nor add an economic burden for farmers. The EPA and Army Corps of Engineers recognize the value of farmers input—over the course of crafting the Clean Water Rule, they met with over 400 stakeholders and collected over 1 million comments. EPA and the Army Corps made significant changes between the proposed and final CWR to accommodate the agriculture community's concerns:

· The final rule retains all of the traditional Clean Water Act exemptions for agriculture, including exemptions for normal farming, silviculture, and ranching (plowing, seeding, cultivating, minor drainage, harvesting, and moving livestock).
· In addition, the final Clean Water Rule defines tributaries more clearly, emphasizing that it is not meant to cover erosion in a farmer's field. A tributary must show physical features of flowing water- a bed, bank, and ordinary high water mark.
· It also clearly sets limits on covering nearby waters that physical and measurable (1500 feet for adjacent waters and wetlands, 4000 feet for more isolated waters)
· Lastly, it focuses on streams, not ditches. It limits protection to ditches that are constructed out of streams or function like streams. Ditches that are not constructed in streams and only flow when it rains are not covered.
· The final rule does not: expand jurisdiction beyond the historic scope of the CWA, change private property rights, add new requirements for agriculture, regulate more ditches, address land use, and excludes groundwater, shallow subsurface flow, and tile drains.

The Farm Bureau is never going to be satisfied- their goal is to have no rule at all, or one that severely limits protections for our waterways. While the CWR doesn't address agriculture runoff, it's important to note that Iowa is having serious problems with nitrogen contamination and algae blooms in their waterways. Des Moines Water Works has identified that their drinking water sources are highly susceptible to contamination, and over 600 bodies of water in Iowa have been classified as "impaired" under the Clean Water Act. DMWW may need to build a new system to deal with this pollution at the cost of $150 million.

Vilsack has been helpful behind the scenes, but has mostly tried to avoid saying anything publicly about the rule. This is USDA's press release: "USDA urged the EPA to listen to input from farmers and agri-business owners who need clear expectations and long-term certainty so they can effectively run their operations. EPA is seeking to provide that certainty with the development of this Clean Water Rule, and we appreciate that Administrator McCarthy and her staff have made a very concerted effort to incorporate the agricultural community's views."

Hello John,

I hope all's well with you. The senior team is gelling in my imagination and I could use your input on a key decision.

Ed starts Monday, which is very exciting, and I've been doing informational interviews for the other senior hire. I think we should be clearer in the title and go for something like Managing Director for Policy, Government Affairs, and Operations or Managing Director and Director of Policy and Government Affairs.

While I'm exploring the field (and open to suggestion), I've also circled back with Elisabeth Jacobs. I continue to think she'd be great for our team, especially paired with Ed's management experience. Before, I was wary that she didn't bring enough experience, but with Ed on board, I think we'd be good. She wrote a nice memo of ideas she'd pursue on the policy side (attached), which I think pushes us in the right direction. Curious to hear if you agree.

Elisabeth will be sitting down with Ed, as well as Ira Fishman (who I really am learning a lot from) this week and I hope that we can decide by next Friday. If we go that route, the issue will be getting Sandler buy-in. I'd like to be able to tell them that you're in favor of her if that seems helpful — okay?

Happy to talk through this, but I also recall that the last time I brought her name up, you said "why haven't you hired her already?" I don't think we were talking about this specific role, so I wanted to circle back once more to make sure you agree.

Best,
Heather

Subject:	Updated Talking Points: Donald Trump's Islamaphobic Campaign Aids ISIS and Undermines Our Security

Updated talking points points below. As always, if you're going out on tv on this topic please let Alex or me know. Thanks!

Donald Trump's Islamophobic Campaign Aids ISIS and Undermines Our Security

Hell no, Hillary Clinton is not apologizing for calling out Donald Trump's dangerous rhetoric. Donald Trump should be apologizing for undermining our national security by helping ISIS recruit more terrorists.

News coverage and videos of Donald Trump's extreme, anti-Muslim rhetoric are all over Arabic-language television like Al-Jazeera and BBC Arabic. These clips are widely viewed and easily shared.

ISIS supporters and other terrorist groups are tweeting about and discussing his comments on social media, telling Muslim Americans to join their "committed brothers" in ISIS terrorities and pressuring them to "join the Army." And they need go no farther than point to their own televisions as proof.

In fact, terrorism experts across the board agree that his comments aid the efforts of terrorists like ISIS.

This includes the Pentagon, which spoke out about the danger it creates for our troops.

That's why Hillary Clinton will never back down from calling out Donald Trump's irresponsible rhetoric that makes the U.S. less safe.

Any of the Republican candidates who don't do the same have demonstrated yet one more reason they don't have the judgement to be commander in chief.

BACKGROUND: Experts have made perfectly clear that the Islamophobic rhetoric that Donald Trump is using to stoke Americans' fears play directly into the hands of ISIS and other terrorist groups:

· Rita Katz, SITE Intelligence Group : "They love him from the sense that he is supporting their rhetoric...They follow everything Donald Trump says. When he says, 'No Muslims should be allowed in America,' they tell people, 'We told you America hates Muslims and here is proof.'"

· Ted Koppel : Donald Trump is, in effect, the Recruiter-in-Chief for ISIS. ISIS wants nothing more right now than to have the world divided into Judeo-Christian on one side and the Islamic world on the other. That's exactly what Trump is doing for them.

· Washington Post's David Ignatius : "[Trump's] divisive comments play so directly into the polarizing strategies of our terrorist adversaries — who want to foment Western-Muslim hatred — that a case can be made that he has put the country at greater risk.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

· New York Times' Thomas Friedman : "Beyond playing into ISIS's hand by denigrating the U.S. presidency and our democratic ideals, Trump is doing real damage to America's ability to lead a coalition, the only vehicle that can effectively address this problem."

· Richard Engel : "So from the world perspective, it is absolutely an image, an impression, a black spot on our collective foreign policy and our conscience. And it also just feeds into the ISIS [Islamic State] narrative."

· Khalaf Al Habtoor : Extremists like ISIS "will thank Mr. Trump for his comments — this is very dangerous what he is doing to the United States"

· Terrorist Media Expert, Evan Kohlmann : Perhaps the most frightening thing about what Donald Trump is saying is that it's precisely what ISIS wants. They want a holy war between radical Islam and the west and right now Trump is giving it to them."

ISIS supporters and supporters of other terrorist groups have used social media to praise Trump for furthering their cause in the wake of his recent proposal to ban Muslims from entering the United States.

SITE Intelligence Group : "Following Donald Trump's statement to ban Muslims from entering the U.S., jihadists on Twitter expressed a lack of surprise, characterizing his proposal as Western oppression against Muslims. The following statements were made from December 9-12, 2015.

· User "Ali Abdillahi," an Islamic State (IS) supporter, was nonplussed by Trump's statement, claiming most non-Muslims likely share the same sentiment:

o "Why are people shocked with trump he only said what most kufar [disbelievers] are afraid of saying."

· A fighter for al-Nusra Front, "Abu Saeed Al-Halabi," found Trump's statement hypocritical and proposed a rhetorical "deal" with Trump in the context of U.S. foreign policy:

o "I agree with Trumps muslim remarks if the Americans stop invading muslim countries. We have a deal here Mr. Trump?"

· A pro-IS account under the name "Warrior" made a similar request of Trump. He argued if Muslims are banned in the U.S., they should be allowed to make travel to Muslim countries:

o "i wonder if president trump will allow muslims to leave the US for dalwah. he hates muslims so much, allow those that want to leave and live with other committed brothers and sisters without kuffar oppression. put your money where your mouth is Trump. more likely he will throw all muslims in US in prison as matter of "national security" #cowards"

· Furthermore, the account of "Amriki Mujaher," who implies himself to be American turned IS fighter, seemed to make a similar message:

o "You can be a good Muslim in America if you join the army or if you interpret for the troops. Otherwise, Trump has a point about you"

· ISIS supporter, @bintemergent : pleez Massa Trump doan trow i inta dat briarpatch! #IS #refugee strat &GreyZone destructionhttp://www.theguardian.com/commentisfree/2015/nov/15/terrorists-isis

Throughout the Middle East, coverage of Donald Trump's outrageous proposals are fostering resentment among Muslims.

Subject:	Congressional Investigations - Tomorrow

Hi Professor,

I am sorry to disturb you, but I have a quick question. My father, whom I believe you know (Mark Aronchick), will be in DC tomorrow. I was wondering if I would be able to bring him to class tomorrow night before he heads back to Philly. He always gets a kick out of sitting in on my classes, and I think he would find your class particularly enjoyable.

I completely understand if you would prefer that he not come given the size and confidentiality of the class. I wanted to clear it with you before I even mention the idea to him.

Please let me know!

Thanks Ann. I'm just going to do this, if you/Research are ok with it:

Families are stretched in a million directions. So are their budgets. Costs keep rising but most people's paychecks haven't moved in years – but corporate profits and CEO pay keep rising. Quality childcare costs more than college tuition in many states. The minimum wage is a poverty wage. Millions of Americans are held back by student debt. And at a time when more women than ever are their family's main bread winner, too often, they still don't get equal pay. Women of color earn least of all. And just yesterday, the Department of Labor released new data showing that, as our economy gets stronger, men's pay is going up more than twice as fast than women's pay.

On Thu, Oct 22, 2015 at 7:54 PM, Ann O'Leary <aoleary@hillaryclinton.com > wrote:
Two things:

(1) Apparently, DOL did release interesting pay disparity numbers today. See this WSJ piece . I think it would be good to add a line that says, "Yesterday, the US Department of Labor released new data showing that our economy is getting stronger, but that increases in pay for men and women are not growing at the same rate. Men who work full-time saw their pay increase at more than double the rate of women. With more than 2/3rds of our families relying on the income of women to keep their families afloat, this unequal pay growth hurts women, our families and our economy. Equal pay must be a priority if we are going to have a strong economy and strong families."

(2) For the Paul Ryan paragraph, instead of "flexibility," I'd focus that he was asking for a fair and predictable schedule - something that our low-wage workers are desperate to get. So change to:
Paid family leave; schedules that are fair and predictable; higher wages so you don't have to work two jobs to make ends meet, so you can be home at night with your kids – these aren't just challenges for women, they're challenges for America.

Subject: less prescriptive read out....

Here's a new draft of a less prescriptive read out – the sentence in parenthesis can be cut if needed. Further below is the white house statement. I suggest cutting the sentence on the economy (we can do that on background) so that our statement doesn't look less gracious than theirs.

"President-elect Barack Obama and Mrs. Michelle Obama were very warmly received today at the White House by President George Bush and First Lady Laura Bush. Upon arriving, President-elect Obama and President Bush proceeded to the Oval Office, where they had a productive and friendly meeting that lasted for XX minutes. They had a broad discussion about the importance of working together throughout the transition of government in light of the nation's many critical economic and security challenges. [Specifically, President-elect Obama stressed the need for immediate action on the economy, including the financial crisis facing the auto industry.] President-elect Obama thanked President Bush for his commitment to a smooth transition, and for his and First Lady Laura Bush's gracious hospitality in welcoming the Obama's to the White House."

White House

The President and the President-elect had a long meeting, described by the President as good, constructive, relaxed and friendly. They spoke about both domestic and international issues, though since it was a private meeting the White House will decline to comment on specifics. The President also showed President-elect Obama the living quarters, including the office the President uses, the Lincoln Bedroom, and the rooms for the Obamas' two young daughters. The President enjoyed his visit with the President-elect, and he again pledged a smooth transition to the next administration.

Race looks wide open in 13th Congressional District

By Jessica Parks, Inquirer Staff Writer

POSTED: April 29, 2014

Marjorie Margolies can't tap her general election funds

What was once viewed as a slam-dunk comeback for former U.S. Rep. Marjorie Margolies is turning into a knock-down, drag-out brawl with her three opponents in the 13th Congressional District, political observers say.

Margolies had been considered the front-runner in the race to replace Allyson Schwartz. A poll her campaign commissioned in August found 62 percent of likely Democratic primary voters recognized her, and 55 percent viewed her favorably.

But that early advantage has failed to push her opponents - State Rep. Brendan Boyle, physician Valerie Arkoosh, and State Sen. Daylin Leach - from contention. Each has built niches of support, with endorsements and money matching or exceeding Margolies'.

"I can give you a winning scenario for every one of those candidates," said Larry Ceisler, a political consultant who has ties to all four candidates but who said he wasn't backing one over the others. "As we get closer, it's going to tighten up even more," he said.

The candidates are scheduled to debate at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Philadelphia Portuguese Club, 2019 Rhawn St.

Over the last six months, Margolies' fund-raising has not kept up with her spending, and she has been battered by negative reports about her charity, her ex-husband's financial crimes, and her campaign's reliance on the Clintons (Chelsea Clinton is her daughter-in-law).

Last week, that criticism was amplified when Leach filed a complaint with the Federal Election Commission, alleging that Margolies misused money designated for the general election.

Six months ago, "I would have said [Margolies] is a 2-to-1 or 3-to-1 favorite," said Neil Oxman, a Democratic consultant who is not affiliated with the race. "Given what's happened with her finances, I think she's no longer the front-runner."

Margolies' campaign has denied breaking any finance laws. Her campaign manager, Ken Smukler, said internal polling indicated that she still had a strong lead in the race.

But with three weeks until the May 20 primary, independent observers said it was anyone's game.

"Each of the four candidates really has a strong argument that they're best equipped to win the primary," said Mark Nevins, a consultant with Dover Strategy Group who said he was "officially agnostic" on the race. He said the result would come down to "who has the most compelling message and the resources to get that message out on TV and by mail aggressively."

Leach and Boyle are running TV ads, and Arkoosh has independent radio ads and direct mail going out.

Margolies' campaign on Monday will open a Northeast Philadelphia office. But as of late March, it had spent no money on advertising or direct voter outreach, according to FEC reports. Her first TV ad is set to air this week.

Geography vs. gender

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The nominee will square off in the fall against the winner of the GOP race between retired U.S. Air Force Col. Beverly Plosa-Bowser and businessman Carson "Dee" Adcock.

Any Democrat is likely to have the advantage. The 13th District is reliably Democratic - roughly 60 percent - and the population is split evenly between Northeast Philadelphia and southern Montgomery County.

Margolies, Leach, and Arkoosh hail from Montgomery County - which could give Boyle an edge.

Oxman, a consultant with the Campaign Group in Philadelphia who isn't supporting any candidate, likes Boyle's odds.

He and others praised Boyle's ground game and said his support among trade unions and Philadelphia ward leaders would pay off on Election Day.

Boyle is "certainly going to win the city," Oxman said. "The question is, will he win the city by a large enough margin that whoever wins the suburbs will not matter?"

Ceisler and Nevins agreed the suburban split could be a deciding factor in Boyle's favor.

Margolies and Arkoosh have been campaigning hard on the importance of electing a woman to replace Schwartz, currently the only woman in Pennsylvania's congressional delegation.

Margolies has spent 20 years leading a charity that promotes women's leadership, and she casts herself as the leading proponent for women.

Arkoosh, who lobbied around the country for the Affordable Care Act and its women's health provisions, in the spring received a high-profile endorsement from the Women's Campaign Fund. Last week, the Women's Campaign Fund named Arkoosh one of its 40 "game changers" in U.S. politics.

Emily's List, a leading national women's political group, has yet to issue an endorsement in the 13th District.

Nevins said gender could sway some voters and noted that women tend to vote in "slightly larger numbers in elections like this." But because there are two women in the race, he said, "I'm not sure there's an obvious winner."

Going negative
Last week, the campaign took a negative turn when Leach accused Margolies of deliberately misusing campaign money.

Margolies' campaign has denied the allegations and hired a former FEC commissioner to represent her in the case.

The candidates have also turned up the heat to highlight their few policy differences.

Arkoosh has been attacking Margolies' 1994 plan to cut Social Security benefits and raise the retirement age. "Marjorie Margolies tried to slash our Social Security benefits," one of her campaign mailers declared.

In an e-mail Friday, Margolies called those mailers "intellectually dishonest" and has said she does not agree to benefit cuts or raising the retirement age.

"My opponents continue to attempt to scare seniors by citing positions I took over two decades ago as though they are current," Margolies wrote.

She has criticized Leach for supporting positions she says are politically untenable, among them legalizing marijuana and shifting to a single-payer health-care system.

Leach, Arkoosh, and Margolies have criticized Boyle for voting to tighten regulations on abortion providers. Five of the state's 22 clinics closed after the bill passed.

Boyle said he supported women's right to choose but defended the vote.

"I think it's a reasonable step to say there need to be reasonable health requirements and inspections," he said Friday.

Adding others.
Thank you all for confirming 2pm tomorrow. Brynne will send a race backgrounder shortly so you have relevant information. Margolies has a poll going in to field tonight so I though we could delay the call until we had some numbers. However, nick/ pir report that the NYT (Amy Chozick) is about to write a story and is specifically asking if Clintons plan to provide additional help and her story may run soon.
Do people have ability to call in earlier?
8:30am? Sorry to do this at such short notice. I know cdm is overseas so might not be easy to do.

We were hoping to avoid getting involved but now that it is less than a month out, and her campaign is not doing as well as she had hoped, we are getting increasing pressure to help.

CDM is in Africa so will try to keep this efficient but ideally we can touch on the 2014 plan for the fall as well.

In case useful. Is there a time that is good talk?

The Clean Water Rule does not create new permitting requirements for agriculture nor add an economic burden for farmers. The EPA and Army Corps of Engineers recognize the value of farmers input—over the course of crafting the Clean Water Rule, they met with over 400 stakeholders and collected over 1 million comments. EPA and the Army Corps made significant changes between the proposed and final CWR to accommodate the agriculture community's concerns:

· The final rule retains all of the traditional Clean Water Act exemptions for agriculture, including exemptions for normal farming, silviculture, and ranching (plowing, seeding, cultivating, minor drainage, harvesting, and moving livestock).
· In addition, the final Clean Water Rule defines tributaries more clearly, emphasizing that it is not meant to cover erosion in a farmer's field. A tributary must show physical features of flowing water- a bed, bank, and ordinary high water mark.
· It also clearly sets limits on covering nearby waters that physical and measurable (1500 feet for adjacent waters and wetlands, 4000 feet for more isolated waters)
· Lastly, it focuses on streams, not ditches. It limits protection to ditches that are constructed out of streams or function like streams. Ditches that are not constructed in streams and only flow when it rains are not covered.
· The final rule does not: expand jurisdiction beyond the historic scope of the CWA, change private property rights, add new requirements for agriculture, regulate more ditches, address land use, and excludes groundwater, shallow subsurface flow, and tile drains.

The Farm Bureau is never going to be satisfied- their goal is to have no rule at all, or one that severely limits protections for our waterways. While the CWR doesn't address agriculture runoff, it's important to note that Iowa is having serious problems with nitrogen contamination and algae blooms in their waterways. Des Moines Water Works has identified that their drinking water sources are highly susceptible to contamination, and over 600 bodies of water in Iowa have been classified as "impaired" under the Clean Water Act. DMWW may need to build a new system to deal with this pollution at the cost of $150 million.

Vilsack has been helpful behind the scenes, but has mostly tried to avoid saying anything publicly about the rule. This is USDA's press release: "USDA urged the EPA to listen to input from farmers and agri-business owners who need clear expectations and long-term certainty so they can effectively run their operations. EPA is seeking to provide that certainty with the development of this Clean Water Rule, and we appreciate that Administrator McCarthy and her staff have made a very concerted effort to incorporate the agricultural community's views."

Excellent and sorry to be late in. Just two small points recognizing it may ne too late:
1) You use low level offenders. Did you resist using non-violent offenders? Comes up like on page 22. Non-violent seems like the most sympathetic group, but maybe doesn't cover enough of the problem.
2) kinda light on treatment which is probably ok fpr this, but need to build that out in the future

Other than one other thing, I like the rest of the edits. The one thing: I think when the legitimate problems underscoring the current law are deferred to end, the memo seems to flow less logically. Moreover, I would like to acknowledge the bad news up front so she isn't thinking we are burying the problems. Principals sometimes don't trust the messenger who appears to be pooh poohing the challenge. If ok with you guys, I would like to get that stuff out of the way and restore that ordering. Chris - Thanks so much for talking tonight and spearheading the effort to develop a broader set of policies aimed at strengthening the ACA, as well as policies that will drive down costs, foster innovation and reform our delivery of health care.

I do think the memo that you wrote on the United Healthcare situation is very good and should go to HRC. I have edited and reordered it to: (1) have her focus on the arguments about why not to panic too much about United Health Care at the beginning of the memo; and (2) left the background on why ACA needs to be strengthened to the end; and (3) I deleted your list of improvements at the end as I'd prefer for us to work on giving her a package together rather than a few ideas now.

If this works for you and Jake, Shapiro can clean it up and get it into HRC's briefing book.

Thanks again,
Ann

You will note that besides raising the issues, I make a recommendation about HRC being a bit more aggressive about the need to strengthen the ACA over time. I also raise a few very preliminary new policy outlines that may spur further conversations with Ann, Jake and the rest of the team. Hope helpful for you all.

As I explained today, our transition research assistants will be cataloguing the campaign's policy promises. We're starting with the six major areas that have been identified: health, energy, economy, education, immigration, and national security. Then, working in conjunction with outside lawyers and the policy advisory groups, we'll cover several dozen other areas. For your review and comments are the first three drafts for health, energy, and the economy.

John, will we have a chance to discuss some of the issues surrounding a post-election code of conduct at tomorrow's meeting? It probably has the most immediate impact in thinking through personnel choices for the agency review process and in seeking security clearances. You mentioned an interest in having such a discussion on last Friday's call. If so, I'd like to let Bob Bauer know so that he can drop by for that portion of the meeting. Thanks, Cassandra

Reported Central Contentions Of New Benghazi Book Already Debunked

Blog ››› 54 minutes ago ››› MATT GERTZ

A new book that seeks to damage Hillary Clinton over the 2012 attacks in Benghazi reportedly relies on long-debunked conservative myths.

On September 9, WND Books will publish Aaron Klein's The REAL Benghazi Story: What the White House and Hillary Don't Want You to Know. The book's release is the latest salvo from a conservative cottage industry that aims to make money and political hay out of both Benghazi and Clinton smears .

Klein, a senior reporter for the birther site WND, is not a credible author -- one of his recent books portrayed President Obama as a "Manchurian Candidate" whose autobiography was ghostwritten by Bill Ayers.

The Washington Examiner's Paul Bedard, who reviewed an advance copy of Klein's Benghazi book, reported that Klein argues "Clinton was unwilling to provide additional security to the diplomatic outpost and even played a role in sending Stevens to his 'doomed mission.'" Klein's contention that Clinton "was unwilling to provide additional security to the diplomatic outpost" seems to reference the long-debunked conservative claim that the then-Secretary of State personally signed off on cables rejecting requests for additional security. When congressional Republicans first made that claim in April 2013, diplomatic reporters noted that every cable sent to the State Department from overseas facilities is addressed to the secretary, and every cable sent from the State Department is signed by the secretary, even though the secretary rarely reviews them.

In her 2014 memoir, Clinton wrote that she had never seen the cables in question, stating , "That's not how it works. It shouldn't. And it didn't."

Klein's claim that Clinton "played a role in sending Stevens" to his death in Benghazi has also been debunked . The State Department's Accountability Review Board reported that Stevens "made the decision to travel to Benghazi independently of Washington, per standard practice," with the trip's timing "driven in part by commitments in Tripoli." Gregory Hicks, who was Stevens' deputy, also testified before Congress that the ambassador "chose to go" to Benghazi.

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John,

As the catastrophic oil spill in the Gulf Coast continues to capture the nation's attention – now is the time that we MUST finally pass comprehensive clean energy and climate change legislation.

This is the chance to break our dangerous addiction to oil and hold Big Oil accountable for the damage they've done.

But with just hours until our fundraising deadline, our window of opportunity is closing and we're still $13,154 short of our goal.

Please, make a gift by midnight tonight to help us stand up to Big Oil and break our dangerous dependence on oil!

Just hours left to make sure we end our dirty addiction to oil.

We can stop Big Oil with your help.

Help us raise $13,154 by midnight TONIGHT.

Your gift now will:

- Pressure President Obama and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid to work with Senators to pass a strong bill – that makes real change. We'll be bringing the entire force of the LCV community down on the president and Senate leaders to push them to oppose new efforts to drill, and support comprehensive clean energy and climate legislation that limits carbon pollution and curbs our dependence on oil.
- Launch a massive public education campaign about how a transition to clean energy will jumpstart our economy. We'll counter Big Oil's PR machine and expose in key districts just how much of the public's safety and natural resources Big Oil is willing to sacrifice for short-term profit.
- Lay the groundwork for pro-environment victories at the ballot box. Using our decades of experience – including door-to-door canvassing, phone banks, and targeted mail, we'll show the public that this spill is going to cripple the coast's economy for years – and we'll make sure everyone knows whether their leaders stand with dirty polluters or support clean, renewable energy.

America is paying attention to just how dangerous our dependence on oil is NOW, but this window of opportunity won't last long.

We urgently need your help to show voters just how much of their safety and natural resources Big Oil's candidates are willing to sacrifice for short-term profit.

Please, fight to prevent more tragedies like the Gulf Oil Disaster - make a gift by midnight TONIGHT to help ensure it is the spill to end all spills.

Thank you for your support at this pivotal moment.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski,
League of Conservation Voters

OBAMA BIDEN

John --

This movement has always belonged to you.

So your feedback is crucial in determining how we continue to work together.

Take a couple minutes to help shape our plans for the future.

Our ground game was the decisive factor in this campaign. It was you -- your neighborhood teams, canvasses, phone banks, and your donations that helped give our operation the resources it needed -- that changed the face of American politics and gave President Barack Obama a new term in office.

But our work isn't over. We didn't do all this just to win a campaign. We have more progress to make, and there's only one way to do it: together.

Take this short survey on your campaign experience, and share your thoughts on how we all can continue supporting the President in his second term -- and the causes we care about for years to come:

Got his contact/his assist contact from Lindsay and just emailed about a call tomorrow. Will call in the AM if I don't hear back.

Notes from Lindsay:

Reid gave $5400 to HVF after YOUR meeting with him. Obviously, that was a little confusing because it's a double max, but to HVF. Lindsay had followed up with the specific contribution limits for HVF and HFA, so she thinks that he may have just blanked while writing the check.

Her last correspondence with him was over email shortly after he gave the $5400. She thanked him for the check and asked if he would host President Clinton. She gave him a date for the event and a deadline for his response, but she never heard back from him. She thinks he may have been traveling internationally (in China) so didn't take his unresponsiveness too seriously.

--CHRIS CHRISTIE AND MIKE HUCKABEE DON'T MAKE THE CUT: The lineup for the next GOP debate has been announced and Chris Christie and Mike Huckabee didn't make the cut for the main event, according to Fox Business. Participation in the Nov. 10 debate was based on 4 recent polls: the candidates needed to average 2.5 percent or higher to be featured in the main debate, and 1 percent or higher to be in the undercard debate. The eight who made the cut for the main stage are Donald Trump, Ben Carson, Marco Rubio, Ted Cruz, Jeb Bush, Carly Fiorina, John Kasich and Rand Paul. The candidates in the undercard are Christie and Huckabee as well as Jindal and Santorum, ABC's CORINNE CATHCART and RYAN STRUYK report. Those who didn't make the cut for either are Sen. Lindsey Graham, George Pataki and Jim Gilmore. http://abcn.ws/1kxDqNw

--MARCO RUBIO AND DONALD TRUMP ARE IN A FIGHT OVER FINANCES: "I find it ironic that the only person running for president that's ever declared a bankruptcy -- four times in the last 25 years -- is attacking anyone on finances," Rubio said on the campaign trail in New Hampshire yesterday in response to questions Trump has been raising about the Florida senator's personal finances. ABC's INES DE LA CUETARA and MICHAEL FALCONE report Trump has never filed for personal bankruptcy, but his company Trump Entertainment Resorts-- which he owned 28 percent of -- filed for bankruptcy four times, most recently in 2014. Wednesday in New Hampshire Trump attacked Rubio on the issue. http://abcn.ws/1KZn4T6

The 50-second ad titled 'Marco Rubio Is Hiding Something' focuses on attacking Rubio over his personal finances. The ad starts out with a clip from the last GOP debate when CNBC's Becky Quick asked Rubio to comment on "intermingling campaign money with personal money." The clip is followed up by a compilation of Rubio's answer and the media's reaction. The DNC wraps up the ad deeming 'Marco Rubio can't be trusted." WATCH : http://bit.ly/1l9WjXo

Now that Bernie Sanders is officially a Democrat, he has a chance Friday to define what kind of Democrat he intends to be. A forum in South Carolina -- not a debate, since the presidential candidates won't be on stage at the same time -- could be the venue for Sanders to enunciate how directly he plans to confront Hillary Clinton over questions of honesty and trustworthiness. Critically, after seeming to take her email server off the table as a campaign issue at the first debate last month, does Sanders want to put it back on? Given the hot hand Clinton has played of late, it's hard to imagine her stumbling in her path to the nomination without another Democrat throwing obstacles in her way. That hasn't been Sanders' style, but neither has he been a Democratic candidate for president before.

BEN CARSON LASHES OUT AT MEDIA OVER QUESTIONS ABOUT VIOLENT CHILDHOOD. Republican presidential contender Ben Carson is lashing out at the media, calling recent questions into his violent childhood past "a bunch of lies" and "pathetic." Carson has come under recent scrutiny after failed media attempts to verify the violent childhood incidents he has publicly recounted. He stands by those stories. "It is just garbage," Carson told CNN this morning. "We have too many things that are important to deal with." More from ABC's RYAN STRUYK: http://abcn.ws/1QiYSCm

WHAT WILL HILLARY CLINTON CALL BILL CLINTON IF SHE WINS? Hillary Clinton is taking on the Republicans -- and her now her husband -- boasting on ABC's "Jimmy Kimmel Live" that she would beat the two-term commander in chief if she went head-to-head with him in a presidential race, ABC's MATTHEW CLAIBORNE reports. "He would run again," Hillary Clinton said. "I don't want you to tell anybody that, but if he could he would." "So if I were going to run against him, would I win?" asked Clinton. "Yeah!" So if she wins the presidency, what would her husband be called? "First dude. First mate. First gentleman." Secretary Clinton joked. "It's a little more complicated with him because people still call former presidents 'Mr. President' so I have to really work on this." http://abcn.ws/1LoogFO

NOTED: BILL CLINTON SUPER-FANS OF THE 1990S REUNITING FOR HILLARY. The Bill Clinton super-fans of the 1990's are about to reunite -- this time for Hillary Clinton. They're called the "Arkansas Travelers." While they have no official affiliation with the campaign, many in this group of hundreds, which first formed in 1991 during Bill Clinton's presidential race, have long-lasting, personal relationships with the Clintons going back for years, ABC's LIZ KREUTZ notes. Some are even childhood friends. Now more than 20 years later, the "Travelers" are once again hitting the campaign trail in support of Hillary Clinton. A group of 18 of them are traveled from Little Rock to New Hampshire yesterday to begin a 5-day swing where they plan to go door-to-door talking to voters about their old-friend. http://abcn.ws/1iF9NIS

HOW CARLY FIORINA WANTS TO RUN THE COUNTRY LIKE A BUSINESS. Make no mistake, Carly Fiorina is running for president of the United States. But, at times, it seems like she's pitching herself to voters to be CEO, ABC's JORDYN PHELPS notes. "The only way you go from secretary to CEO is you challenge the status quo, you produce results, and you build teams," Fiorina recently told a gathering in Oskaloosa, Iowa. "And that is what we need to do for the American people." The former Hewlett-Packard chief, who made a name for by climbing the corporate ladder rather than rubbing shoulders in the halls of power, talks about governing in terms more akin to a business plan than a policy agenda -- placing emphasis on producing measurable results and talking tough about holding bureaucracies accountable, promising a "top-to-bottom review of every single agency's budget." http://abcn.ws/1Q86ZCK

BEN CARSON PROPOSES SEPARATE BATHROOMS FOR TRANSGENDER PEOPLE. In an interview Thursday with Fusion's Jorge Ramos, Ben Carson said there should be separate bathrooms for transgender people. "How about we have a transgender bathroom?" Carson told Ramos. "It's not fair for them to make everybody else uncomfortable." He added, "I think everybody has equal rights but I'm not sure anybody should have extra rights -- extra rights when it comes to redefining everything for everybody else and imposing your view on everybody else." According to ABC's ALANA ABRAMSON, the Human Rights Campaign immediately issued a statement condemning Carson's remarks and calling on the other candidates to do so as well. http://abcn.ws/1kx5uAy

WHAT JEB BUSH SAYS ABOUT GEORGE H. W. BUSH'S NEW BIOGRAPHY. Jon Meacham's new biography, "Destiny and Power: The American Odyssey of George Herbert Walker Bush," isn't out until next week, but it's already making waves. George H. W. Bush criticizes key members of his son George W. Bush's administration, including Vice President Dick Cheney and U.S. Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, according to a copy of the book obtained by ABC News. As his other son, Jeb Bush, was boarding a campaign bus Thursday after his last public campaign event of the day in New Hampshire, he said, "I love my dad, he's a great guy." The 2016 Republican presidential candidate also said he "think[s] the book's worth reading and I recommend it." ABC's CANDACE SMITH and VERONICA STRACQUALURSI have more. http://abcn.ws/1NSvdNK

CHRIS CHRISTIE COACHES TRUMP FOR UPCOMING 'SNL' APPEARANCE. They may be fighting for the same job, but New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie was quick to offer his best advice to Donald Trump in preparation of his upcoming "Saturday Night Live" appearance. "Have fun," Christie said in an interview with ABC's JONATHAN KARL Thursday. "It's a really good group of folks, it's entertaining, and they make you comfortable." Trump last hosted the show in 2004 during the first season of "The Apprentice," ABC's ALEXANDER MALLIN notes. He hosts the comedy show this Saturday night. http://abcn.ws/1Mfm1k1

JOHN KASICH DISMISSES DONALD TRUMP AND BEN CARSON POPULARITY AS TEMPORARY. Republican presidential candidate John Kasich said Thursday he thinks the popularity of fellow GOP candidates Donald Trump and Ben Carson is a temporary phenomenon and dismissed the recent rise of two other competitors, Sens. Marco Rubio, R-Florida, and Ted Cruz, R-Texas, saying voters should choose someone with executive experience. "There is no substitute for executive experience. I mean there is no substitute for having to answer to a bottom line, to go through crisis," Kasich, who served for 18 years in Congress and is in his second term as Ohio's governor, told ABC's JONATHAN KARL in New Hampshire Thursday. Trump, a businessman, and Carson, a former neurosurgeon, have never held elected office, though Trump has helmed a real estate empire and Carson founded a nonprofit that provides scholarships, ABC's BEN GITTLESON writes. http://abcn.ws/1MCloQP

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

DONALD TRUMP AND BEN CARSON AUTHORIZED FOR SECRET SERVICE PROTECTION. Republican presidential candidates Donald Trump and Ben Carson will soon be protected by the agency that protects President Obama. Homeland Security Secretary Jeh Johnson has authorized United States Secret Service protection for the two GOP candidates, according to a statement released Thursday by the Department of Homeland Security. ABC's JACK DATE reports Trump and Ben Carson first requested protection from the Secret Service in October. http://abcn.ws/1Pq5fTL

Friend --

This Thursday, President Obama will be coming to speak in College Park, MD. Following his major address on health reform to Congress last week, we're at an important turning point in our push for real reform, and it's critical that we seize this moment.

So we're inviting folks like you to come and support him. Please join us -- here are the details:

What: Health Reform Rally with President Obama

Where: Comcast Center
1 Terrapin Trail
College Park, MD 20742

When: Thursday, September 17th
Doors Open: 9:00 a.m.
Start Time: 11:00 a.m.

RSVP

Last fall, when Swiftboaters and special interests attacked President Obama, folks like you came to his defense. We knocked on doors, talked to neighbors, and made our voices heard.

Now, we need to do it again. This time, he's under attack by Washington insiders, insurance companies, and well-financed special interests who don't go a day without spreading lies and stirring up fear. We need to show that we're sick and tired of it, and that we're ready for real change, this year.

Join us on Thursday to stand up for President Obama and publicly show your support for the big changes that the President is fighting for and that this country needs.

Admission is on a first-come, first-served basis, so please arrive as early as possible.

RSVP today:

Thanks,

Jason

John,
I hope this email finds you well. I know this summer is keeping you busy, but I certainly hope you've found some time to get away. Linda and I are actually heading to Italy tomorrow!

Before I leave, I wanted to check in and see if you were still willing and available to meet with Ambassador Shen from TECRO before the summer is over. I know Veronica has been in touch with your office to work on this, but hasn't had any luck finding a date.

I hope we can make it work.

All the best.

Tom

Hello Joe and Bob,

I hope this finds you well!

Mr. Podesta has asked us to check on a few things for him with respect to 12C. I don't know if these things fall under your responsibilities, but if not, perhaps you can point me in the right direction:

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

- the French doors in the living room do not close properly (after the hardware replacement)

- there is a strip of metal missing between two of the glass panes on the right-hand French door in the living room

- there is some peeling paint on the ceiling of the living room (close to the French doors) that is in need of repair

- there is a small defect in the window frame on the south-facing window that needs to be repaired

Please advise how we can get these items addressed and resolved.

Thanks

Hi John - Thanks for your informative and energizing presentation in Chicago today, and most importantly, thanks for your commitment to electing Hillary as our next President.

Thanks, too, for speaking to me about the National Leadership Circle program. As we discussed, the NLC was an extraordinarily successful off-cycle fund raising vehicle for the DNC, and I believe it has great potential as a national program in Hillary's campaign. This program has proven to be an effective way to engage mid-level donors and keep them engaged over a log period of time. I'm happy to provide you with more information, answer any questions, and discuss how the NLC could be tailored as a national program in Hillary's campaign. I'm available by phone, email, or an in-person meeting in Chicago, New York, or another location as necessary.

For your convenience, attached are electronic versions of the documents I gave you today, as well as the invitations to the Chicago NLC 2014-15 events. Thanks again.

Best,

Susan Berghoef

Hey John –

Maura emailed you earlier to let you know how bad things are getting. But we haven't gotten the response we need – we're still $6,814 short for tonight.

If you want to beat Hayworth and Boehner, it's not enough to just talk about it. You have to donate today.

If (and ONLY if) everyone I'm including here gives $250, we'll be able to respond to Congresswoman Hayworth's million dollar ads and win. Otherwise… all Boehner all the time. This is the best link to get the money to the stations FAST: https://secure.actblue.com/contribute/page/spmrapidresponse

I'm counting on your help to get us to the winning number.

I'm distressed that DWS hired a convention CEO without consulting us after Charlie and I both told them repeatedly that we expected to be consulted--and we were under the impression they would. They didn't consult the White House either.
Madame Secretary, I'm not going to call anyone or say anything until you have your conversation with DWS, but this concerns me a lot.
John--you, Charlie and I may need to sit down with Debbie to make clear how we want things to change/ improve before we are willing to consider playing ball with them.

Dear John,

We fought long and hard to strengthen and pass the Climate Security Act in the Senate, and you played a huge part.

On Friday, there were not enough votes to overcome the filibuster, but our tireless efforts were hardly in vain. We succeeded in putting a majority of the Senate on record in support of cap-and-trade legislation, and we have set the stage for significant action next year.

This is a missed opportunity for 2008 and one that will come back to haunt the minority of Senators who sided with Big Oil and Dirty Coal by refusing to break the filibuster, refusing to help families struggling with ever-increasing gas prices.

Rest assured, we will let their constituents know where their loyalties lie. That includes Sen. McConnell, Sen. Inhofe, and their allies who consistently ignore our harmful addiction to foreign oil and the escalating global warming crisis.

John, it's all about next year, and we need to ramp up our efforts right now. I'm making it a top priority to elect a 60-vote, filibuster-proof, pro-environment majority this November. Friends of Big Oil and Dirty Coal will no longer have the power to use the appalling political stall tactics we have just seen.

Our mission has already begun, and we are shifting into high gear. I can't thank you enough for your passion and dedication to the environment. We will keep you updated on ways to stay involved in the most important battle of our generation.

Together, we will pass an even stronger law next year.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski

I'd suggested Tom Freedman earlier as coleader with Beth. I definitely want Tom involved in the group in a serious way, but as I work with Beth and build the group and workplan, there are several reasons to prefer Blair as co-lead (ie, more tech & private sector experience).

Not certain yet that Blair can do it, but wanted to see if you had any issues/questions.

We need to prosecute cheats, we need to reinstate Glass-Steagall, and if a bank is too big to fail without wrecking our nation's economy…then it needs to be broken up before it breaks us…again.

Goldman Sachs is one of the biggest repeat-offending investment banks in America. Recently, the CEO of Goldman Sachs let his employees know that he'd be just fine with either Bush or Clinton.

I bet he would...

Well, I've got news for the bullies of Wall Street --

Dear John,

Next week, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear one of the most significant cases for abortion access since Roe v. Wade.

The stakes are high — an adverse ruling in this case would shutter nearly all of the abortion clinics in Texas. Many other states would soon follow suit, and women in even larger swaths of the country could lose access to abortion care.

That's why we'll be rallying on the steps of the Supreme Court on Wednesday morning to protect abortion access and stand with Whole Woman's Health. We urge you to "join" us by voting for your favorite rally sign slogan (or sharing one of your own).

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

We'll make rally signs featuring the most popular slogans (and the most compelling write-in suggestions) and take them to Wednesday's rally.

Vote here for your favorite slogan:

- Stand with Whole Woman's Health
- Yes, mess with Texas (HB2)!
- March Madness = Closing Abortion Clinics
- Protect Abortion Access #StopTheSham
- Tell Politicians: Exit the Exam Room
- Hands off my health care
- My rights. My choice.
- Forward, not backward!
- Don't mess with Texas WOMEN!

Click here to vote for your favorite slogan (or share one of your own) — and together we will stand with Whole Woman's Health and protect abortion access.

Can't wait to hear from you!

Subject:	[big campaign] Kerry Set To Rip Into McCain

The whole speech reads great on paper, he's on between 9 and 10 ET, after Bill Clinton.

John Kerry Set To Rip Into McCain

Those waiting to hear a more aggressive critique of John McCain at the Democratic National Convention need to tune in tonight for Sen. John Kerry.

In prepared remarks, the 2004 Democratic nominee pillories McCain with the strongest language yet uttered from the convention podium.

Kerry describes McCain as "insulting" and "desperate' for questioning Obama's patriotism, and "pathetic" for continuing to support President Bush's war policy; he digs at McCain's age, saying voters should elect a president based on judgment and character, not "years on this earth"; and he hammers McCain and Bush on foreign affairs, charging that their policies have left "Hamas, Hezbollah, the Taliban and dictators everywhere...on the march."

"I have known and been friends with John McCain for almost 22 years," Kerry says at one point during a riff on the GOP nominee's flip-flops, "but every day now I learn something new about candidate McCain."

"Let me tell you, before he ever debates Barack Obama, John McCain should finish the debate with himself," Kerry charges. "Candidate McCain says he would now vote against the immigration bill that Senator McCain wrote. Are you kidding? Talk about being before it before you're against it."

Finally, Kerry ties McCain to the "fear and smear" tactics of Karl Rove, saying his campaign has "nothing left but personal attacks."

Beyond the harsh criticisms, Kerry's speech also includes a great deal of praise for Barack Obama's character and record, and also a nod to the Massachusetts Senator's failed presidential run. "I will always remember how we stood together in 2004, not just in a campaign, but for a cause," he concludes. "Now again we stand together in the ranks, ready to fight."

Hillary Clinton quits Clinton Foundation

She joined the board soon after stepping down as secretary of state in 2013.

By Kenneth P. Vogel

Updated 4/12/15 8:32 PM EDT

Hillary Clinton on Sunday resigned from the board of the Clinton Foundation to focus on her just-launched presidential campaign, POLITICO has learned.

Clinton announced her resignation in an email to the foundation's employees Sunday afternoon, not long after launching her presidential campaign with a digital media blitz.

"While I have cherished my time serving on the board and engaging in the day-to-day work of the Foundation, in order to devote myself to this new, all-encompassing endeavor, I have resigned from the Board of Directors effective today," she wrote in an email obtained by POLITICO. "As I step down from that position, I know that I am leaving the Foundation in great hands. I am equally as excited that Chelsea will continue to lead the Foundation's mission with Bill, building upon our family's commitment to help all people live their best life story."

Hillary Clinton had joined the board of the $2-billion foundation soon after stepping down as Secretary of State in February 2013. Her daughter Chelsea became vice chair at the same time, and the foundation, which had been established as the William J. Clinton Presidential Foundation, was renamed the Bill, Hillary and Chelsea Foundation.

Foundation officials did not immediately respond Sunday afternoon to questions about whether they intended to rename the non-profit group again or whether they would re-impose a ban on accepting new foreign contributions now that Hillary Clinton is a declared presidential candidate. The foundation indicated it would consider foregoing foreign cash during a presidential campaign and potential Clinton administration.

The foundation had accepted restrictions on foreign donations and meetings before Clinton's confirmation as secretary of state, at the urging of President Barack Obama's transition team. But the foundation resumed accepting foreign cash and holding foreign meetings after Clinton stepped down, drawing fire from Republicans, who have alleged that the money constitutes a conflict of interest.

Former President Bill Clinton started the foundation with nine staffers in Little Rock, and grew it into an international charitable powerhouse with 2,200 employees around the world and various initiatives and affiliates, including fighting AIDS in Africa and childhood obesity at home.

Hillary and Chelsea Clinton championed efforts at the foundation to fight the illegal ivory trade in Africa and had launched a high-profile initiative called "No Ceilings" to increase the rights and public life participation of women and girls around the world.

In her Sunday email, Hillary Clinton said she was "thrilled by the opportunity to work together as a family and to contribute to the life-changing work that Bill began here in New York City nearly 15 years ago."

She told foundation employees it had been an "honor to work alongside and collaborate with you." She signed off, "You have been an integral part of the Foundation's success, and I look forward to seeing how the

I wanted to let y ou know what Senator Pressler and I finally connected.

He is going to draft an op-ed endorsing Hillary and send me a draft version in the next two weeks. He will focus his endorsement on her long time work helping our veterans, as well as her foreign policy background. Ben on the surrogates team will help him refine his op-ed, and we will place it on his behalf.

Once we have this product, we will use it to book him on TV and radio.

He'd also like to help us on health care...he says he was one of the only GOP Senators in '94 who was partially supportive of her efforts.

Very good discussion. Also says post endorsement, he's happy to help with any "Republicans for Hillary" organizing activities, and also happy to help us in the Mormon community.

Thanks for connecting us!

John --

Our campaign? It's built from the ground up.

The other side? They're happy relying on billionaires and big checks to fuel their shady outside groups.

We don't have that luxury, so we rely on you.

In just 24 hours, we'll hit our April fundraising deadline, and right now, we're still $2,400 short of our grassroots goal. If we're going to stay ahead of special interest groups and Super PACs, then we need you to step up before the deadline.

24 HOURS TO GO: Will you donate $10 or more before midnight tomorrow to become a grassroots supporter of our campaign?

Less than four months since I came to Washington, the other side has already targeted me with nasty attacks ads. They're trying to tear us down, and ultimately, defeat us.

I'm determined to keep fighting for the hardworking people of Illinois, but I need your help to do it.

Will you step up before tomorrow's deadline?

I hope I can count on you.

Sorry I missed this call. On train to NYC. Consistent with your email, reco prioritizing Romney "Factory"; McCain "McSame"; McCain "our Children" and "birthday"; McCain "one man forever" 1000/100 years; both Romney and McCain bush and priorities scripts. Also, McCain "Bomb bomb bomb" spots which could be updated with his recent promise of "more wars." Please do look into "laugh". We all gave it high marks. Romney economy spot is good idea too, Tara. Again, apologies if all this decided already.

Subject: New Communications Hub

Dear Hansjörg,

I'm sorry I missed your party last weekend. I heard it was a great event.

As I promised, I interviewed the person proposed to run the campaign communications hub we discussed at the last board meeting. After a long search and many discussions of what would work best to aid the campaigns the Foundation is funding, the staff selected Arkadi Gerney who has been running CAP Action Fund. While I knew and was generally impressed with his work at CAPAF, I didn't work directly with him so I came to the interview with fresh eyes. After the interview I am convinced he is an excellent choice. His skill set fits well with what I believe is needed to successfully run the campaign and communications "war room." I thought his strategic approach to the communications Hub and how to run campaigns and enhance the work and effectiveness of the grantees was spot on. He has the experience and vision to make this concept work and to be a great force multiplier for existing grantee partners. Because there will be some growing pains as with all new ventures, I recommend we commit to three years (assuming no performance issues) to allow enough time to provide proof of concept. I recommend going forward and hiring him. If you would like to discuss, please call me at 202-999-0738.

Another billionaire v the people of California over beach access Editorial LA Times

California Coastal Commission Survey Exhibit

> South of Half Moon Bay, billionaire venture capitalist Vinod Khosla is fighting the [the people of California,] California Coastal Commission and the Surfrider Foundation, an environmental group, over a half-mile road that snakes across his 53-acre rural property. The road is the only dry land access from Highway 1 to what's known as Martins Beach. Since the 1920s, people have walked or driven it to the beach to fish, surf and swim. The previous owners even did a little business with the beachgoers, charging for parking, running a convenience store near the shoreline and maintaining restrooms.
> Khosla, who bought the property in 2008 for $32.5 million but does not live on it, says he initially kept the road open but closed it intermittently — as, he says, the previous owners did. But in 2009, he ran afoul of San Mateo County officials who said the access was intended to be year-round, and ordered him to keep the gate open or apply for a permit to do otherwise. Khosla went to court. A San Mateo County Superior Court judge ruled that Khosla should either get permission to close the gate or work out an alternative. Instead, Khosla closed the gate and halted all public access. . . .
> Up and down California, public access is constantly under siege as beachfront property owners battle with the Coastal Commission over pathways, parking, decks and fire rings. . . .

> The reason the pathway should stay open is that the public has been using it for nearly 100 years. The Coastal Commission has begun a survey to make a case that the public has "prescriptive rights" to it by virtue of that long tradition. Already, dozens of beachgoers have submitted declarations documenting — sometimes with photos — their use and their families' use of the pathway going back to the 1920s.
> The road should not be closed. . . . Property owners in the California coastal zone do not have an automatic right to tamper with the public's access to the water.

>> The stars of meteorology were aligned as the White House made its case on climate change.
>> NBC's Al Roker was there, along with more than 100 national and local television weather forecasters — some of them doing their TV hits from the White House lawn. They met with the president and his advisers. And the administration hoped the broadcasters' popular appeal would help sell the public on the need to take action on global warming.
>> No, that wasn't the big climate-weather outreach<https://www.politicopro.com/story/energy/?id=33545> that the Obama White House held on Tuesday. It was a quite similar event <http://www.nytimes.com/1997/10/02/us/clinton-nudges-tv-forecasters-on-warming.html> that the Clinton White House held in October 1997, as that administration was preparing for discussions of a global climate agreement in Kyoto, Japan.
>> But yes, Roker was invited both times.
>> Bracewell & Giuliani energy specialist Frank Maisano pointed out the coincidence Tuesday morning, in an email with the subject line: "Seems like we've done this before."
>> As with President Barack Obama's event on Tuesday, the hope for then-President Bill Clinton's administration was that the TV forecasters could reach viewers who weren't paying attention to — or being informed by — the usual White House press corps.
>> "You, just in the way you comment on the events that you cover, may have a real effect on the American people," Clinton told the broadcasters, according to The New York Times' coverage of the two-day seminar. He added, "I do think it's very important, since you have more influence than anybody does on how the American people think about this, that at least you know what you believe and how you think we should proceed."
>> The Times remarked: "Playing host to the nation's television weather forecasters was the most innovative step in a White House campaign to rally public support for new binding global targets for restricting greenhouse gases."
>> Of course, the Senate never ratified the Kyoto agreement.
>> The Obama administration is now in a similar position as it prepares for international talks in Paris with hopes of reaching a binding global agreement on how to counteract climate change. But Obama has also gone ahead with regulations to tackle the problem, including next month's debut of EPA rules meant to throttle greenhouse gas pollution from thousands of power plants.
>> "The only difference seems to be the underlying use of regulations to do it more effectively this time," Maisano commented. "Clinton and his folks wanted to regulate power plants, but never went that far."

- Where are our most likely areas of growth?
- What are our regional vote goals?
- What's our path to victory?

Hi John - It was great to see you for dinner on Tuesday. Glad you're enjoying what you're doing. Steve and I spoke about diverse candidates who could serve in the administration, reviewed the lists from 2009, and came up with three top-level candidates. I or Steve or both of us have worked with each of them and can personally vouch for them. Their resumes are attached.

JULIE MARTINEZ ORTEGA - Julie has a J.D. and a Ph.D. in Social Policy. Ironically enough, her dissertation was on health insurance enrollment patterns of Mexican American children. She currently serves as a Senior Advisor to the Democracy Alliance's Latino Engagement Fund, and I have frequently called on her for advice on the work I'm doing at the Foundation. She also works with Steve in PowerPAC's DC office (she and Steve are college friends). HHS would probably be the best fit for her. Or Labor, as Julie has extensive experience doing research for the labor movement.

ROSA MARIA CASTANEDA - Rosa currently works at the Pew Charitable Trust as Manager of Government Performance. She led Pew's 3-year strategic planning effort looking at their work in state budget and economic policy, youth workforce, and employment. She has a unique mix of fiscal, economic, and social policy. HHS or the Domestic Policy Counsel would be good fits for her.

SMEETA RAMARATHNAM - Smeeta is South Asian, and we may have discussed her before as she was being considered for one of the SEC Commissioner openings. She is currently the Chief of Staff to Commissioner Aguilar and has worked at the SEC for almost nine years now (previously, she worked for Commissioner Campos). Prior to going to the SEC, Smeeta was a securities lawyer at Foley and Lardner. We think she'd make an excellent Assistant Secretary in Treasury.

We've got a few more feelers out and will let you know what we come up with. So glad you're trying to move on these diversity issues!

Best,

Susan

Hi John,

I'm attaching (and will print for your review in the morning) an updated version of the read-ahead, with material from NSC and CEQ and a "goals" call-out as you requested.

I also spoke with Rohan about several pending items, but he flagged a couple of things it may be good to emphasize to the group Thursday:

> Encouraging Cabinet participation around the National Climate Assessment – doing interviews, social media, etc (I made a couple of small tweaks to the item to note that it's an opportunity for all federal agencies in the text)
> Making sure non-EPA agencies are read into the power plant rule – talking to state leaders about their implementation plans ahead of the rule roll-out in the course of their normal conversations, getting the latest TPs into briefing books, etc – to try and amplify, at least within state governments, some of the outreach McCarthy has been doing. Rohan would like to see them doing public things, but I think that's probably a harder sell. May be worth flagging, though. This is not reflected in any changes in the attached.

Will touch base with you in the morning on all of the above.

Thanks!

The first link is to a segment from the John Oliver show on tobacco. It is both very funny and very disturbing
The second link is to an article about the reaction of Gates and Bloomberg to the issues describe. We may join them.
Lastly is an email discussing related issues and the trade agreement.
Am I wrong to be concerned?

Subject: more on tobacco company lawsuits

Herb,

In case this is of interest. The tobacco lawsuits against countries are made under investor-state dispute mechanism (ISDS) whose expansion appears to be a key part of the European and Pacific trade deals being negotiated by our US Trade Representative.

The article below references a letter to Congress and the US Trade Rep expressing concerns about ISDS, signed by over a hundred legal scholars.

Here's a brief on ISDS lawsuits, from notes I had taken a few months ago:

> Under the "Investor-State" dispute system, individual corporations have equal standing with national governments of signatory countries. They can skirt domestic laws and courts and sue governments directly before tribunals of three private sector lawyers, under a World Bank or UN system.
> - Tribunals are made of panels of three attorneys who rotate between being "judges" and bringing cases against governments on behalf of corporations.
> - $3.5 billion has been paid to foreign investors under such deals, there are around $14 billion in claims pending, targeting environmental, energy, and public health policies for "indirect expropriation."
> - Corporations like Exxon and Dow have launched 500 cases against 95 governments under similar rules in other trade agreements
> - The rules allow for compensation for loss of "expected future profits" caused by health, labor, and environmental laws (indirect or regulatory "takings" compensation)
> "Minimum standard treatment" provisions in the new trade deals could have a chilling effect or in some cases hold regulation at a standstill, because new protections on health and the environment affecting a company's profit would entitle the company to compensation.

UPDATE 1-Push against investment rules in U.S. trade deals picks up

Thu Mar 12, 2015 12:22am IST

(Adds quote from letter, updates signatories, adds link to letter, quote from USTR)

(Reuters) - Law professors from across the United States urged lawmakers to keep rules to protect foreign investors out of trade pacts on Wednesday, warning they would give big companies too much power.

The warning came in a letter from 129 law professors and lecturers, from schools including Columbia and Harvard. It marked the latest step in a campaign against investor-state dispute settlement, or ISDS, laws spearheaded by influential Democratic Senator Elizabeth Warren.

"ISDS threatens domestic sovereignty by empowering foreign corporations to bypass domestic court systems and privately enforce terms of a trade agreement," the letter said.

Warren told reporters that the letter showed rules allowing private companies to seek compensation from governments "should raise alarm bells for everyone."

United Nations figures show investor-state claims have jumped since 2002, with high-profile cases such as a challenge by tobacco company Philip Morris' Asian arm to Australia's plain cigarette packaging law.

Consumer group Public Citizen and the libertarian Cato Institute have both warned that cases against the United States may increase as more large companies are headquartered outside the country.

The U.S. Trade Representative's office released a fact sheet to rebut what it said were incorrect claims and said most ISDS cases were brought by individuals or small and medium sized businesses.

"ISDS arbitration is needed because the potential for bias can be high in situations where a foreign investor is seeking to redress injury in a domestic court, especially against the government itself," USTR said.

National Association of Manufacturers Vice President Linda Dempsey said many foreign governments discriminated against U.S. companies, stole technology and denied them fair treatment.

"ISDS provides an internationally recognized enforcement mechanism that ensures investors an objective hearing if a foreign government denies the most basic internationally recognized rights," she said.

A Center for Strategic and International Studies report found 40 percent of claims arose in sectors with high levels of state intervention, such as oil, and most are against countries with weak legal institutions, like Argentina and Venezuela.

U.S. companies have brought 15 percent of pending cases before the World Bank's International Center for Settlement of Investment Disputes. There are no pending cases against Washington, which has never lost a case.

The rules are also a source of controversy in a proposed trade pact with the European Union, with particularly fierce opposition in Germany, Europe's largest exporter.

Subject:	Drugs and Terror Monster conjugated

Gideon Rodeh mond1967@015.net.il

I have been corresponding with the White House for many Years beginnings as Early as Nine Eleven Horrendousness trying to avert such a recurrence by any feasible Technique According to my analysis a breakthrough advent has appeared with Unmanned Aircraft Vehicles Development proved being capable of hitting even point targets. It is well known that Afghanistan has World record of Poppy Opium Production of about 200 tons annually yielded from a cultivated 157,000 hectares area. That enormous dope amount (90% of world opium production) is in my opinion the main financial source for Terror Organizations' Weaponry Acquisition. According to my assessment, UAV could have been Redemption for Entire Mankind if being utilized as follows:
2,4 D Defoliant is splashed on the Narcotic Vegetation causing its Desertification within several days inevitably. The following favorable consequences might have been anticipated:
1) Severing of Terror Organizations from their Financial Source that dry up with Narcotic Vegetation Desertification
2) Salvation of millions of Potential Drug Addicts from Awful Agony and Death
3) Rehabilitation of US Deterrence that has weakened considerably after Nine Eleven Horrendousness
4) Precipitation of NATO Troops Evacuation from Afghanistan as a result of UAV
Bombardment Intensification resulting in Terror Suppression Reinforcement
5) Deterrence of El-Qaida Reactivation by leaving a Souvenir of dry Poppy-Opium Bushes from pulling out NATO Troops
6) I suggest having a Debate in the Senate that might hopefully lead to successful termination of the Afghan War after being stuck in its Marsh for 12 long years
7) Waiting for your Response as US friend since 1948
8) There could not have been any doubt about terminating the Armed Conflict in Afghanistan Honorably averting an Ignominious ending up as currently impending.
9) Similarly, Central American Dope Smuggling could have been drastically diminished by UAV Utilization for Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Grown on Mountainous Gradients. Very large amounts of Dope are smuggled annually into the US having found hitherto no efficacious way of overcoming that calamity
10) Please contact me by scheduling a meeting at US Embassy in Tel -Aviv for Clarifications with your experts' participation specializing in Explosives, Electronics and Aviation
11) I have got all the required specifications for getting mankind be extricated from the two conjugated calamities, Drugs inundation and Terror attacks of Innocent Population thanks to UAV activities.
12) To my great astonishment, my correspondence versus US Senate Committee on Armed Services has been irresponsive despite the extraordinary importance for entire Civilization Meanwhile as many as one billion of Muslims are threatening America encouraged by their Nine Eleven Precedent Success
13) In reminiscence, as many as 50,000 Aircraft were ordered according to Presidents' Roosevelt Ordinance after the Japanese Attack of Pearl Harbor while 7000 UAV by comparison are being idled in Storage letting the Afghan Armed Conflict be continued indefinitely.
14) Please let me explicate for US Air-Force an efficacious way emerging victorious from Afghan Entanglement in favor of Entire Mankind instead of suffering an ignominious defeat.
15) To my great surprise, US Does not exercise its Self Defense Right according to UN Charter Chapter 51 (1946), enabling Criminal Organizations of Third World Countries attacking it with impunity. Nine Eleven Catastrophe could have been averted if the US had utilized its complete Arsenal particularly UAV in high numbers instead of being kept idle in Magazines.
16) I propose meeting your Experts for UAV, Explosives and Electronics at US Embassy in Tel Aviv for thorough debate about Dual Headed Monster Decapitation in favor of beleaguered Mankind believing in great success of my Innovative Unprecedented Method as an only feasible efficacious expedient against it.
17) Is White House Correspondence Team busy to such an extent being unable responding even most important letters?
18) To my great Astonishment Dereliction of US Air Force results in smuggling of Tremendous Dope Amount from Central America via Mexico into the US with its Awful damage for many millions American's Health
19) I don't see any reason for hesitancy! The President may issue tomorrow an ordinance in order to open emergency Magazines, getting ten thousands of UAV

Aloft in order to achieve Narcotic Vegetation Desertification with achievement for Posterity
20) Emerge preferably with an Upper hand honorably instead of being ignominiously defeated!
21) Despite being Non US Citizen I think to have done my best in assisting ending up
Afghan War victoriously thanks to my Innovative Narcotic Vegetation Eradication Method, however not a single word of Acknowledgement has hitherto Reached my mailbox! In my opinion, Disparagement and Ungratefulness are conjugated at least according to my feeling!
22) There could not have been any justification keeping as many as 7000 UAV unused in magazines instead of operating them against Nine Eleven Cruel enemy. Moreover, US taxpayers have already paid for that arsenal!
23) I believe Mr. Attorney General that Narcotic Vegetation Desertification Utilizing UAV is the only Feasible way of getting Mankind been extricated from the Doubling Stricken Menace Grabbing, Drug and Terror Simultaneously.
24) November election is going to be beginning of President Obama last Congress Tenure working with but if the President is being able indicating a monumental achievements, He might have been eligible into the Parlor of great Leaders having annihilated Drugs and Terror calamities for Posterity affluence
25) Wiping out Narcotic Vegetation and launching consequently an Overwhelming
Strike on Terror Organizations by UAV Utilization might have been an Unprecedented Achievement of Entire Mankind and President Obama personally.
26) Incredibly, no reaction has come from the White House in latest four years despite
My pure intention for assistance for the US as well as Entire Civilization!
27) In my opinion Nobel Institute might have contributed to a very great extent to Drug and Terror Monster Decapitation in favor of Entire Civilization.
28) Prime Minister of Israel might have contributed a great role in exerting an influence on US and Western Governments in General in a Universal Effort of Dual Headed Monster, Drugs and Terror simultaneous eradication

Gary, Dennis and John,

Hope guys are enjoying the holidays.

Robert Roche is going to be in NYC on 12/16 and 12/17. We were hoping to come in to follow-up on our conversation this past summer.

As you probably know, we're making great progress with Ed Meier and the policy working groups. We're also talking with Maura Keefe, Ed and Gary about bringing Bus Fwd's members to Brooklyn for a tour and briefing. (We did something similar in Chicago for the Obama/Biden re-elect, and it was very successful.) We're also making great progress with the Convention teams about programming in Philadelphia.

Robert and I would like to continue our conversation about list swaps with Business Forward, as well as other help we can provide individually.

If you are available for drinks/dinner on 12/16 (in Brooklyn or Manhattan), or a meeting during the morning of 12/17, we would greatly appreciate it.

Jim

Taxi Mogul, Filing Bankruptcy, Sees Uber-Citibank Plot
The Upshot (NYT) – Josh Barro
Evgeny Freidman, the taxi mogul, warned New York officials this spring that he was too big to fail and asked for a bailout of the taxi industry. He didn't get one. So, on Wednesday, he filed a petition to put many of his taxi medallion-owning companies into bankruptcy.

Social Security Disability Benefits Face Cuts in 2016, Trustees Say
New York Times – Robert Pear
The trustees of Social Security, including three cabinet secretaries, said the disability trust fund would be depleted in the last quarter of 2016. After that, they said, benefits would automatically be cut by 19 percent because revenues, largely from payroll taxes, would be sufficient to cover only 81 percent of scheduled benefit payments.

A City for the Poor, Rich and In Between
New York Times – Editorial Board
A year and a half into his mayoralty, it's now Bill de Blasio's New York. So is the city starting to look like the one he promised to build, one where the poor and the working class can afford to live?

Socialism, American-Style
New York Times – Gar Alperovitz and Thomas M. Hanna
[I]n an oddly fitting twist, these days the mantra of public control in exchange for lower taxes has been embraced by a surprising quarter of the American political leadership: conservatives.

I.R.S. Targets Tax Dodge by Private Equity Firms
New York Times – Gretchen Morgenson
The Internal Revenue Service on Wednesday proposed a rule aimed at ending a common and lucrative practice among private equity firms that allows them to artificially lower their partners' personal income tax bills.

In labor victory, fast food workers in New York will get a $15 minimum wage
Wonkblog – Lydia DePillis
The boost comes as a result of Gov. Andrew Cuomo's decision to convene a Wage Board, which has the power to set a new minimum for the fast food industry's 200,000 workers in New York without the approval of the state legislature. On Wednesday, the Board recommended that the new floor be phased in, rising to $15 by the end of 2018 in New York City, and July of 2021 for the rest of the state.

Uber triumphs as New York City officials abandon plans to limit transportation company
Wonkblog – Emily Badger
Officials here on Wednesday abruptly abandoned plans to rein in the powerful tech and transit company Uber, dropping a fiercely contested proposal to cap the company's growth in its largest market.

#BlackLivesMatter shows there are problems in American life that can't be blamed on the rich
Vox – Matthew Yglesias
The bad run-ins with #BlackLivesMatter activists that Bernie Sanders and Martin O'Malley had at the Netroots Nation conference were in part verbal gaffes, failures to identify in a linguistically appropriate way with the specific claims about racial justice that BLM activists are trying to advance. But Julia Azari, a political scientist at Marquette University, points out that there's a deeper tension between economic populism and the cause of racial justice.

Is the push for a $15-an-hour minimum wage a good idea?
Vox – Matthew Yglesias
The $15 figure is not an accident, but it's also not the product of careful research. It's a slogan from an activist movement — Fight for $15 — that's been working for years and is now racking up an impressive series of policy wins.

Sanders rallies for $15 minimum wage
The Hill – Tim Devaney
The Democratic presidential candidate is pushing legislation that would raise the minimum wage for all workers to $15 an hour by 2020. It's part of a larger effort by Sanders to turn the spotlight on income inequality on the campaign trail.

Capitol Food Workers Bring Income Inequality to Congress' Front Step Roll Call – Bridget Bowman
The previous Capitol protests called on President Barack Obama to take executive action to raise contract-worker wages, which would not have affected workers in the legislative branch. But on Wednesday, workers called on Congress to raise the minimum wage, and presidential candidate and Sen. Bernard Sanders, I-Vt., and Rep. Keith Ellison, D-Minn., announced at the rally they would introduce legislation to more than double the federal minimum wage to $15 an hour.

John -- Democrats have a very serious problem on our hands.

Democrats got shellacked in yet another off-year election with historically low turnout last month. Democratic Leader Nancy Pelosi diagnosed Democrats' number-one electoral problem: voter turnout.

It was about turnout. We have to increase turnout [everyw here]. And if the turnout would have been bigger, the election would have been different.

Leader Pelosi is 100% correct: Democrats will not be able to take back lost majorities in Congress or state legislatures unless we improve our voter turnout.

We have less than a year to mobilize, John.

Take our Democratic Strategy Questionnaire to help us mobilize Democratic voters in 2016 >>

How do we do improve turnout? We organize.

We don't agonize. we organize. And that's what we have to do, whether it's in the South, the Midwest, in suburban areas, in rural areas, and in the West... It's about showing people the connection, as MLK said, between the ballot, legislation and their lives.

As veteran organizers who've worked on some of the most competitive Congressional races in the entire country, we know what it takes to improve turnout.

It takes organizing to persuade Democrats who don't always vote to get to the polls. It's a big effort, but we have proven strategies and know how to get it done. We just need the resources to do it.

John, we're trying to build a sustainable organization that can improve voter turnout among Democrats for election cycles to come. This is the first step.

Take our Democratic Strategy Questionnaire so we don't have to face another big loss in 2016:

No street running or walking for that matter. The first time I was there I carved out 1/2 mile track around the parking lot and swimming pool, all behind the Jersey barriers. The second time, the hotel had a treadmill, but you had to hold on to the handle bars because the left side and the right side were on separate belts going at slightly different speeds. Neither ideal.

Dear John,

Ben Carson has a money problem. A big one.

He may have raked in $21 million last quarter, but 54 cents of every dollar he raised is going right back into fundraising.

It's a colossal waste of his donors' support and hard-earned money. Luckily, no Democrats are making that same mistake.

Because of the powerful fundraising tools we've built over the past 10 years at ActBlue, candidates on our side can raise money from grassroots money and put it straight into organizing work. That's how they win elections.

If you want to help Democrats build strong, grassroots campaigns now and in the future, chip in $15 a month to help us expand our tools so we can help even more campaigns.

Because you've saved your payment information with ActBlue Express, your donation will go through immediately:

"Republican candidates are at a disadvantage because there's no GOP equivalent to ActBlue."

That's what The Atlantic had to say about the GOP's abysmal grassroots fundraising numbers.

We know first hand how hard it is for campaigns to raise money online effectively, and we've been working to make it easier for Democrats for over 10 years.

And all that hard work pays off when Democrats are able to raise money faster and more effectively than their Republican challengers.

Will you chip in $15 a month to help us keep improving our tools so we can hold onto our advantage?

One note just for you and jen:

Kelley talked to me about NSN, Rand, and their decision to cut them off and also desire that CAP absorb them. She also said you john had said you were not sure you were interested and couldnt decide anytime soon. She pressed that, if we were to do so and do so before her march meeting, that would be great for her. Pete had Rudy doing a review of strategic space in Nat'l security -- cnas, other groups, who might remain, etc. after that discussion re ns planning before you left. I dont know yet what they are recommending.

Mostly good news. First the good.

Spoke to Kelly. American Progress is again a recommended APO in the ideas area and this portfolio will last for 3 years.

Most of the existing ideas groups were renewed. (CCC reclassified; kirwan dropped.). Again no targets although ranges of levels of support smaller groups could absorb. They added a legal subgroup and ACS, Brennan, and one other I didnt know were added.

What's more they have a good number of new partners who say they are signing up, and virtually everyone has said they are interested in CAP. We chatted briefly about my new friend Jack Hidary from DA dinner/cash for clunkers among these.

bad news: felicia wong will talk to us about AGAIN refining their metrics and biannual reporting. And a significant evaluation of the portfolio will begin 18 months into the 3 year period.

Finally, we talked about how to predict level of contributions. On one hand the partners are more commited to change and the moment than ever. Upbeat. And new partners are high on CAP. On other hand, big ones are predicting deep financial woes. Kelly's best guess was we plan for 20 percent less than 08 and be pleasantly surprised when we do better. Its just a guess, but...

Subject: [big campaign] Minnesota state shutdown

As workers protest, Minnesota government shuts down

Union members: 'We want to work for Minnesota!'

By Sam Lane | 07.01.11 | 8:00 am
The Minnesota Independent

Nere, a worker in the state's Department of Labor and Industry and a member of the Minnesota Association of Professional Employees, began chatting with a student representative from Minnesota College Republicans about the numbers behind the budget dispute that has caused a historic shutdown.

"This is going to be a tragedy," Nere said, scanning a growing crowd at the Capitol. "It's going to be a huge hardship. Are we going to look like Minnesota, or are we going to look like Mississippi?"

With Gov. Mark Dayton unable to come to terms with Republican legislative leaders on a budget deal late Thursday night, the state government shut down and the fate of up to 23,000 state employees who have received layoff notices is highly uncertain.

A crowd of hundreds of state workers, including members of Minnesota's two largest public employees' unions — MAPE and AFSCME Council 5 — filled the steps of the Capitol Thursday night for a Shutdown Eve Vigil. Protesters held small signs — most calling for increased taxes on the state's wealthiest 2 percent — as they dabbed sweat from their faces. Cries of "We want to work for Minnesota!" and "Tax the rich!" rang through the area. Participants ranged from those in wheelchairs to infants to disgruntled, but motivated state workers.

Even a few legislators made their way to a window at the front of the Capitol, holding candles and watching the protest.

"The Republican legislature has spent the last six months bashing and demonizing public employees," AFSCME Council 5 director Eliot Seide shouted into a microphone at the top of the steps to a chorus of boos.

Throughout the night, religious leaders and public employees made their way to the microphone, using rhetoric of "brothers and sisters" to address the crowd. The Twin Cities Labor Chorus sang "This land is your land," among other songs. Speakers discussed the importance of the public sector, bashing the GOP-controlled legislature for what they perceived as disdain towards state employees. They spoke in support of Dayton, calling for the DFL governor to stay strong through the conversations.

"Tonight, our hearts and souls go out to all of you because it's the public sector that makes this state work," said Marcia Zimmerman, a rabbi at Minneapolis' Temple Israel.

But ralliers with highly negative attitudes flooded the Capitol entrance.

Rebecca Carpentier works for HIRED, an agency which helps low-income adults, dislocated workers, welfare-to-work individuals, refugees and youth find jobs and job training.

“We’re putting people to work only to find out they can’t work,” said Carpentier. “That’s bullshit … Everyone wants the workforce working. I work at an agency to do that. But they’re cutting our fingers and toes off.”

Nearby, B.J. Wuollet engaged members of the College Republicans — seemingly the only conservative representation on the steps of the Capitol — in an argument about the role of government.

“My sister will not be able to feed her children or take them to the doctor,” said Wuollet, who was frequently heard telling the small group of Republicans they were “bumming Jesus out.”

Ryan Lyk, chairman of Minnesota College Republicans, fired back, calling Dayton’s unwillingness to sign a budget bill a “bad move.”

“At the very least, they need to figure out their differences,” Lyk said. “We need to keep government going to some extent.”

Dayton addressed the press and many Republican legislators as protestors continued to shout and sing, the St. Paul skyline behind them.

“I deeply regret that the last week of intense negotiations between the Republican legislative leaders and Senator Bakk, Representative Thissen, and myself have failed to bridge the divide between us,” Dayton said .

After Dayton and Republicans put all their offers on the table, a $1.4 billion gap remained between the two proposals, the governor said. He added that he, Thissen and Bakk made two offers Thursday, which involved raising revenues by increases taxes only on Minnesotans who make more than $1 million per year. Dayton said the Department of Revenue reported that figure includes 0.3 percent of the state’s population.

“I will continue — tonight, tomorrow, and however long it takes — to find a fair and balance compromise,” Dayton said to close his speech. “I welcome Republicans to join with me – my door is always open. I believe the people of Minnesota are with me. I ask them to join me in standing up for our State’s future.”

Republican lawmakers said the rift remains because they can’t support Dayton’s plan for dealing with the state’s $5 billion deficit.

“We will not saddle our children and grandchildren with mounds of debts, with promises for funding levels that will not be there in the future,” House Speaker Kurt Zellers, R-Maple Grove, said, according to the Star Tribune. “This is debt that they can’t afford. It’s debt that we can’t afford right now.”

As the midnight deadline neared and Twitter buzzed with thoughts on the shutdown and complaints about the state’s politicians, the gathering at the Capitol began to disperse.

“It’s time for [Republican legislators] to act responsibly,” Seide told the Minnesota Independent after the vigil. “A little adult action would be nice. I just hope the legislators can come to their senses quickly.”

Dear John,
It's a pleasure to meet you virtually. We are very excited to have you speak at our event on November 2nd. I wanted to check on two details with you: 1) The Georgetown Climate Change Center and Initiative on Catholic Social Thought & Public Life would like to invite the media to this event, which will also be live streamed online. Are you are comfortable with the media attending the event? 2) On a more banal note, do you still have your GULC Adjunct parking pass or would you like us to provide you a visitor parking pass for the day?

Thank you again John for joining in this dialogue and please don't hesitate to reach out if you have additional questions.

This incorporates high-level feedback from JDP.

Please send feedback and clearances by 6pm if possible so we can get this to tonight's book. If folks have vocal objections, will of course revise expectations.

Meet Bruce Majors: The Tea Partier Advising Beck Rally-Goers To Stay Off The Green And Yellow Lines

Bruce Majors

On Monday, a Maine tea party blog created a sensation when it published a "visitor's guide" to Washington, D.C. for tea party activists coming to the city this weekend to attend Fox News host Glenn Beck's big rally. The guide was widely mocked on blogs and cable news for its paranoid warnings about the vast majority of the city, but overlooked so far is the author of the guide — right-wing activist Bruce Majors.

While the guide's absurd warnings could be dismissed as written by an overly-cautious out-of-towner who doesn't understand that D.C., Majors should know better — he's "lived and worked in DC since 1980 (in 3 of the cities 4 quadrants)," according to his blog. Majors should also be intimately acquainted with the unsafe zones of the city, as he is a Realtor who is currently listing several homes (his company has many more) deep within the forbidden zone, and even near the dreaded Green and Yellow Metro lines. And apparently his political views seep into his business, as one client was forced to find another agent after Majors "was extremely inappropriate when he began discussing President Obama and how evil he is."

But "Majors is no mere small-time troll or newcomer." He is an active "Tea Partycommunity organizer in Washington, D.C.," and a major online organizer, especially atTea Party Patriots. On that site, he is the second biggest poster of all time, with 2277 messages, to the group's official email listerv:

All time

2868	Brian Bertha
2277	Bruce
1949	Rick C
1783	Andrew Ian Dodge
935	hobbsteaparty
866	Fritz
787	sheri1449
715	Saska

He's organized protests online, and is the owner of the Tea Party Professionals group on Linkedin. He was also identified as a "LP [Libertarian Party] campaigner and everyone's-facebook-friend" by a libertarian blog. He also appears to have written for the American Spectator, among other publications.

A frequent commenter on progressive blogs, Majors describes himself on his OpenSalon.com profile as an "Anarcho-capitalist revolutionary sharpening his guillotine." On Talking Points Memo — where he was flagged with a "Troll Alert" and the subject to a lengthy profile — his bio states that he is "[l]ooking for employment asguillotine operator for citizens' tribunal."

Indeed, elsewhere in Majors 'extensive online presence, there is a clear flirtation with violence as a political tool. In a Facebook note titled "We will remember in November," Majors listed the names of all the members of Congress who voted for the Affordable Care Act — dubbed the "The Executioner's List" — followed by a picture of a guillotine and accompanied by this call to action:

Call Capitol Hill and promise them retribution. Not just in their next race, but in their attempt to run for or be appointed to ANY office, and any private enterprise they will engage in in the future. And any member of their family.

Commenting on a TPM story, Majors wrote, "Poor walking cadaver [Senate Majority Leader] Harry Reid [D-NV] shouldn't run fake tea party candidates to split the opposition vote against him. Someone might drop a plane on him. They alreadydropped a truck on his family," referring to a car accident that seriously injured Reid's wife and daughter. His Facebook page also features two jokes about President Obama's death (and that he is a Muslim), and a picture of a sign referencing the Thomas Jefferson quote, "The tree of liberty must be refreshed from time to time with the blood of patriots and tyrants."

Like his visitor's guide, which offered advice to dealing with "African immigrants ," Major's other writings have clear racial undertones. In a tweet linking to an article about Supreme Court Justice Elena Kagan and affirmative action, Majors wrote, "Kagan says Obama is 'my niggah .'" In another tweet linking to a video of Obama, Majors tweeted, "Poor little flop eared bitch . People are so mean to him." Upon news of White House economic adviser Christina Romer's upcoming departure, Majors tweeted, "Congratulations Christiina Romer! A house slave is now free . But all us field slaves are still in chains!" On the Shirley Sherrod dust up, Majors wrote :

[I]t is clear that most black Democrats in politics & the media are complete knaves and idiots (much like their white counterparts). The purpose of their constant race focus is, as Angela Codevilla discusses in his American Spectator article, to have a charge, racism, which which they can convict average Americans of a crime so they can then demand to enslave them.

Majors also posted a picture on his Facebook page comparing Fist Lady Michele Obama to Chewbacca from Star Wars:

In addition, Majors appears to be a birther, posting images on his Facebook page of aforged Kenyan birth certificate that birthers claim is authentic, and several birther joke images , including a sign saying, "Illegal immigration is destroying this county — look what it did to the White House."

TPM's Troll Watch reported that Majors has also conducted "direct e-mail harassment and identity theft against liberals," using stolen screen names to harass commentors on blogs he has been banned from. Indeed, he is the subject of several threads on online forums warning about his harassment, and he reportedly told one woman who accused him of using multiple screen names to hide his identity, "you silly facist bitch . Do not tell me what screen name I can use or what I am free to say."

Dear Mary and John,

Zoe raved about the pork loin she had at your home several years ago. So, we think of you often and especially when we use John's "pork loin rub" recipe.

Thank God, we are all well. Zoe is still in Florence on her semester abroad from UCSB and returns December 19th. I went to visit her in October. Nick went fishing in Alaska this summer and brought back 50 pounds of salmon and halibut.

We send you our best wishes for a wonderful Thanksgiving with the family.

Love,

Maria, Nick and Zoe

Sorry to come in late - very bad wireless access the last two days.

I have one big, general concern with these scripts which is that none of them connect to breaking down barriers message she is using. In fact none of them connect with anything she is saying on the road (except WJC and Obama examples). I don't see a clear way to connect these to earned media.

John/Robby/Jen/Jake –

Wanted to pass along a script packet that the TV team is working on to test in groups tonight/Monday – which will inform a decisions for next week in March 15 states. We're roughing a couple of them for groups tonight, and also working on some filming opportunities (workers, HRC speech on March 4th, etc.). But see if you feel like the messages here are on track.

GMMB went ahead and took a cut at "Makers" – which I think visually works really nicely.

https://hfa2016.box.com/s/dpk0sjb88l0jcvhy5s98sgf5ruyuraz2

pw: fridaytest

Few additional notes:

1. "This President" was at the request of President Clinton – for testing purposes
2. We're also testing "Sophie the Giraffe": https://app.frame.io/f/uS55uHDV
3. We don't think Dennis Leary is actually doing the VO on "wham bam" – but would be a similar style gritty VO.
4. Jake – a few specific questions:
    a. In "Makers" – are we now OK with this: Will be the President who will force companies that outsource jobs or move profits overseas to pay a price.
    b. And "In Places Like This" – with: And make them pay a penalty if they ever outsource jobs overseas [slight edit from script].

Please share any and all feedback, this afternoon ideally, as folks are mocking a couple of these up for groups. But work will continue into the weekend.

Thanks.

Happy New Year John & Mary,

After all of our pushing, thanks to you, we met our goal for the end of quarter deadline. Let me tell you, I am very proud of what we were able to do together in this last quarter. We were able to exceed our goal in just under three months, which is no small feat.

But now as we welcome the new year we will set our focus ahead on what matters most which is fighting for working families. So I am asking you to continue on this journey and stand with me through election day. Together we can be formidable and bring the fight to the halls of Congress.

Happy New Year, peace, and blessings from my family to yours!

Hey folks,

This started going out to our list just a few minutes ago and we are going to use it to try and get some traction on the lobbyist angle. We think that personifying Charlie Black is the way to go. Please pile on if interested.

The poll can also be accessed from our homepage. http://www.moveon.org.

Subject: [Bounce] (2,643,657; IDef9d42; 12651) McCain's lobbyist problem

Dear MoveOn member,

John McCain says he's a defender of democracy. But the folks running his campaign have been playing for the other team.

Two of John McCain's senior campaign staff were forced to resign this week after revelations that their lobbying firm was paid hundreds of thousands of dollars to represent Burma's brutal military dictatorship.[1]

And it gets worse—turns out this goes all the way to the top. Charlie Black, McCain's campaign chairman, ran a lobbying firm that represented brutal dictators like Ferdinand Marcos in the Philippines and Mobutu Sese Seko in Zaire—along with terrorist rebel Jonas Savimbi in Angola. Together, these men have been responsible for massive human suffering.[2]

And for good measure, Charlie Black has represented war profiteer Blackwater Worldwide and Iraqi fraudster Ahmed Chalabi.[3]

John McCain has a lobbyist problem, and we thought he could use your advice. What should Senator McCain do about his top adviser, Charlie Black? We'll release the results to the media—and forward your advice to Senator McCain himself. And we're working on a hard-hitting web ad about Charlie Black that we'll release soon.

Click below to choose which message to send to John McCain:

Fire Black. Fire Charlie Black if he doesn't resign first.

Fire all the lobbyists. Fire Charlie Black, plus all 112 lobbyists running your campaign,[4] including campaign co-chair Tom Loeffler, who has represented the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, a notorious human rights abuser.[5]

Don't sweat it. The media is so sold on your "maverick" image that corrupt figures in your inner circle won't actually hurt you.

Go all in. Hire more lobbyists who've worked for evil dictators. Maybe Kim Jong-il or Idi Amin.

Tell us what you think and spread the word! This survey's kind of funny, but our goal is deadly serious. If hundreds of thousands of us weigh in, we can show the media that John McCain's campaign has a growing liability: the fact that his inner circle is filled with lobbyists who've worked for everything he claims to be against.

Thanks for all you do.

P.S. McCain's campaign staff have too many connections to dictators to list in this email. It's unbelievable. But the non-partisan reform group Public Campaign Action Fund created a great fact sheet laying it all out:

Pro-Obama group defying Obama, staying in business

Steve Phillips, whose California-based pro-Obama PowerPAC.org backed the Illinois Senator with paid media and minority voting drives in the primaries, writes on Huffington Post that independent groups will continue to play a major role on the Democratic side of the campaign.

That's in spite of the directives out of Chicago that donors should give their money to the campaign and the DNC, which have essentially shut down other groups after Obama donors closed their checkbooks.

But Phillips -- the son-in-law of the Democratic mega-donor Sandler family -- says he expects $100 million to be spent by existing outside advocacy groups and by his own organization this cycle. Notably, this spending seems to be focused largely on turnout, which may pose less of a threat to Obama's stress on controlling his message than would TV ads.

He writes:

> Contrary to earlier reports about the demise of independent efforts this cycle, the work in 2008 will be robust, vibrant, and more coordinated than ever before. In 2008, the progressive movement is taking on an unprecedented collaboration of grassroots groups to raise $100 million that will mobilize millions of new voters and engage them in effective organizations that will be around long after November 4....
> Through an effort dubbed the Jimmie Lee Jackson Project, PowerPAC will collaborate with groups like the NAACP, National Coalition on Black Civic Participation, the Pushback Network, and others to coordinate non-partisan registration, education, and mobilization efforts of African American voters during the General Election. Jimmie Lee Jackson was a 24-year-old civil rights demonstrator whose death at the hands of Alabama State Troopers led to the Selma-Montgomery march and passage of the Voting Rights Act in 1965. Our coordinated Black voter drive will register and mobilize one million new Black voters through a $10 million, multi-state mobilization in states such as Virginia, North Carolina, Mississippi, and Georgia.
> PowerPAC will also collaborate with the major grassroots mobilization efforts led by America Votes and its 30-plus partner organizations, representing the largest progressive issue-based organizations in the country. In a national collaborative table and a series of collaborative tables in 14 states, these groups are dividing up constituencies and coordinating communication and mobilization efforts to educate voters about the national and down-ticket races.
> Working from a common voter file, long-standing groups like the Sierra Club will contact 700,000 members and other voters concerned about environmental issues; the Campaign for Community Change will organize immigrant advocates and workers; Emily's List and Planned Parenthood will carry the message to female voters; and the United States Student Association, Young Democrats of America and League of Young Voters will mobilize the millennial generation.

Attached is a revised draft infrastructure memo that seeks to take into account conversations I have had with Justin and Doug but more my frame trying to capture theirs so mistakes are mine as opposed to theirs.

In terms of who might be the kitchen cabinet besides doug and justin advising, I welcome suggestions -- as written now, they are two who are compensated to do that with the opportunity for expansion with the personal office cos/ceo serving as the hub (this will make sense when you read memo).

Please review and advise on suggested edits.

Subject: Flat Earth Five: Match Deadline Tonight!

LCV VICTORY FUND

DEADLINE TONIGHT: Please make your donation and help LCV Victory Fund defeat the Flat Earth Five . Every donation made between now and midnight will be TRIPLED.

John -

The Flat Earth Five are on the defense.

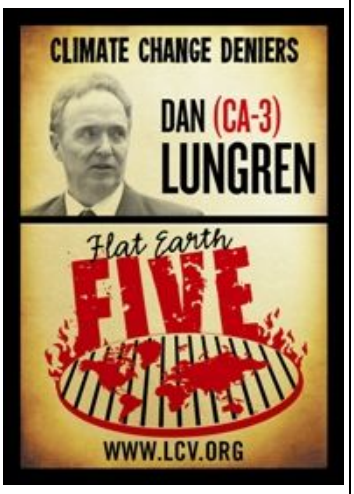
Ever since LCV Victory Fund announced our new campaign to defeat the Flat Earth Five, thousands of LCV supporters have contributed to our efforts to take down some of the worst anti-science, climate-denying members of the U.S. House of Representatives.

If you planned to add your support to this campaign, the time is right now. There's less than 100 days left until November 6th and there is still a mountain of work to be done. Knowing that they will be targeted for defeat by LCV Victory Fund, the Flat Earth Five are ramping up their campaigns, and calling in the reinforcements. We need to keep up the pressure!



TRIPLE Your IMPACT: Time is running out. Donate to LCV Victory Fund to help defeat the Flat Earth Five .

With campaign efforts ramping up and the media jumping on the story, we're ready to add the next member of the Flat Earth Five to the roster: Rep. Dan Lungren (R-CA).

Rep. Dan Lungren (R-CA) has a lifetime LCV score of just 4 percent and has made numerous outrageous statements on climate change. Lungren claims that "ideological bias" is driving efforts to curb climate change, but his own ideology is unchallenged by facts. He points to an obscure 1974 article in Time magazine about an "impending ice age" as an excuse for dismissing scientists' "dire predictions" about climate change threats. Lungren has declared that EPA regulation of carbon is a "vicious blow" to "our freedom" that gives the EPA the power "to effectively control … the way in which we breathe."

The Flat Earth Five are supported by polluting interests' deep pockets who are willing to say (and spend) just about anything to win in November. And let's not forget the hundreds of millions that corporate special interests – backed by Karl Rove and the Koch Brothers – have pledged to spend to win the White House, Senate, and House.

MIDNIGHT DEADLINE: Help defeat Rep. Dan Lungren and all of the Flat Earth Five

A contribution to LCV Victory Fund is the most effective way to keep climate deniers from winning the White House and taking over Congress.

Donate today to reach our $70,000 goal by midnight and have your gift TRIPLED>>

Your donation today will go immediately towards LCV Victory Fund's $1.5 million campaign across these five districts. Your gift will help with television advertising, direct mail and an extensive phone program that will let voters know that these members of Congress are dangerously out-of-step with their district on the issue of climate change.

With so much at stake for our planet and our economy, we can't afford to give the Flat Earth Five another term in the U.S. House of Representatives. Please chip in by tonight's midnight deadline. Your gift will go three times as far to defeat the Flat Earth Five.

Thank you for supporting LCV Victory Fund's campaign to defeat the Flat Earth Five.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski
President

Terry:

Attached is a letter that will come to President Clinton from the Prime Minister of Barbados inviting him to speak on May 8 at a high level conference of energy Ministers from all of the Island nations in the world. The conference is being sponsored by UNDP and we will be participating. I will be there.

UNDP is providing funds to the Clinton Foundation for our work on clean energy and we will be launching our work at this conference.

Obviously, if President Clinton can speak, that would be great. If he cannot attend but could provide a video, that would also be very helpful.

I am sorry for the short notice, but the conference has come together rather quickly.

Thanks

Ira

Subject: Congratulations

Eric Garcetti
FOR MAYOR
2013

Dear Friend:

Congratulations.

Los Angeles made a huge difference in the reelection of President Obama, contributing countless volunteer hours and financial resources to win critical battleground states.

I want to thank you for being an important part of this effort. I was blown away by the two full buses of Garcetti volunteers who joined me on the ground to get out the vote in Nevada this past weekend. (Click here for pictures.) You were equally impressive here at home, knocking on doors and packing phone banks to call into swing states and to support those candidates and causes that the President believes in.

Thank you -- this is your victory!

Our city cannot afford to think or act small if we are to realize our full potential. Los Angeles is the second-largest city in the nation, and we cannot sit back and let others decide the federal and state policies that affect us. That's why I have proudly served as an Executive Board Member of the Democratic National Committee, as Chair of Democratic Municipal Officials, and as a state Co-Chair of President Obama's campaign. That's why I also stood against Proposition 32. But the reality is, I am just one member of a team -- one made strong by all of you.

Now that we've reelected our President, we must keep working and move our country forward. We are blessed to live in Los Angeles and the United States of America. Together we can make our city and country as great as we know they can be.

I declined my invitation to attend the celebration in Chicago last night so I could celebrate with you, but I will see the President again soon. And when I do, I'll make sure he knows that L.A. has his back -- and that we know that he is there for us too.

Thank you.
-Eric

Davis: Have they lost all sense of shame?

476

By Lanny Davis - 06/24/15 04:59 PM EDT

On June 9, 1954, Republican Sen. Joe McCarthy of Wisconsin, chairman of a House subcommittee investigating communism in government, was confronted by attorney Joseph Welch during nationally televised hearings. McCarthy had carried on his anti-communism innuendo campaign through congressional investigations for several years. Now, before a national audience, he attacked a young legal associate of Welch as a member of a communist “front” organization when he was at law school.

In what will go down in history as the moment of McCarthy’s undoing, Welch reacted with outrage to this attack. “You’ve done enough. Have you no sense of decency, sir, at long last? Have you left no sense of decency?”

The Senate censured McCarthy six months later and his career was over.

So I ask a similar question of Rep. Trey Gowdy (R-S.C.), the chairman of the House Select Committee on Benghazi, and the other five Republicans on the panel: Reps. Susan Brooks (Ind.), Jim Jordan (Ohio), Martha Roby (Ala.), Peter Roskam (Ill.) and Lynn Westmoreland (Ga.).

Have you lost all sense of shame?

The decision to call private citizen Sidney Blumenthal, former President Clinton’s assistant and Hillary Clinton’s longtime friend, on June 16 for a behind-closed-doors sworn deposition is emblematic of the shameful, shamelessly partisan conduct of Gowdy and the Republicans on his committee — and their constituents should be asking them each this same question.

There are facts they cannot deny.

Blumenthal had nothing to do with the Benghazi attack or the government’s reaction to it. He passed along to Hillary Clinton, then secretary of State, via email information from a former high-ranking CIA official about Libya. She, in turn, passed along some of Blumenthal’s emails to see if they contained anything useful. That is it. Both acted responsibly.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

He volunteered to come to the committee to respond to all questions, without the need for a subpoena. Yet the committee Republicans sent two federal marshals in the middle of the day to his doorstep to serve a subpoena on his wife — and leaked to the media the fact they were serving a subpoena.

Blumenthal was questioned for nine hours. Democratic members estimate the questions asked by Gowdy and the Republican members of a committee that's supposed to be investigating the tragedy of Benghazi to be as follows:

- more than 160 about his relationship and communications with the Clintons, and fewer than 20 about the Benghazi attack;

- more than 50 about the Clinton Foundation, and just four about security in Benghazi;

- more than 270 about Blumenthal's humanitarian Haitian assistance idea, which came to nothing and in which no money was ever exchanged, and zero about the U.S. presence in Benghazi;

- forty-five questions about David Brock, Media Matters and related organizations, and zero about former Ambassador Christopher Stevens, who with three other Americans was killed in the attack.

The nature of the questions asked exposes the committee's true intent. Many of the questions amounted to this: Are you now or have you ever been a Democrat? Are you now or have you ever been a friend of Hillary Clinton?

The Republicans on the committee refuse to make the transcript of the embarrassing deposition public. Why? I wrote Gowdy to ask him for a copy. No answer. Yet one day after the deposition, the National Review published a leaked email that Blumenthal provided to the committee; a conservative on Bloomberg News released a different email; and Politico published a story quoting "another GOP select committee member" to characterize Blumenthal's document submission and testimony. None of these selective leaks reported what the committee Republicans asked or what Blumenthal answered.

The committee was created despite the fact that numerous other committees had already investigated Benghazi, costing millions of tax dollars, including the Republican-led House Intelligence and Armed Services committees. None of them found intentional distortion of the causes of the tragedy by the White House or State Department; there was no stand-down order, no political cover-up. The panel has spent more than $3.5 million so far and maintains an 18-member staff, whose full-time employees are paid an average of $128,750 per year. (Yes, self-proclaimed fiscal conservatives, they!) Yet it's held so far only three public hearings — and they are still refusing Clinton's repeated requests to appear and testify publicly.

Is there anyone who can doubt that Gowdy and these five other Republicans are participants in nothing neither more nor less than a partisan sham, out to harm Hillary Clinton and existing for no other reason?

To repeat: Have they no sense of shame?

Davis served as special counsel to former President Clinton, is principal in the Washington, D.C., law firm of Lanny J. Davis & Associates and is executive vice president of the strategic communications firm LEVICK. He is the author of a recently published book, Crisis Tales: Five Rules for Coping with Crises in Business, Politics, and Life.

Clean Water Legislation Passes Out of Committee as Congress Moves to Protect America's Drinking Water

In response to the passage of the Clean Water Restoration Act out of the Senate Environment and Public Works committee, League of Conservation Voters Legislative Representative Hasan Nazar issued the following statement:

"Congress has stopped dipping its toes in the water and is poised to dive in to replace the safeguards that once protected more than half of America's drinking water.

"In the last few years, misguided judicial activism has torn up the Clean Water Act and has given corporate polluters the power to dump toxins and other hazardous materials into our water supply. Passing the strongest possible version of the Clean Water Restoration Act must be a top priority for this Congress this year.

"Today, the Senate Environment and Public Works committee moved us one step closer to cleaner, safer water. We are grateful to Senator Feingold for introducing this bill and to Senator Boxer for shepherding it through the committee."

I hope this note finds you well.

As we enter the holiday season, I wanted to reach out to share some thoughts during a particularly thoughtful time for me. As some of you are aware, I have been battling a form of cancer called cholangiocarcinoma. (I was diagnosed over a year ago and I still can't pronounce it!)

Although I have been compelled to learn a great deal about cancer, and the research keeps getting better, it does not appear that a cure can happen in my timeframe. According to my medical team, the cancer is progressing, and time is not my friend. I regret having to share this news in this way, but there is probably no better way and I wanted an opportunity to reach all of you.

Among the many things I'd like to convey is the great sense of pride and fulfillment that I feel in the Albright Stonebridge Group, an amazing enterprise in which you all have had some part. Our goal was to build a global institution that would endure long beyond the careers of any of the founders: a world-class firm built on a foundation of the very best professionals providing truly valuable service to the clients with whom we had the privilege to partner. Although the work is never complete, the foundation has been well laid with a deep bench of talent and a solid leadership team. I have no doubt that ASG's greatest days are still to come.

More broadly, I am very proud of my work and the remarkable opportunity to have served our country in the Clinton Administration and to have led so many foreign policy projects, boards, and organizations and remain grateful to the friends and colleagues I have been privileged to meet along the way.

Throughout my career, from my early days as a Hill staffer and campaign speechwriter, at the State Department, at Hogan & Hartson, and my years of service as National Security Advisor, I have been honored and blessed with incredible colleagues for whom I have enormous respect.

The clients I have worked with at ASG often are more than clients; we become colleagues, partners, and friends. I deeply value these relationships and am grateful for the trust that you placed in me and in the firm.

If you would like to be in touch with me, please feel free to do so or reach out to my ASG partner Dan Rosenthal at drosenthal@albrightstonebridge.com or my close friend and former colleague Tara Sonenshine at tsonenshine@earthlink.net

With warmest regards

Subject:	Don't let Gessler steal Colorado's elections--fight back!

ProgressNow Colorado C4 Logo

Dear Neighbor,

Don't let Gessler steal Colorado's elections!

It's been said that Colorado's right-wing Secretary of State, Scott Gessler, did not truthfully expect to be elected last year. Not only is Gessler an infamous partisan political attorney with a long history of defending clients accused of election law violations, but he never really tried to get elected, either: he never raised much money or even campaigned much. It's almost as if he was elected by accident.

Now that Scott Gessler is in office, though, he seems determined to do as much damage to Colorado's elections--and the right of Coloradans to vote--as he possibly can.

From now until Election Day 2012, one of ProgressNow Colorado's biggest jobs is to stop Gessler from carrying out his intentions to suppress the vote. Please join us--make a small monthly contribution to ProgressNow Colorado, and help us fight Scott Gessler every step of the way.

Scott Gessler's latest attack on the right to vote is a piece of legislation he cooked up with Tea Party support to conduct voter purges of people he "believes" could be illegal immigrants. Newspapers around the state have pointed out that Gessler could have freedom to use almost any "information" he sees fit to exclude voters under this bill--a wide-open opportunity to manipulate Colorado elections. The evidence Gessler has presented in support of this legislation is severely flawed, and easily accounted for by the normal rate of naturalization of citizens. There has never been a documented case of an illegal immigrant voting in the state of Colorado. And if one ever did, it's already against federal law!

There's only one possible outcome to Scott Gessler's hopes to purge the voter rolls without oversight or accountability. And that's to suppress the rights of legal Colorado citizens to vote.

We've already enjoyed success at holding Scott Gessler accountable. In January, after Gessler announced that he intended to keep working for his old elections law firm, thousands of ProgressNow Colorado members stood up and demanded that he abandon that horrible idea. Gessler was stunned by the intense criticism, and announced after a few days of outcry that he was giving up.

But Gessler won't give up on suppressing the vote as easily. With your help, we'll fight him every step of the way--and we'll win. Please take a moment to join ProgressNow Colorado with a small monthly donation--$10, $20, or whatever you can throw in, and help us protect the most important right we have.

Thank you,

Kjersten Forseth

Subject: [big campaign] Hon. Tom Andrews: The New "Misery Index"

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/tom-andrews/nation-building-in-afghan_b_378457.html

Nation-Building in Afghanistan Instead of at Home Will Produce New "Misery Index"

Congressional Democrats Beware: Unemployment At Home + Casualties Abroad = Defeat at the Polls in 2010

Tom Andrews
December 3, 2009

President Obama's decision to nation-build in Afghanistan in the midst of the worst economic recession since the Great Depression is likely to produce a new Misery Index for Americans: The escalating numbers of dead and wounded American soldiers in Afghanistan PLUS the likely high level of unemployed Americans at home. For Congressional Democrats, the Misery Index could add up to big trouble at the polls in November 2010.

Presidential candidate Ronald Reagan coined the term "misery index" as a very effective way to focus attention on the Carter administration's double barrel headache in 1980: rising unemployment and inflation. President Obama's decision to double down on a failing Afghanistan strategy by ordering an immediate military escalation is likely to present Democratic Congressional candidates with a Misery Index of their own in 2010.

President Obama wants to rush the troops that General McCrystal has requested for Afghanistan as soon as possible so that they can be in place for the so-called spring "fighting season". The significantly larger military footprint of foreign forces will, inevitably, swell the ranks of Taliban fighters who have been successfully using the presence of these forces as their most potent recruitment weapon. The result is not hard to predict: a significant spike in US casualties in Afghanistan in the summer and fall of 2010 at precisely the time that Members of Congress are facing voters in the 2010 elections.

The dreadful reports of these escalating numbers of American casualties abroad will be in addition to the number of local news stories of the casualties of escalating unemployment at home. The numbers of Americans who are unemployed and underemployed - not to mention those who are worried that they will soon join the ranks of both - are increasing steadily. So is the view of voters that the nation is on the wrong track. While Wall Street is basking in profits and brokers are getting well publicized bonuses, workers are getting pink slips. It begs the question: what are the priorities of those we elect to represent us in Washington?

Political leadership is about setting priorities and making choices. Those who support the president's military escalation in Afghanistan will be charged with being more interested in nation building abroad than in nation building at home. And, the nation building policy that they have chosen to support abroad is not only generating new levels of casualties to Americans in uniform, it is producing absolutely no discernible progress in making America safer.

To make it worse, Democratic Congressional candidates who support the President's Afghanistan policy will likely be hit with another political misery indicator: declining support from the political base that was so critical to their success in 2006 and 2008. There is real danger that the hope and enthusiasm that drove so many progressive Democrats in those election cycles will be transformed into cynicism and apathy in 2010. That is bad news for any incumbent Democrat running in 2010.

I hope that Congressional Democrats will do the right thing and oppose the president's military escalation in Afghanistan because it's the right thing to do. But, if they need more of an inducement, they may want to consider the electoral misery index that may await them in 2010.

My sense is that their political transition will provide an opening for the White House to pitch to the new leadership (assuming it's Modi who wins) a tightly focused climate agenda to cover the next 2-3 years. If that happens, I hope that these Track II outcomes could be helpful in your thinking through what some of those elements might be. (I heard rumors, for what its worth, that two Track II participants could have senior roles in a Modi government: Kuresh Prabhu on energy/climate, and Shyam Saran as NSA). On HFCs, the fundamental issue is whether India can be made to relent in the foreseeable future to international pressure to address HFCs through an amendment to the Montreal Protocol, or if they will just continue to block/slow walk the process in spite of our best efforts. I suspect that you could find out which it is through high-level outreach in May -- and if indications are discouraging, it could be worth developing/launching an alternative international approach that could meaningfully curb HFC growth while Montreal remains gridlocked.

Great work! Two small things:
1. I worry that the silhouette at the beginning and the end makes it too much about HER as a historic figure...wondering if we can have her in a crowd of people, or somehow showing the images of the people she's helped. Make it less about her but what she's done.
2. The music gets a big jarring at times, but maybe that's because it's unmixed. Just flagging.
3. The "children I met were living harsh lives" line in the CDF section is a bit strange sounding

Hey

I will check w/ Don, Lisa, Chris and Todd. Are you OK w/ Jon Wilkins of McKinsey being there? He's been quite helpful.

Do you want people to come over or just do by phone?

I will either be in my car or in Richmond but able to join by phone.

Mel

Madam Secretary –

Below is a link to one of the new spots we discussed last night – to paint the picture of a President who can do all parts of the job. This spot will run alongside the .60 that speaks to the other imperatives (experience, results and will stop the GOP). We're working on a third spot to cycle into the same track, which would be focused on the economy/get results contrast and should be ready tomorrow.

Please let us know if this spot looks good to you.

Thanks,

Subject:	In one week

John --

In a little less than one week, the Democratic Senate will take its first step towards reversing the Supreme Court's supremely flawed decision gutting the Voting Rights Act.

This initial hearing, led by Judiciary Committee Chairman Pat Leahy, will take place July 17th – you can watch it live here when it happens.

But before Senators convene, they need to hear from you: Please sign our petition calling on Congress to restore the Voting Rights Act!

The Roberts court tried to claim the Voting Rights Act wasn't necessary anymore, but Republican state legislators are proving through their actions that it still is.

Within days of the ruling, GOP legislators have rushed forward bills to codify Texas' racially discriminatory gerrymandering, completely eliminate North Carolina's early voting system, and impose other new voting barriers designed specifically to weaken Democratic turnout.

We have exactly one week to show Republicans that there will be consequences if they allow this ruling to stand – please sign the petition today.

Sincerely,

Michael Sargeant
Executive Director
The Democratic Legislative Campaign Committee

P.S. Next week's hearing features civil rights legend John Lewis, who's spent a career fighting injustice. If you can't watch the hearing live, please show that you support restoring the Voting Rights Act by signing the petition.

Hi all - per our call this morning, some additional ideas on Chicago:

1) RevJackson - this may already be in the works but in addition to his Rainbow Push and radio requests, would he do an event or OTR with HRC ?
2) do we need more boots on the ground like we had the last week in SC - esp in and around Chicago.
3) If I'm remembering correctly one or two of the mothers/family members she initially met with were from Chicago, are any not ready to endorse ? Even if we can't get all the moms there, can we get one or two to join HRC for events?
4) Meet with the publishers of AA papers in Chicago - they are an amazing group of women - all HRC supporters who want to be helpful - they are also all very active & well respected in Chicago - getting them to activate their networks would be huge even though we probably can't do in time to get in the papers, they would do online and we could try to get them to endorse and package as an announcement on Sunday going in to the forum on Sunday night.
5) Interview with Roland Martin - tape on Sunday to air on Monday - he would likely have gotten his harshest Q's out in the forum; has HUgE ratings with AA women.
6) Event with Steve Harvey - can check his sked to see if he'd do an event with her in Chicago before Tuesday. Do his radio show again.

John --

Republican Majority Leader Mitch McConnell is going ALL IN on a new attack on our campaign finance system.

With a December 11th deadline looming, McConnell wants to slip a rider to gut a key campaign finance coordination limit into a must-pass spending bill.

We only have 7 DAYS LEFT to stop him.

We can't let McConnell back President Obama and Democrats into a corner. We can't let him chip away at the few campaign finance limits we have left!

Just about an hour ago the House approved the Ryan budget. While there is little chance it will be implemented this year it is the clearest statement we will have about how one of our two major parties would govern if they could break the current impasse and win control of the Senate and the White House. As the column linked below indicates, that would have disturbing implications for the nation's seniors, many of whom have yet to realize that "entitlement reform" is about them:

40 COMMUNITY AND ENVIRONMENT GROUPS CHALLENGE ODNR AUTHORITY TO MANAGE FRACKING EMERGENCY RESPONSE

Cites record of accidents and failures

COLUMBUS - - Today 40 Ohio community and environmental groups fires off a challenge to the Ohio Department of Natural Resources' (ODNR) authority to manage chemical reporting and emergency response for the state's oil and gas industry. The challenge, carried in a letter to U.S. EPA Administrator Gina McCarthy, is based on the fact that Ohio law appears to contradict federal law with respect to what agency should receive hazardous chemical information and also respond to chemical accidents and emergencies. The letter to US EPA seeks clarification of these federal requirements in order to forestall an oil and gas industry agenda in Ohio's legislature to shift custody of the industry's chemical use data from front-line emergency responders to the industry's accommodating but unqualified supporters at ODNR.

The federal Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act (EPCRA) states that authority to accept hazardous chemical information and respond to chemical accidents resides with the State Emergency Response Commission (SERC), as well as local emergency planning committees and fire departments. Indeed, every other chemical-intensive industry in the state reports to SERC and SERC coordinates and plans emergency response for them. Ohio law, however, carves out an exception for the oil and gas industry, diverting its hazardous chemical information and emergency response authority to ODNR.

The groups point out sections of existing Ohio law (ORC 1509.231) and proposed legislation (2014's HB 490) that it says allows ODNR to, "…adopt a new and separate program tailored exclusively for its patrons in the oil and gas industry." The group alleges that ODNR is "captured" by the industry it regulates and "…routinely ignores and ridicules the concerns of sensible citizens regarding fracking while reflexively repeating the industry's public relations talking points on this important subject...".

Furthermore, the group says that ODNR's lack of expertise in emergency response puts public health and natural resources at risk.

To back up its claims, the groups cite several recent incidents, including a June fire and chemical spill in Monroe County that dumped 54,000 gallons of hazardous chemicals into a tributary of the Ohio River. Gaps in reporting meant volunteer firefighters lacked information on what chemicals were stored on site and had to guess at the appropriate response. Despite being the current custodian of fracking chemical information, ODNR's Division of Oil and Gas didn't arrive at the scene until 3 days after the fire broke out and failed to share trade secret chemical information with other state and federal emergency responders until 2 days after that. By that time, 70,000 fish had been killed and the plume of contamination had reached drinking water intakes located downstream.

The letter calls upon U.S. EPA to clarify that while the state might allow chemical reporting to additional state agencies, it may not divert that information from the State Emergency Response Commission, as Ohio has done.

Beyond the issue of public safety, the groups require this clarification to ensure public access to information about local chemical hazards. Under federal law, any citizen may access non-trade secret chemical information for any facility in their community, through their Local Emergency Planning Committee. Accessing this information through the ODNR is currently fraught with frustration and delay, even, as in the Monroe County incident, for firefighters. “The law is called the Emergency Planning and Community Right-to-Know Act for a reason,” says Center for Health, Environment and Justice organizer Teresa Mills. “ODNR has no right to keep this information from us,” she adds.

CHERI BUSTOS FOR CONGRESS

John --

Thanks to the generous support from friends like you, we hit our fundraising goal on Sunday night!

Our grassroots support was stronger in June than in any other month this year, and it is exactly what we needed to continue to build a foundation for our campaign.

But as we enter July, we have some urgent issues we need to address.

Obstructionists in Congress allowed student loan rates to double yesterday, and now students face an increase on their federal student loan interest rates -- from 3.4% to 6.8%.

This is simply inexcusable. Many of us rolled up our sleeves and fought for college affordability, but House leadership refused to address this urgent problem and now millions of students are left wondering if they'll be able to get their degree.

If you haven't already signed our petition, will you add your name right now to lower student loan rates?

Already signed? Forward this email to three friends who you think might be affected by the rate hike and ask them to add their names too!

Grassroots supporters like you have to make their voices heard. Without you, this campaign could never be successful.

Kindest Personal Regards,

Cheri

This is Jeff D'Alessio, managing editor of The News-Gazette in Champaign-Urbana, Illinois. I'd be most grateful for your help anytime Thursday in answering one question, which I'm asking of a few fellow Page-1-of-Who's-Who folks, about a big case-to-be here in Big Ten country.

The question:

As a defense attorney, would you like your chances in this case? (Or maybe you'd never take it). Either way, I'd love a few sentences of "why" via e-mail if easiest ...

— In October 2013, a Virginia Tech English professor (Steven Salaita) was offered and accepted a fully tenured faculty position in the American Indian Studies department at the University of Illinois.

— He resigned his position at Virginia Tech this past spring and sold his house.

— In July, during the latest Israel-Gaza conflict, the professor, a Palestinian-American, posted several profanity-laced tweets on his personal page, all critical of Israel (and others, including "F--- Obama. F--- the UN. F--- Israel.")

— On August 1, the chancellor at Illinois wrote Salaita a letter, saying the university would not be forwarding his application to the board of trustees for approval, after all, because an affirmative vote was unlikely. Until the board approves hires, which are typically just rubber-stamped, they're not final.

— The chancellor cited a "duty to our students to ensure that they live in a community of scholarship that challenges their assumptions about the world but that also respects their rights as individuals."

— After pressure from students and faculty, the board of trustees did indeed take a vote on whether to approve Salaita's appointment. Same result — by an 8-1 margin.

— A disappointed Salaita says he plans to pursue legal action. His legal team plans to file constitutional and employment claims against the university.

— Salaita says he wants the job he agreed to, not money. "We'll be seeking injunctive relief to request a court to order the University of Illinois to do to what it failed to do, that is, complete the employment process," said Anand Swaminathan of Chicago-based Loevy & Loevy.

Those are the facts.

Again, I'm just hoping for your expert take. Thanks a million and please let me know if I can ever return the favor.

Subject: Washington Post Op-Ed on Affordable Law Firm

To the Members of the Strategic Planning Council:

One of the central ideas that emerged from our strategic planning discussions was the idea that Georgetown should develop programs for recent law school graduates that would be analogous to residency programs for recent medical school graduates and that would provide hands-on training. Following up on that idea, working with the law firms of DLA Piper and Arent Fox, we have created the DC Affordable Law Firm. The firm will provide superb hands-on training for recent graduates, and it will help address a critical access to justice problem - the provision of legal services to those who are not eligible for free legal services but who cannot afford lawyers. It is our hope that this law firm will be a model that law schools and law firms across the country will follow. I am grateful for your help in conceptualizing the residency model that underlies the firm, and I am pleased to share with you an op-ed that Vice Dean Jane Aiken and I wrote about the firm, which appeared in Sunday's Washington Post.

I hope you enjoyed a wonderful Thanksgiving, and I look forward to seeing you soon.

Thanks again!

Best, Bill

Too many lawyers? Not in D.C.

Washington Post
November 27, 2015
By William M. Treanor and Jane H. Aiken

Imagine a 60-year-old widow who's been living in the same two-bedroom apartment in Anacostia for decades. It was the first apartment she shared with her late husband; she raised two kids there, hosted countless friends and relatives, celebrated her granddaughter's first birthday party. It's her home.

Now, after all those years, for reasons she doesn't understand, she faces eviction.

In hopes of remaining in her longtime home, she goes to court. She can't afford a lawyer, and so she joins the 97 percent of defendants in the District who appear without a lawyer in the Landlord and Tenant Branch of the D.C. Superior Court . And she has just enough income to disqualify her from free legal aid . Her landlord, or more likely, his lawyer, shows up with basic documentation. She doesn't ask — because she doesn't know to ask — whether her notice to vacate was properly served or whether the grounds for eviction are legal and given in good faith. She is evicted.

This happens almost every day in the District. Lower-income residents who don't qualify for free legal aid but can't afford lawyers suffer devastating consequences in court. And yet even as they fall, unrepresented, through the cracks, we keep hearing about a glut of unemployed lawyers, many of them recent law-school graduates.

It would be nice if it were as simple as matching up all the unemployed lawyers with all the people who need affordable legal advice. But, in the absence of new initiatives, the match won't happen. New graduates lack the experience they need to handle important cases effectively. They need office space, phones, copiers and library resources that a new lawyer working alone can't afford.

One idea gaining momentum: "low-bono" legal services, where lawyers charge affordable fees to work for those who can't afford the District's average rate of $250 per hour but who make a little too much to qualify for legal aid. While pro-bono work is offered for free, the low-bono models provide adequate financial support for attorneys.

More than 15 law schools provide recent graduates with hands-on training by offering affordable legal services.

Yet the incubator model, which is making a difference, has limits. Because of resource constraints, the new lawyers often receive limited training, supervision and support. This is where big commercial law firms can come in. There are signs that Big Law is coming around to low-bono, recognizing a critical need to make legal services affordable to working people.

In the District, a new organization called the D.C. Affordable Law Firm (DCALF) is helping big firms commit to low-bono to great effect by bringing in new law graduates.

It works like this: For each of the next three years, we at Georgetown Law will send six graduates into 15-month fellowships at DCALF. The law firm Arent Fox will provide technological support and space in its K Street offices, while DLA Piper, the world's third-largest law firm, will take the lead role in training and creating DCALF's policies and procedures. Lawyers from both firms will do the important work of serving as mentors for the young graduates who will gain valuable experience and invaluable supervision and training from veteran colleagues.

DCALF presents a replicable economic model that rewards doing what's right. The hope is that it will inspire law firms and law schools across the country to launch their own low-bono firms organized like DCALF. If the model catches on, more and more talented young lawyers will devote an early stage of their career to communities in need. They will get great hands-on experiences as they start their careers — the legal equivalent of a medical residency. And they will make a difference, especially for the thousands of lower- and lower-middle-income Americans who face a staggering injustice any time they enter our courts.

William M. Treanor is executive vice president and dean of Georgetown Law School. Jane H. Aiken is vice dean and associaye dean for experiential education at Georgetown Law School.

Subject:	BP

Dear John,

While the disaster in the Gulf of Mexico gets worse by the minute, BP continues to dodge the tough questions about what went wrong and what they're doing to fix it.

It's time we got some straight answers. If BP won't give them of their own free will, we must compel them to do so. This week, 18 of my colleagues and I introduced legislation to grant President Obama's bipartisan investigative commission subpoena power that will allow it to uncover the unvarnished truth.

But we need your help to get there. Only with a strong grassroots push can we overcome the still-powerful oil lobby and convince Congress to give this commission the teeth it needs to bring transparency to the BP investigation, hold BP accountable, protect taxpayers and begin the difficult process of restoring the Gulf.

Click here to stand with me today and demand transparency from BP. The Gulf of Mexico region has suffered enough and shouldn't have to beg to get the truth.

As the slick approaches more than a hundred miles in either direction, the economic and environmental costs are seemingly immeasurable. Thousands of Gulf Coast residents have already had their livelihoods stolen from them and the region is losing billions in economic productivity. Equally heartbreaking is millions of acres of wetlands -- forty percent of all the wetlands in the country -- that are at risk in the Gulf of Mexico and the hundreds of species threatened by the spill, some possibly with extinction.

This bipartisan commission is our best chance to determine what really happened and to protect us from future disasters. I hope you will stand with me today and send a message to Washington that New York and the nation expect us to act.

Please click here to stand with me and help grant the commission the subpoena power it needs to bring justice to the Gulf of Mexico and protect our waters from spills.

I know you share my empathy with the citizens of the Gulf Coast and the concern for the workers that are helping lead the clean-up. Thank you for standing with me as we search for the truth about what caused this tragedy and to help heal the region.

Sincerely,

Kirsten Gillibrand

Good feedback, Matt. Revised below. This is a verbal message only.

I know there has been a lot of uncertainty since the announcement that we are not running ads. I want to make sure I put an end to any speculation of what might happen next. As someone deeply vested in what we have built together this has not been easy.

First, I wanted to thank you for your head-down singular focus on knocking around the McCain team for their lobbyist ties. Working with our partners and relentlessly pursuing this you have broken through, despite the news about us not running ads.

The last week has shown exactly how an aggressive earned media campaign can screw with the McCain campaign. They are thin-skinned about these stories and there is a lot more there. We need to keep that going.

What is clear is that there are going to be changes in how we do our work—a restructuring.

I wanted to share the possible options with you and a timeline of what you can expect.

1. WHOLE CAMPAIGN TAKEOVER -We might be subsumed into the work of a new organization. We would continue to co-locate and work together.

2. COMPONENT CAMPAIGN PARTS RESTRUCTURED -We may divide up the campaign projects and have partners take over various parts of the work, various staff pods and projects subsumed by partners. We would try to continue to co-locate and work together.

Timeline and Guarantees:

-The decisions about the next phase of the campaign will be made this week.

-You still have your job. We are working to make sure the transition to a new organization or organizations is seamless and trying to figure out transition assistance (pay) when it might not be.

I said it last week and I will say it again. No group of people on the planet is better prepared to take on John McCain right now. Back to work.

It's actually 21 states now because Arkansas has had its law blocked by the state supreme court. Agree that we should decry this and talk about making it easier rather than harder for people to exercise their fundamental right to vote.

As for Ebola, my view is that we deployed thousands of US troops to help stop the outbreak, which puts it in a different category from the flu. But I don't mind just saying pandemics and skipping Ebola if others are concerned.

Agree with Dan's points on criminal justice reform, and would add that it's arguably the most topical of all these issues and could be noticeably absent from a list this long.

And, just my two cents here, but I would hate for us to be among the people brandishing Ebola as a major threat when we know that the flu and other diseases are actually much riskier...

Good stuff and not sure you saw my previous emails, but I do thing the pre-school stuff works really well in the God-giving potential/community bucket. The incarceration stuff seems a bit out of place. Since we are talking about community and family I wonder if we should add gay marriage.

On voting rights, I think we have to do more than modernizing. This is about stripping away the obstacles the Govs and legislatures in 22 states have enacted.

Here's an attempt at merging the home base with the four fights, a little fleshed out. I think Joel is onto something with making her second bullet into God-given potential, but would give it more of the family/community/social fabric flavor she talked about.

John, we need $4,012 more to keep our ads on the air through Election Day. If we don't hit that goal, our ads get pulled and we lose. Can you give us a call at (845) 565-1842 or click here to give $250 or more to stop this race from slipping away?

This election is too close to call, and we can't afford to let Hayworth's attacks on air go unanswered. Please chip in whatever you can today.

Progressive policies drive more into poverty
The Orange County Register – Joel Kotkin
The dirty secret here is that a large proportion of Californians, roughly one-third, or some 3.2 million households, as found by a recent United Way study, find it increasingly difficult to keep their heads above water. The United Way study, surprisingly, has drawn relatively little interest from a media that usually enjoys highlighting disparities, particularly racial gaps. Perhaps this reflects a need to maintain an illusion of blue state success.

What a $15 Minimum Wage Would Mean for Your City
The Upshot (NYT) – Noam Scheiber
As the campaign for a $15 minimum wage has gained strength this year, even supporters of large minimum-wage increases have wondered how high the wage floor can rise before it reduces employment and hurts the economy.

Keep the Tax on High-End Health Plans
New York Times – Editorial Board
Analysts at the Commonwealth Fund, a research organization, warn that if employers require higher deductibles and co-pays, workers with modest incomes might postpone the health care they need, which could lead to more spending down the road. Congress should not repeal the tax, but it should find smart ways to adjust it.

New York City's Responsible Banking Act Is Unconstitutional, a Judge Rules
New York Times – Julie Creswell
A law passed by New York City three years ago that required banks to make public their efforts to be socially responsible, particularly in low-income neighborhoods, is unconstitutional, according to a federal court ruling.

Democratic candidates eye day-care aid as a way to ease college burdens
Washington Post – Danielle Paquette
Slightly more than a quarter of undergraduates in the United States are raising children. That's about 4.8 million degree-seekers who have another mouth to feed between classes. Advocates say a little-discussed portion of Hillary Rodham Clinton's new plan to make college more affordable, the latest design from liberal lawmakers to shrink student debt, could help them graduate with a lighter burden.

Democrats think they've figured out how to turn the Uber wars to their advantage
Washington Post – Brian Fung and Jacob Bogage
At a time when fast-growing companies like Uber are giving struggling American workers a fresh source of income — but not necessarily steady or reliable employment — liberals are fighting to reconcile the rise of a new "sharing" economy with their traditional focus on expanding the middle class and defending workers against mistreatment.

Black poverty differs from white poverty
Wonkblog – Emily Badger
A poor black family, in short, is much more likely than a poor white one to live in a neighborhood where a many other families are poor, too, creating what sociologists call the "double burden" of poverty.

No, Obamacare isn't killing full-time jobs, new evidence shows
Wonkblog – Max Ehrenfreund
President Obama's health-care reform hasn't meant less time on the job for American workers, according to three newly published studies that challenge one of the main arguments raised by critics of the Affordable Care Act.

What Should Become of America's Slums?
The Atlantic – Alana Semuels
Efforts to dismantle segregation may take resources away from some of the poorest communities, where investment is most needed.

Single mothers 'most likely' to benefit from paid overtime expansion
Al Jazeera – Ned Resnikoff
A proposal to extend overtime pay eligibility to millions of workers would have its biggest impact on single mothers and women of color, according to a study published Tuesday by the Institute for Women's Policy Research (IWPR) and the advocacy group MomsRising.

Is the SEC Against Income Inequality -- or for It?
Huffington Post – Judith Samuelson
The proposed rule would require a very narrow definition of performance specifically "total shareholder return" or TSR, which is roughly equivalent to change in stock price plus dividends. If the SEC settles on TSR as the principle measure of Dodd Frank's call for "Pay for Performance"-- this limited definition of success in business will reinforce the very metric that has contributed the most to escalating pay in the executive suite.

Businesses brace for game-changing labor decision
The Hill – Tim Devaney
Business leaders in Washington are bracing for a labor ruling they warn would redefine what constitutes an "employer" in the United States, exposing thousands of companies to new liabilities and potentially upending entire industries.

Beware of American econ professors! How Krugman, Sachs and Stiglitz led the Greeks astray.
Politico – Yannis Palaiologos
[H]igh profile U.S. economists, like Paul Krugman, Joseph Stiglitz and Jeffrey Sachs, have led the global anti-austerity campaign and have made my country a cause célèbre in that struggle. They have been right to argue that too much austerity has been imposed on Greece, and that further debt relief is required. But in recent months, as relations between Athens and its creditors have deteriorated, they have served Greece's cause very poorly indeed.

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

Below is a great example of how our Wisconsin affiliate is working to keep voters informed, even if it is the somewhat disheartening topic of student loan debt. By not only providing information but also methods to become involved, we hope to spur engagement among young voters. This is just 1 of our 21 states doing what we do every day – make progress happen, and happen NOW.

One Wisconsin Now Congratulates Graduates With Information on Student Loan Debt

With college graduations starting this week, One Wisconsin Now wants to be sure that students are aware of the realities they face, and the effect their student loans have on the economy. The Congressional Budget Office is now projecting the government will make a $51 billion profit from student loans in fiscal year 2013, roughly $6 billion more than Exxon-Mobil, the most profitable corporation in the U.S. in 2012, according to a report in the Huffington Post . One Wisconsin Now Executive Director Scot Ross commented, “It is obscene that our government is projected to make more off the loans students have taken out to pursue their higher education, than the most profitable corporation in the country made in net profits last year.”

Original research by the One Wisconsin Institute (the ProgressNow Education affiliate in WI) found that the impact of the trillion-dollar student loan debt crisis goes far beyond students and their families. Graduates with a Bachelors degree report making average monthly payments of $350 for an average term of 18.7 years. The economy-wide detrimental impacts of this debt include over $200 million in lost new auto sales every year and significantly lower rates of home purchasing and ownership among graduates earning solid middle class incomes but are saddled with student loan debt. Wisconsin Representative Mark Pocan, speaking for the Progressive Caucus, acknowledged the Institute’s research on the House floor (see 10:10) this past Wednesday May 22. To learn more about this research, you can watch Executive Director Scot Ross on MSNBC .

However, the One Wisconsin Institute is not just sitting on the sidelines. Instead, the Institute has begun a six-year strategic plan in conjunction with the ProgressNow network to raise awareness of the dire economic impact of the trillion-dollar student loan debt crisis and to encourage policy solutions at both the state and federal level. This includes implementing research and communication campaigns, with the hope of not only informing the public but also encouraging voter turnout and engagement among younger voters in 2014 and 2016 elections.

Good evening
This afternoon the AFL-CIO convened the Political Committee (usually chaired by AFSCME President Lee Saunders but because of a health issue, Trumka chaired). Interesting intel from this meeting to pass along.

Political Committee Discussion Points today:

1. Stuart Appelbaum pushed back on the AFT at the meeting regarding their early endorsement process. He stated that he understood there to be a 60 day notification to affiliated unions by an endorsing union. Trumka clarified that that was incorrect. He engaged in debate with Randi Weingarten's Executive Assistant Michelle Ringuette about their process and Trumka cut off debate. Appelbaum also urged no early endorsement by the AFL-CIO in the Presidential primary.

Randi personally called today to mention this exchange with Stuart along with the importance of prep for the Executive Council meeting and reconnecting on policy. She stated that she will be directly following up with Appelbaum and was very shocked by his comments at the meeting. Randi is in Canada or would have been there in person.

I am attaching a letter from Lee Saunders in the response to attacks Randi has received over the past week, FYI.

2. The Political Committee decided that there would not be a President endorsement recommendation coming off of the Executive Committee meeting by July 30th. This is not news for us but it was formally voted on. This still allows them to move in the future, internally I have heard a lot of talk that they know they need to endorse and would be looking to before February 2016 (how it looks today, we'll see).

3. The Bricklayer Unions (HRC spoke with President Boland on 6/10/15 and he also attended the Podesta's reception) announced that they will be making a endorsement recommendation at their Convention on 9/14-17/15. I will follow up with them tomorrow, but this is good news for us. BAC was a 2007 HRC endorsers.

4. Write off APWU and the Flight Attendants (affiliated with CWA)-Both Presidents publicly stated their support for Sanders in the Political Committee meeting today. I think our work is to keep them neutral.

Preparation for the Executive Council Meeting:

Randi mentioned today she very much wants to be on the offense going into the July 30th Executive Council meeting. She is going to be asking for a point of privilege at the meeting to emphasize the importance of her early endorsement. She has already lined support in the room among AFSCME, Trade Unions and IAM. She wants HRC to go into the room on offense too. I flag this because I think it could be helpful to have a strategy session around the July 30th meeting for the Secretary. Randi also raised the Cadillac Tax issue with me today. Randi is really an amazing HRC champion.

Other Follow Up Items:

AFT will be in the HQ tomorrow in department meetings from 11-4pm.

*Flag for you, UTU President Mike Mulgrew will be attending the Policy meeting from 1-2pm. This was at the request of Randi.

We will be meeting in the Nevada room if anyone would like to stop by.

I am reviewing tonight/tomorrow the research on ATU/APWU/CWA and will circle back.

I am setting up meetings with Suzie Ballentine this week and have a meeting with Heather and Erin next week. I'm going to only be asking Suzie for her insights on the CWA and ATU, but not asking for assistance beyond her thoughts. FYI.

Thank you! September 9th is locked in for the Building Trades Council Meeting. Great news.

Third Estimate of GDP for the Third Quarter of 2014

Posted by Jason Furman on December 23, 2014 at 09:30 AM EST

Today's upward revision indicates that the economy grew in the third quarter at the fastest pace in over a decade. The strong GDP growth is consistent with a broad range of other indicators showing improvement in the labor market, increasing domestic energy security, and continued low health cost growth. The steps that we took early on to rescue our economy and rebuild it on a new foundation helped make 2014 already the strongest year for job growth since the 1990s. Indeed, 2014 was a breakthrough year for the United States across a wide range of metrics important to middle-class families. Nevertheless, there is more work to be done to ensure that all Americans can share in the accelerating recovery.

FIVE KEY POINTS IN TODAY'S REPORT FROM THE BUREAU OF ECONOMIC ANALYSIS

1. Real gross domestic product (GDP) grew 5.0 percent at an annual rate in the third quarter of 2014—the strongest single quarter since 2003—according to the third estimate from the Bureau of Economic Analysis. While quarterly growth reports are volatile, and some of the growth in Q3 reflected transitory factors, the recent robust growth data indicate a solid underlying trend of recovery. Indeed, the strong growth recorded in each of the last two quarters suggests that the economy has bounced back strongly from the first-quarter decline in GDP, which largely reflected transitory factors like unusually severe winter weather and a sharp slowdown in inventory investment. Consumer spending, business investment, and net exports all remained positive contributors this quarter. Real gross domestic income (GDI), an alternative measure of the overall size of the economy, was up 4.7 percent in Q3.

2. Third-quarter real GDP growth was revised up 1.1 percentage point from the second estimate released in November. Most of the upward revisions were in personal consumption and business investment, the most persistent and stable components of GDP. The contributions of consumer spending and business investment were revised up 0.7 and 0.2 percentage point, respectively, including increased contributions from health care and other services, nonresidential structures investment, and intellectual property investment. An upward revision to inventory investment also accounted for 0.1 percentage point of the revision.

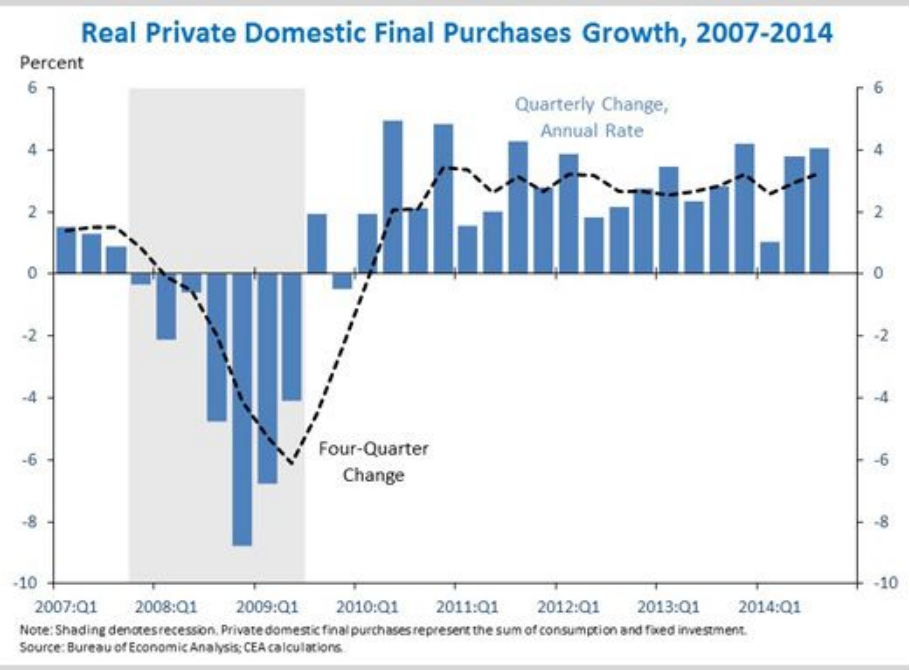
3. In the third quarter, personal consumption expenditures rose 3.2 percent at an annual rate. With real wages rising for two years, consumer sentiment at its highest level since 2007, and households having substantially deleveraged, consumption growth continues to trend upward. Consumers cite improved employment and wage expectations—along with declining gasoline prices—as major drivers of improved economic optimism, according the Reuters/University of Michigan consumer sentiment survey. The improved optimism is borne out in broad-based consumption growth, with durable goods spending continuing its pattern of strong growth in the recovery, and nondurable goods and services consumption picking up from the previous quarter. But challenges remain for consumers, and we have more work to do to boost wages for middle-class families.



4. The current account deficit remained near its lowest level since the late 1990s as the declining federal budget deficit has boosted domestic saving. The current account balance is a measure of net transactions between the United States and the rest of the world, including our trade balance and other income flows across our borders. When the current account is in deficit, as it has been for most of the past 30 years, the United States borrows from abroad to finance its spending. But our current account deficit has narrowed sharply since the crisis, in large part because of increased domestic saving including the fall of the federal budget deficit from 9.8 percent of GDP in FY 2009 to 2.8 percent in FY 2014. The U.S. current account deficit now stands at 2.5 percent of GDP, down from more than 6 percent in the fourth quarter of 2005. The smaller deficit reduces our reliance on foreign borrowing, encouraging a more sustainable recovery.

5. Real private domestic final purchases (PDFP)—the sum of consumption and fixed investment—is up 3.3 percent over the last four quarters, a faster four-quarter growth rate than real GDP. Real PDFP growth is generally a more stable and forward-looking indicator than real GDP because it excludes highly volatile components like inventory investment and net exports. In the first and second quarters of this year, GDP growth fluctuated widely, but PDFP was positive in both quarters, showing a less sharp pattern of decline and rebound. In the third quarter, PDFP grew a bit more slowly than GDP, but on balance, it has risen faster over the past year and continued its historical pattern of more steady growth.

As the Administration stresses every quarter, GDP figures can be volatile and are subject to substantial revision. Therefore, it is important not to read too much into any one single report and it is informative to consider each report in the context of other data that are becoming available.

There is a Mother jones article on his One Florida plan and how after he signed an executive order ending affirmative action at colleges there has been a significant decline in % of African Americans attending state schools in Florida. I think I would work it the other way. No involvement till after the election. I have discussed her duties there with her in the past, but they are not fresh in my mind. Probably worth getting from her her role there.

Subject: ethics appearance question
John, see the following from one our ethics lawyers who is working to vet the vice president's team on the transition. He flagged the entry below from Monica Medina's resume. While her former role at Fannie Mae doesn't represent an actual conflict with the code of conduct, it raises an appearance issue particularly as the McCain campaign continues to try to link Barack to Fannie and Freddie. Given that our pre-election process is not public, I think we can get away with including Monica at this stage, but I would counsel that we reasses her involvement in a post-election transition. I'd appreciate your feedback. Best, Cassandra

Revised. Please take another quick look as I think we should get to her asap. Two questions:
1) What do we do about Powell? Here I've mirrored language from the Q&A, which says "consistent with the practice of prior Secretaries of State," but are we comfortable with that?
2) Am i sending her this and the spox statement or Jen, so you want to do that? Either way, we'll need to explain the two options.

Here is a revised open letter attached to the current version of the fact sheet from the website. This is shorter, more direct, and more even-handed. Not defiant but not particularly contrite either. See what you think. (Will leave it to Nick, Heather, Brian, etc to review fact sheet and make any updates as needed.)

BENNET FOR COLORADO

Dear Friend,

Nearly 80 years ago, President Roosevelt signed Social Security into law. Since then, Social Security has provided security and peace of mind for millions upon millions of American seniors.

Today, we're joining with some of our colleagues to gather support for Social Security. Add your name to ours by clicking here.

Social Security is a promise that says if you work hard all your life, we will not let you fall into abject poverty when you grow older. Today, more than 693,000 Coloradans rely on Social Security to help pay their bills.

We cannot allow Social Security to disappear for future generations of seniors. This program has worked for 79 years -- and we're committed to seeing that it endures for our kids and grandkids.

Stand up and show your support for Social Security. Sign our petition and tell Washington to protect this vital program.

Thank you.

Hello most esteemed Professor Podesta,

I am so sorry to be reaching out so randomly, I am currently the Director of Communications & Special Events for Latino Leaders Magazine...we travel across the nation interviewing the top ranking & up coming influential Latinos. However, long before that I was a "newsie." I worked as a morning show newsroom producer and my first major election was the 2008 historic campaign. From that moment my love for politics made it's debut, I poured my heart and soul into the coverage...I campaigned in my hometown for Hillary. I have saved my 2008 Hillary poster from that time, because even then...I KNEW one day I would see her win. Since 2008, I have followed the Clinton trail, and with each career move I have tried to climb one step closer. I will move anywhere, I want to be part of this team. I have a tremendous amount of experience in communications and public relations, above that I have a very strong networking pool in the major Latino cities. I have build our magazine's presence in cities where Latinos dominated and in cities were Latinos are still the minority. I know how to gather people. It has been etched in my soul that should Hillary Rodham Clinton ever run again, I would be on her campaign team. Any position, big or small would be an honor.

I once read a quote, "Life does not give you what you want or what you love, life will only give you what you fight for or what you are willing to accept." It is with that fighting spirit, that I reach out to you now, for this is what I love and what I am willing to fight for. I hope this message reaches you...I would love to continue this conversation. Thank you deeply for you time.

sincerely,
Yolitzma

John -- the Koch Brothers didn't bargain for this!

FIRST: A dark money group backed by the Koch Brothers' network launched a massive ad campaign to prop up obstructionist Republicans opposed to voting on President Obama's Supreme Court

THEN: End Citizens United did something HUGE -- something no other organization is doing.

We launched a major TV ad buy to demand Republicans STOP disrespecting President Obama's authority and hold a vote on his Supreme Court nominee

NOW: We're matching the Kochs dollar-for-dollar in New Hampshire!

But John, we need to raise $128,O15 THIS WEEK to fully fund our campaign.

Please rush a donation of $5 or more to help us fill the vacancy on the Supreme Court >>

$5 >>	$35 >>
$50 >>	$100 >>
$250 >>	Other >>

Our polling shows that New Hampshire voters strongly disagree with Republican Senator Kelly Ayotte's decision to block any Supreme Court nominee put forward by the President.

55 percent agree that Senators like Ayotte are "trying to advance their party's agenda rather than do what is right for the country."

We couldn't agree more. But with the Koch Brothers' network propping up Ayotte, we need to get our message out to help the President RIGHT NOW.

We're asking for your urgent support. Please rush a donation to help End Citizens

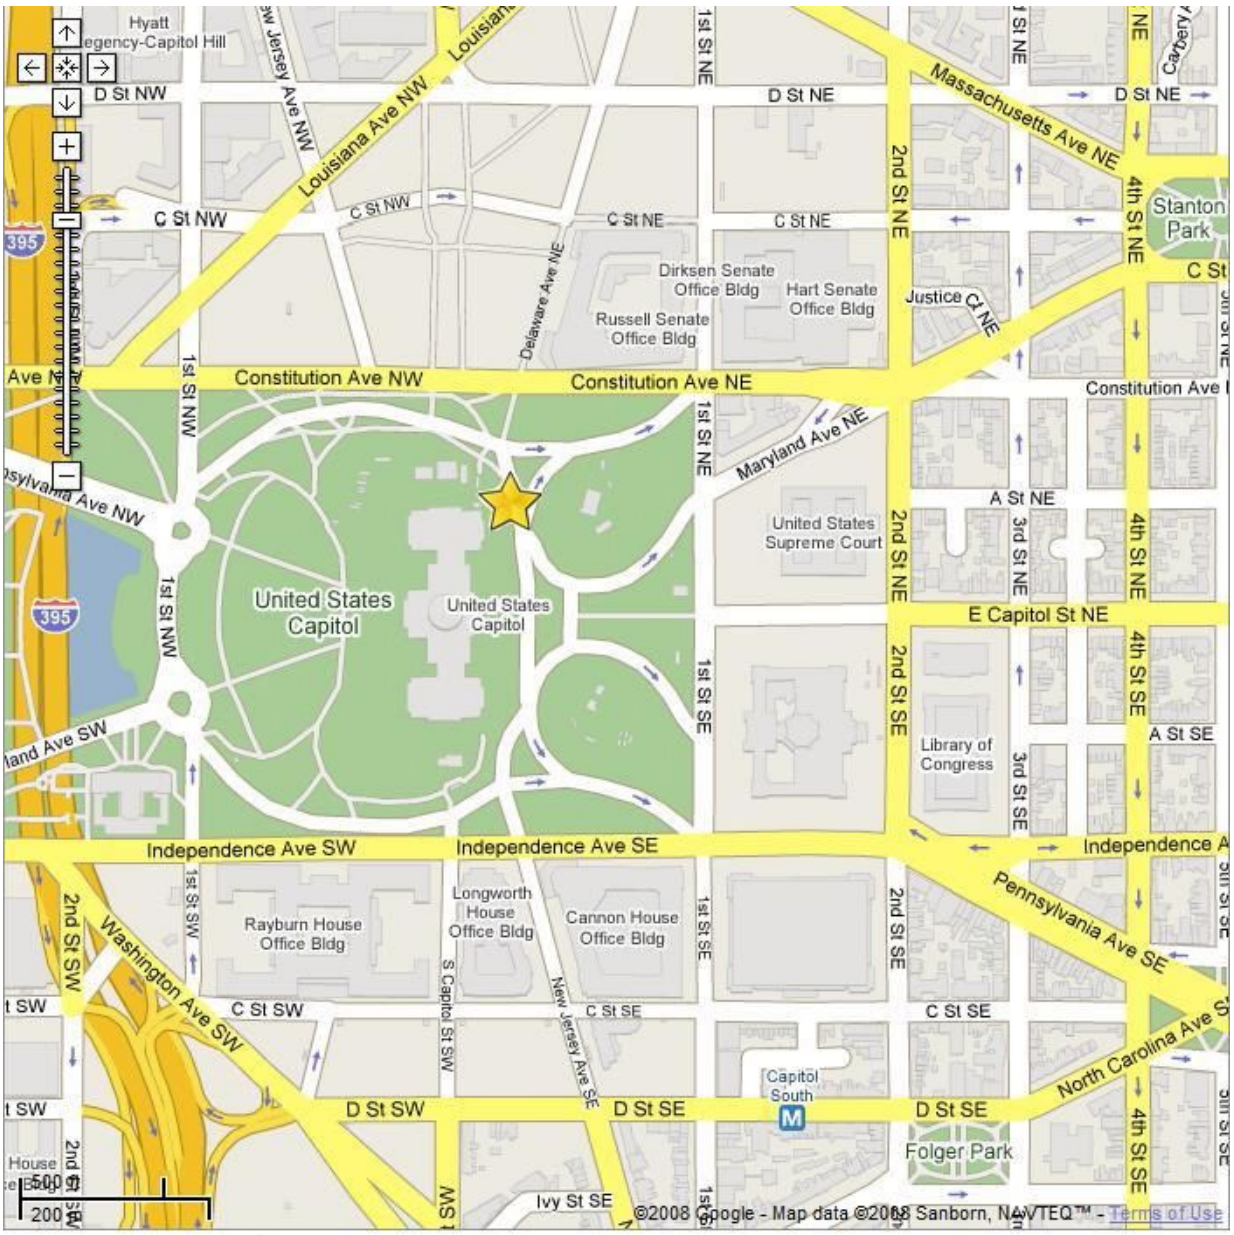
Sen. Feinstein:

Feinstein is sick. She has ASKED if you could come up to her house (3300 Nebraska Ave NW by American University) to see her this afternoon, but says not to worry if it's too much schlep. You can just talk on the phone or reschedule.

I told her staff that it would be very difficult for you to get all the way up there and back in time for your 5:00 pm meeting w/ Brown (now on Capitol Hill), but that I would ask.



Sen. Brown:

The meeting will be at the Capitol building. Brown's staff can meet you at the Senate Appointment Desk on the first floor of the Capitol to walk you down to the office. You can enter the Capitol through the North Screening Facility, which is starred on the attached map.

The scheduler also asked if it would be OK for Chief of Staff, Sarah Benzing, and our Banking Committee Staff Director, Mark Powden, join the meeting?

Hello All,

Tomorrow, the Bernie 2016 African-American Outreach team will host a Twitterstorm for "Twitterstorm Tuesday!" Please join us from 12pm - 1pm EST. Tomorrow's theme is education and will be using the hashtag "#FeelTheBern"

Suggested tweets to use during the Twitterstorm are below and a few photos to use can be found here . Please share this information with your organizations and allies.

Thank you in advance for tweeting!! Please let me know if you have any questions.

Best,

Sarah

SUGGESTED TWEETS FOR TWITTERSTORM - JANUARY 5
The fiction that it is possible to "do more with less," has led to a crisis in higher education. This trend must be reversed. #feelthebern

Bernie Sanders is committed to a clear and emphatic reassertion of the importance of public higher education. #feelthebern

Bernie will take steps to relieve and reverse the crippling burden of student loan debt and the exploitation of adjunct labor. #feelthebern

Bernie Sanders is the only candidate who has made concrete proposals and demonstrated resolute commitment to higher education. #feelthebern

When kids can't go to school, we are failing our youth. Bernie supports expanding educational programs available to children. #feelthebern

Bernie worked with Sen. Warren to help pass an amendment to support afterschool programs and expand learning time. #feelthebern

Working-class families can't locate or access the high-quality child care they need. Education in America must be affordable. #feelthebern

Bernie has proposed legislation to provide all children until kindergarten access to full-time care and educational programs. #feelthebern

HBCU's do a better job of graduating African American students than non HBCU's. #FeelTheBern

51% of HBCU's are public and would qualify for @BernieSanders' plan to make tuition free at public colleges and universities. #FeelTheBern

Many have argued that the mission of HBCU's is outdated. However, this is not true and @BernieSanders will tell you why. #FeelTheBern

HBCU's continue to play a vital role in our nation's system of higher education. #FeelTheBern

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The College for All Act would strengthen faculty tenure systems, which are wrongfully under attack by conservative forces. #FeelTheBern

To truly invest in education is to begin at the earliest stages of child development #FeelTheBern

Worried about the GDP? Then invest in early childhood education. #FeelTheBern

Of degrees earned by Black students, HBCUs produce 18% of ALL engineering, 31% of ALL bio. science, 31% of ALL mathematics. #FeelTheBern

Am I the only one who that strikes as odd? I think people equate civil rights with the civil rights movement and I'm just a little worried that using that for the right to organize may strike some people as an overreach or equating the struggle of unions with the struggle for justice for African Americans.

Maybe I'm overthinking this but it just hit me as a bit off this morning.

Subject:	Victor Pinchuk

Victor Pinchuk is relentlessly following up (including this morning) about a meeting with WJC in London or anywhere in Europe. Ideally he wants to bring together a few western leaders to show support for Ukraine, with WJC probably their most important participant. If that's not palatable for us, then he'd like a bilat with WJC.

If it's not next week, that's fine, but he wants a date. I keep saying we have no Europe plans, although we do have those events in London in June. Are folks comfortable offering Victor a private meeting on one of those dates? At this point I get the impression that although I keep saying WJC cares about Ukraine, Pinchuk feels like WJC hasn't taken enough action to demonstrate that, particularly during this existential moment for the county and for him.

I sense this is so important because Pinchuk is under Putin's heel right now, feeling a great degree of pressure and pain for his many years of nurturing stronger ties with the West.

I get all the downsides and share the concerns. I am happy to go back and say no. It would just be good to know what WJC (and HRC and you all) would like to do, because this will likely impact the future of this relationship, and slow walking our reply will only reinforce his growing angst.

Thanks, and sorry for the glum note on a Monday morning...

I have a new thought on potential interviewer - Maria Elena Salinas of Univision.

I would bill it as an interview on college affordability and she would ask her a few questions on emails.

As you all know, I had hoped that we could use the "server moment" as an opportunity for her to be viewed as having take a big step to deal with the email problem that would best position us for what is ahead. It is clear that she is not in same place (unless John has a convo with her and gets her in a different place).

Accepting that, I think Univision is best chance for success. We have momentum coming out of Jeb's women's health comment and their bad debate. A Univision interview will be viewed as more offense and show that she is confident and not rattled.

How does that strike folks?

Revised. Please take another quick look as I think we should get to her asap. Two questions:
1) What do we do about Powell? Here I've mirrored language from the Q&A, which says "consistent with the practice of prior Secretaries of State," but are we comfortable with that?
2) Am i sending her this and the spox statement or Jen, so you want to do that? Either way, we'll need to explain the two options.

Here is a revised open letter attached to the current version of the fact sheet from the website. This is shorter, more direct, and more even-handed. Not defiant but not particularly contrite either. See what you think. (Will leave it to Nick, Heather, Brian, etc to review fact sheet and make any updates as needed.)

Palin and McCain Chalk Differing Statements on Pakistan up to "Gotcha Journalism" (CBS 09/29/08 6:33pm)

KATIE COURIC: "Over the weekend, Gov. Palin, you said that the US should absolutely launch cross border attacks from Afghanistan into Pakistan to, quote, "stop the terrorists from coming any further in." Now, this is the is almost the exact position that Barack Obama has taken and that you, Sen. McCain have criticized as something you do not say out loud. So, Gov. Palin, are you to on the same page?"

SARAH PALIN: "We had a great discussion with President Zadari about what America can and should be doing together to make sure that the terrorists do not cross borders . . . and we will do what we have to do to secure the United States of America and her allies."

COURIC: "Is that something you shouldn't say out loud Sen. McCain?"

JOHN MCCAIN: "Of course not, but look, I understand this day and age, gotcha journalism, is that a pizza place? In a conversation with someone who, you didn't hear the question very well, you don't know the context of the conversation . . . Gov. Palin and I agree that you don't announce that you're going to attack another country."

COURIC: "Are you sorry you said it governor?"

MCCAIN: "Now hold on a minute . . . this was a gotcha sound bite . . . "

COURIC: "It wasn't a gotcha, she was talking to a voter."

MCCAIN: "It was a conversation with a group of people talking back and forth. I'll let Gov. Palin speak for herself."

PALIN: "In fact, you're absolutely right on, in the context, this was a voter . . . hollering out a question . . . asking, "What're you going to do about Pakistan? You better have an answer about Pakistan." I said we're going to do what we're going to do to protect the United States of America."

COURIC: "You were pretty specific as to what you were going to do there."

PALIN: "As Sen. McCain is suggesting here also, never would our administration get out there and show our cards . . . "

COURIC: "What did you learn from that experience?"

PALIN: "That it is all about gotcha journalism . . . "

ROBERTS: But he supported this deal.

John McCain understood, that had he kept a low profile, talked with members of Congress, as he did, asked them where they were on their votes. Called those members who were reluctant. Conservatives Have Lost Faith in Palin After Failed Interviews, Call For Her To Step Aside (CNN 09/29/08 06:08pm)
JACK CAFFERTY: "Calls calling for Sarah Palin to step aside as John McCain's running mate are getting louder […] Kathleen Parker a well respected conservative columnist writing on the National Review website says that after watching Palin's recent media appearances her "cringe reflex" is exhausted. She said Palin's interviews […] have "all revealed an attractive earnest confident candidate who is clearly out of her league". Parker admits she been pulling for Palin as a woman and a conservative but her lack of understanding of economic and foreign policy issues is troubling. Really? Subject:	2015 Salary Memos
Attachments:	winmail.dat

Dear Colleagues,

It is the time of year at which I request information for salary determinations and summer research grants. Like last year, I invite you to submit both together. In order to provide timely decisions, please submit the information and requests no latter than Monday, March 16. You can send them to Alec Soto, who is cc'd on this email. You are welcome to amend the memos with any additional accomplishments or other information after that date.

Every faculty member should submit a salary memo describing their scholarship, teaching and institutional service over the past year. If you were on sabbatical or a research leave in the spring or fall of 2011, please also include in the memo a report on your work product during that period. If you received a research grant in summer 2014, please include in the memo a report on your activities and the work product. Finally, if you wish to apply tor a research grant for summer 2015, please request it in the same memo.

Most of you will recall that these various reports were previously made in multiple memos. Because I am now asking you to combine them all into a single document, here is some guidance on the structure would be most helpful to me.

1. If you had a sabbatical or research semester in the previous year (Spring 2014 or Fall 2014), describe the work product that resulted.

2. If you received a summer 2014 research grant, describe the work product that resulted.

3. If you are requesting a summer 2015 research grant, your plans for that summer.

4. For the purposes of salary determinations:

(a) your scholarly accomplishments over the past three years.

(b) your teaching over the past year, including any overloads or special circumstances.

(c) Service to the institution.

(d) A copy of your current CV.

As has been done in the past, I will determine salary increases on the basis of the scholarship, teaching and service. Because of its central importance to our academic mission, scholarship, including works in progress, will continue to count for somewhat more in this evaluation process. With respect to your service, I am interested in knowing not only about Law Center and university committee work, but also about your involvement with students outside the classroom, in such capacities as serving as an advisor to a student law journal, assisting with the Moot Court program, and attending student events. It would also be helpful to know about your public interest work outside the law center. I consider attendance at faculty meetings, especially those where a vote is taken, an important part of faculty responsibility. You are welcome to use this opportunity to explain the reasons for any absences.

This year the summer research grants will be for $15,000. A proven record of scholarship and plans for a substantial scholarly written product in the future is a requirement for grant eligibility. I will continue the prior practice of awarding bonus grants of $5,000 to faculty who have made exceptional scholarly contributions in the past few years and provide a prospectus for continued exceptional work this summer. Funding for qualifying pro bono activities is also available, pursuant to a policy adopted by the faculty in 2000 and amended in 2003. A copy of that policy is attached.

This year I will again consider applications for summer grants to work on curricular innovation. As with summer scholarship grants, any funded curricular design project must result in a substantial product (as distinguished, from say, simply preparing a course you have not taught before). To apply for a summer curricular grant, please (1) identify the goal for the project, (2) describe how that goal fits into overall curricular changes at the law school and/or nationally, (3) provide a detailed plan for developing the curricular innovation over the summer, and (4) describe what the work product will be. At the close of the summer, those faculty who have received curricular innovation grants will be required to deliver a description of the work, a syllabus, lesson plans that incorporate the innovation, instructions for replicating the innovation in other courses, a description of how this innovation fits into the literature on curricular change and any other work products described in the application.

Best,

Bill

HATCH VERNON for GOVERNOR
JACKHATCH.COM // #IOWASFRESHSTART

Dear John:

On Tuesday we have a chance to finally end Governor Branstad's lengthy spat as Iowa's chief executive.

He's used his time in office to oppose marriage equality, oppose women's right to choose, and advocated big time for wealthy business owners while doing almost nothing for the middle class that makes Iowa great.

Can you help us bring about the end of an era with $10, $20, or $30 in the closing days of this campaign?

Nobody ever said this was going to be a cakewalk, but we need to fight like hell to put in place a team that understands the urgency of our state's problems and will act on them.

This governor won't address the problem of our embarrasingly dilapidated roads and bridges. This governor can't seem to grasp that you must fund schools adequatley to allow our children to succeed. We need somebody who will make politically tough decisions once in a while for the sake of the state.

Help us elect a team for progress in Iowa. Contribute $10, $20, or $30 today!

Best,

Dane Hudson

Dear Members of the Board,

I am pleased to announce that Donald Sussman has agreed to rejoin the CAP Board of Directors. Based on his distinguished career and previous service on the board, I believe he would be an excellent addition. Please see the memo below for more information on my recommendation and on proposed next steps.

Center for American Progress

MEMORANDUM

Date: April 29, 2015

To: Center for American Progress Board of Directors

From: Neera Tanden, President

Re: Recommendation to Appoint Donald Sussman to the Board

Recommendation for Board Action

I write to strongly recommend that the board re-appoint Donald Sussman to the CAP Board of Directors. Many of you know Donald from his previous service on the CAP Board and from his dedicated work in progressive politics and philanthropy. Donald served as a valued CAP director from May 2009 to May 2012, when he resigned from all boards in order to demonstrate his commitment to an independent news source as a new owner of Maine Today Media.

Now, he is in a position to rejoin. Donald has also had a long and distinguished career in finance. Significantly, he has never stopped being part of the American Progress family and I am confident that his perspective and commitment will be an important part of advancing our work. If appointed, he will participate in the spring meeting on May 26, 2015.

If you agree with my recommendation, please (1) email Alex DeMots to let him know at your earliest convenience at ademots@americanprogress.org, and (2) print and sign the attached proposed Unanimous Consent and return it to Alex via facsimile (202-315-0453) or as a pdf via email.

Alternatively, if you would like to discuss this recommendation, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Dear friends --

Thanks for your support of me and my recovery and of Caron Treatment Centers. Last night was a beautiful event -- a serious heartfelt and moving but joyous celebration of the life changing and saving services that Caron and its honorees offer. Sec Dalton started us off with a spot on invocation and we honored Whitman Walker addiction services -- which are unparalleled for the LGBT population in the DC area. DCs own Steve Elmendorf had made the introduction between our groups and presented them with their award. Also the Millars and their son spoke bravely about their journey into recovery as parents of a son who almost didn't make it but has been sober for 5.5 years. We also heard Potomac Fever sing a few songs -- part of the Gay Men's Chorus of Washington. It was very moving.

I cried a few times and felt super grateful. And I'm grateful for you and your support. If you are still looking to contribute here's the link. www.caron.org/make-donation-DC-gala

And most importantly if you ever think that I or Caron could help with anything related to addiction or recovery pls do to hesitate to reach out any time of day or night.

Happy [expletive] Friday! Hope u enjoy the weekend!

Subject:	WISCONSIN FUNDRAISING

As I indicated, I am trying to raise money for Advancing Wisconsin from local donors. Paul Schmitz is an Obama fundraiser in Wisconsin who lives in Milwaukee. Note this update and reference to c4"s.

Paul Schmitz: He & I have talked (you'll be happy to know we talked while dropping our kids off at the same Milwaukee Public School). He has been instructed by the campaign AGAINST ANY $ going to ANY 527. We had some back & forth on that, I drew the distinction between Advancing WI and a media 527, and I talked about AW also being a c4. He said a c4 would be different. He said the priority he's been given by the campaign is for DNC checks now, and made it clear that any other kind of giving would be a low priority. But he did invite me to attend their meetings, which are bi-weekly – I have not yet talked to our lawyer to make sure that's okay. They're looking for a meeting space and I've asked Anne to check in with Lynde as to whether or not Brico's conference room could be used for that purpose. I'd love to help deliver something to him so that he sees the relationship going both ways. . .

what is odd is that - she did more than reach out to him when she left - she went a did a fundraiser for his charitable enterprise.

then he still said/tweeted less than kind things.

so the notion that it is coming somehow related to her not having spoken to him strike me a hollow in light of some of his comments given her generosity to him as one of her first appearances.

Axelrod on Hillary: 'Ready for What?'

By Peter Sullivan

December 16, 2014

The Hill

David Axelrod, a former adviser to President Obama, said Tuesday that Hillary Clinton needs to establish a rationale for her presidential candidacy, saying when he hears "Ready for Hillary," he thinks, "Ready for what?"

"What happened in 2008 was that Hillary's candidacy got out in front of any rationale for it, and the danger is that that's happening again," Axelrod, who was a top adviser to Barack Obama's come-from-behind win over Clinton in 2008, said on MSNBC's "Morning Joe."

"You hear Ready for Hillary; it's like, 'Ready for what?' "

Axelrod said Clinton could be using the time before she announces her candidacy to decide the answer to that question.

"Now Hillary's task is to define what it is that she's running for and running about," Axelrod said. "And what would the future look like under another President Clinton, and I suspect that's what she's taking her time working through now, but she has to answer that question."

Liberal groups have been pushing forward with an effort to convince Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) to challenge Clinton from the left on economic issues.

MoveOn.org, one of the groups, announced Monday that it has passed 100,000 signatures on its "Run Warren Run" petition. Warren insists she is not running but always phrases the denial in the present tense, which some see as leaving the door open.

Asked if there is an opening for Warren, Axelrod said, "I suppose there is."

"My suspicion is that what she's doing is trying to influence how Hillary frames her candidacy and the issues she focuses on," Axelrod said. "I think Elizabeth is very sincere about her concerns about what's happening in the American economy, and Hillary hasn't yet said what exactly her program will be, what she's running on. I think Elizabeth knows she's got maximum leverage by still being in the conversation."

Many of Axelrod's fellow Obama campaign alumni are now working for Clinton's campaign-in-waiting in some capacity. Jim Messina, Obama's 2012 campaign manager, for example, signed on as co-chairman of the pro-Clinton super-PAC Priorities USA.

Two more top campaign aides, Mitch Stewart and Jeremy Bird, have joined Ready for Hillary.

PRESS CALL: NEW CAPAF Report on John McCain and Job Creation

Read the report here

WASHINGTON, DC—Today at 12:30 PM, the Center for American Progress Action Fund will hold a conference call to discuss a new report on John McCain's economic plan. Given today's stark news of 159,000 jobs lost in September, this report will shed an important light on McCain's job creation claims.

The report, by CAPAF Senior Policy Advisor Brian Levine, reveals that McCain's plan will not create a meaningful number of jobs in the short-term. The situation in America's labor market cries out for urgent action but McCain has no answer. The report analyzes the corporate tax breaks that make up John McCain's "economic stimulus" plan and concludes that they create very few jobs, despite their high cost. A more efficient stimulus plan, costing the same amount, would create more than four times as many jobs as the McCain plan. CAPAF Senior Fellow Dr. Christian Weller and Brian Levine will discuss the implications of McCain's policies given the current economic crisis.

WHAT: Teleconference on John McCain's Economic Policy

WHEN: Today, October 3, at 12:30pm

CALL IN: 888-674-0222

ID: McCain Job Creation

WHO:

Hi John –

Tuesday is the LAST quarterly FEC deadline before Election Day. If we're going to beat Congresswoman Hayworth and the Boehner agenda, we've GOT to crush her fundraising number in this report (we can't fall behind ANYWHERE now).

With polls in the single digits and getting closer, attack ads on the air, and POLITICO calling Hayworth a "top candidate," if we concede a single inch, we may as well concede right now.

To be prepared for October, we need $6,500 to get Sean's field team going, $8,500 for mailers, and $15,000 for ads in the first week. Can you chip in $250 before the FEC deadline to point us to victory?

Thanks. Sean's counting on you.

– Maura

We've had a great week. The Human Rights Campaign speech was fantastic. The gay rights answer she gave the other day at the Townhall was fantastic. But she can't say this about DOMA. It will get us in a lot of trouble.

How to proceed?

Maybe there's a battle she can take on that is authentic to her? Drug companies? Not just for a day but for a long time. Fighting a particular injustice and showing she's on the right side. Of course I'd love it to be Wall Street. But that means being on endless calls w gene which I have little stomach for. But she hates (or at least used to hate) the drug companies and people know she's been into health care for a long time.

OBAMA BIDEN

Hey, John --

On Election Night, you could be snapping a photo very much like this one -- if you take us up on the chance:

This is your chance to fly to Chicago to meet the President in two weeks, and have a front-row seat to history on Election Night.

Here's the deal:

-- We'll cover the flight to Chicago for you and a guest, as well as your accommodations.
-- You'll meet the President of the United States.
-- You'll be right up front when the results come in and the President addresses the nation.

The only way this will go our way is if we each dig deep right now so we can keep pace with the other side.

Whether we celebrate a victory on Election Night is up to you. Chip in $5 or whatever you can to be automatically entered today:

https://donate.barackobama.com/Election-Night

Thanks,

Rufus

Updated with changes accepted here, and adding speechbook@ as we're guessing she needs this ASAP.

Please note that this DOES have the Detroit line:

This week, I'm heading to Detroit to talk about my plan to create jobs in the Motor City and all across our country.

Thanks, all!

Other thing I dont see here is a mention of heading to Michigan and how she will have more to say about creating jobs there. She does not need to say the words herself - but we were going to use the occasion of this speech to tell the press that she would have a jobs speech on Friday in Detroit.

John,

My campaign manager sent around some daunting news yesterday: If donations don't increase dramatically, we will have to make some drastic cuts to our campaign.

Donate $10, $25, or $50 now to keep us on track until Election Day.

There are fewer than 10 days until November, so we can't afford to let up the pressure.

Donate $10, $25, or $50 today so can finish this race strong.

Thanks,

Mike

Everyone,

I have terrible news. Looking at our fundraising numbers and our projected budget, we are in serious trouble. If we don't get more cash fast then we might have to cut our Get Out The Vote program, or even close a field office.

Nothing is final yet, and if donations pick back up we should be fine, but I wanted to warn everyone about our situation.

Doug

Wondering if there is any value in adding Trump's statements today to what we have here on Bush. Together it actually might be stronger and quite frankly Trump is not going anywhere and Bush is stuck in single digits

"That's the way the world goes."

Here are short TPs about guns for the NH community college town hall tomorrow.

This is not a town hall exclusively about gun violence -- it's just a regular town hall. But the person who will introduce her will tell a story about gun violence in her life, and there will be people in the audience from gun violence orgs.

Since she won't have a podium, rather than write TPs that cover her broader message, I just did guns.

See what you think. Attached and pasted below.

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON
TALKING POINTS ON GUN VIOLENCE PREVENTION
MANCHESTER, NEW HAMPSHIRE
MONDAY, OCTOBER 5, 2015

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

- Too many families have stories like Erin's – or worse.
- We've seen yet another mass murder – this time, in a community college in Oregon that's probably a lot like this one. That same day, a five-month-old baby girl strapped into her car seat was killed by a stray bullet in Cleveland. She was the third child killed by a gun in Cleveland in the last month alone.
- We can't just pray for the victims and their families, and pretend like that's enough. It's not nearly enough. We need to act. We need to build a movement.
- You shouldn't have to be afraid to go college, or the movies, or a Bible study class, or to drive around your hometown with your kids in the backseat. What's wrong with us that we can't we stand up to the NRA and gun manufacturers?
- I'm sick of politicians reacting to gun deaths with what amounts to a shrug. Here's what Jeb Bush actually said about the massacre in Oregon: "Look," he said. "Stuff happens. There's always a crisis. And the impulse is always to do something. And it's not necessarily the right thing."
- Governor: you couldn't be more wrong. This kind of violence doesn't just happen. We let it happen. We let it happen when we don't take sensible steps to keep guns out of the wrong hands. We let it happen when we don't do anything to gun dealers who break the rules. We let it happen when children die and we don't do a thing about it.
- People who claim they want to lead America shouldn't just accept the mass murder of Americans. You deserve so much better than that.
- As President, I'll take on the gun lobby. I'll fight to stop domestic abusers and people with mental illness from getting guns… to revoke the licenses of gun dealers who break the rules… to get military-style weapons off our streets… and to end the special immunity that protects gun-makers from accountability.
- If Congress doesn't act to prevent gun violence, as President, I will. That's a promise.

Hi John,

Knox College is my alma mater. You probably don't remember me - I was a naive young woman from Tulsa, Oklahoma.

The purpose of this communication is to request some kind of "official" acknowledgement of the matriarch of an exceptional family who turns 100 years old on April 3rd. Please read the note and brief biography written by her granddaughter.

Allow me to express my heartfelt gratitude in advance for any assistance you can provide as we celebrate and honor the life of a truly amazing American. Sincerely, Joan

MIKE HONDA for CONGRESS

Dear John,

I wanted to make sure you saw Mike's message from earlier this week.

He's right. Donald Trump's bigotry and divisive rhetoric is disturbing — and it's time for the American people to find their voice, like Mike did after living in an internment camp as a child, to defeat this kind of darkness in the United States. Can you add your name today?

Thanks,

Michael Beckendorf
Campaign Manager
Honda for Congress

It's been said the only thing necessary for evil to triumph is for good people to do nothing. I've seen that happen. Silence takes hold and we lose sight of our values.

I witnessed it after living in an internment camp as a child, but in that darkness I found my voice and become an advocate for justice and equality in this country. Now, as Donald Trump's rhetoric is soaring in the polls, our country needs to find our voice in the darkness yet again to defeat his bigotry.

Sign my petition to tell Donald Trump, and the Republican Party, that we won't stay silent in the face of their bigotry and divisive rhetoric.

Donald Trump wants to ban Muslims from entering the United States. Marco Rubio wants to shut down mosques. Jeb Bush and Chris Christie want to keep women and orphans fleeing terrorism from coming to our country. These are not caricatures of these candidates. It is the policies they're proposing, and it is disappointing and disturbing to see the politics of fear reenter our political culture.

But the best thing about this country is that we can be the change we want.

If we truly believe in a country that values love, equality, and justice, then we have to reject the politics of hate and racism. All we have to do to win this battle is find our voice one more time.

Find your voice in the darkness by signing my petition to denounce Donald Trump's rhetoric.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

It's time for each of us to look inside ourselves and challenge the darkness once more. It's time for each of us to look Donald Trump, and the Republican Party, in the eye to denounce these dangerous ideas.

In solidarity,

Mike

The Times has decided against a magazine piece so he is doing daily reporting on the transition efforts for both campaigns and writing for this weekend. The Post is working on a similar piece.
I just played a long game of "I'm not going to comment on that" with Peter. Here is what he told me:

1) Jim Hamilton has begun vetting
2) 13 working groups
3) Decision made on staffing decisions before Cabinet – belief that trying to do Cabinet first was huge problem for Clinton administration
4) No problems with security clearances that he's heard

I told him that not only did I not know what was going on but that we weren't discussing transition period – so a lot of "I don't know" stuff on my end. I have asked Chris to send an email out to folks reminding them that as we get closer to the election the press inquiries will accelerate but the same rules apply.

It's my understanding that Balz was pretty aggressive with Palmieri around our lack of cooperation in these stories – Peter Baker was in his own nice way pretty aggressive with me (anytime I am accused of being like "the bushies"!) The argument is 1) two wars; 2) financial meltdown 3) lead in polls equals need for Obama to reassure country he's proceeding and ready for a seamless, or as seamless as possible, transition. Not suggesting we change our stance on no discussion right now – simply flagging that we may draw a little good government/editorial flack as we get closer

View this email in your browser

Dear Friend,

What makes the perfect t-shirt? Is it the fit, the color, the price? Is it the way it's made -- from the treatment of the people involved in its construction to the stitching along the seams?

As a Not For Sale supporter, we're willing to bet your answer is "all of the above." And while the fashion world has a long way to go to catch up, the 2015 Apparel Industry Trends Report -- created by Not For Sale and Baptist World Aid Australia -- shows important, if imperfect, progress.

We hope you find the whole report fascinating, but here's a quick snapshot:

- We're moving in the right direction. Two-thirds of brands rated in 2013 had improved their grades in 2015, and brands were 39% more responsive when approached for feedback in 2015 than in 2013.
- Some of the biggest brands are on board. H&M and Inditex (Zara) are among the best-rated brands in the report, making real efforts to pay better wages to workers throughout the supply chain.
- We still have a long way to go. Only 12% of companies demonstrated any action toward paying wages above the legal minimum and -- even then -- only for part of their supply chain.
- Supply chain transparency is critical. Of those rated, 91% of companies still don't know where all of their cotton comes from and 75% don't know the source of all of their fabrics and inputs. We simply can't protect workers if we can't identify them.

We hope you'll take some time to flip through the report, which is available on Not For Sale's sister site, Free2Work . You can also find updated grades for your favorite brands on the site, just the tool you need to use your consumer power for good.

Yours,
The Not For Sale Team

Hi Hannah,

Good to talk to you this morning and thanks for all you and your colleagues did for us at the golf tournament. We really enjoyed all of it and especially the chance to visit with him at the villa Friday evening. As I may have mentioned, Dan had not seen him since '92 in Concord.

Below is the radio interview request from Jack Heath who has the top rated morning radio talk show in NH. When the president was running and in office, Jack was the news director at WMUR-TV, our ABC affiliate. Jack interviewed him numerous times up here and at least once in the oval office. He was always respectful and very fair and I am pretty sure WJC will remember him. The Governor, Legislature and Secretary Gardner are making a big deal out of the 100th anniversary of our primary over the next year. A special Commission on which I serve was set up to oversee the commemorative events etc. In my opinion no one has done more to shine a light on the NH Primary and keep it first than WJC with his supportive comments nationally over the years so it is most fitting that he be interviewed about his campaign here and talk about what the NH Primary means for candidates, the races and selection of the ultimate nominees.

If you or anyone else has any questions, please do not hesitate to let me know. My cell is 603-496-9919; office number is below. As noted, Jack would like to do this before Feb. 9, but I am sure will do whatever he can to accommodate the president's schedule. Thanks for considering this.

Best, Terry

Subject: Radio taped interview with President Clinton

Hi Terry,
I am interested in taping a 5-10 minute radio for my daily Morning NewsTalk Show "New Hampshire Today with Jack Heath" solely on the President's reflections and memories of his first NH Presidential Primary experience in which he was declared the Comeback Kid.
We are approaching the 1-year point to the 2016 First in the Nation Presidential Primary and I am planning special historic coverage next month. I am interviewing Bill Gardner, NH Secretary of State and one of his favorite reference points is when Bill Clinton finished 2nd in 1992 but essentially won.
As you know, I have interviewed President Clinton on several occasions, including in the Oval Office when I was News Director of WMUR TV. Mr. Clinton also invited me to interview him in White Plains NY when he was President.
My show airs daily on WGIR AM 610, 96.7FM in Portsmouth and on iHeartRadio live daily from 6 to 9am. I would request a pre tape call in interview with President Clinton some morning any day between next week and before February 9th.
The call in number is 6036416565.
Again, the sole topic is his reflection on the NH Primary, why it works and why it is special.

Thanks,
Jack Heath, 6037142607

Mr. Podesta,
I made your acquaintance some years ago when I was at Bellcore prior to your service to President Clinton. I reach out to you today in my current role as Director of Government Relations for Huawei Technologies, Inc. (USA) and yours as Counselor to the President with responsibility for big data and privacy issues.

You are no doubt aware of the report on the front page of the New York Times about the penetration of Huawei's equipment and internal servers by the National Security Agency (NSA). In light of the story, I write to request your indulgence for the opportunity to meet with you, informally and perhaps over coffee. Of course, the company is concerned about the veracity of the story and the ongoing concerns of the U.S. government's concern about the company and its ownership, relationship to, and its complicity in cyber attacks and surveillance by the Chinese government and military. The company has denied all of these, but despite efforts to be more forthcoming and transparent, clearly the company has not done so to the satisfaction of virtually any government official.

Our objective in meeting with you is not to try to persuade you or to be confrontational, by any means. Instead we seek answers about the story and to get your guidance on how we can move forward cooperatively. You may not be in the best position to do the former; still, we seek to your counsel.

I am using my personal email account rather than my Huawei email address, but would be extremely grateful for a response by whatever means suits you. My contact information is below. The meeting would only involve myself and my boss, Bill Plummer, VP for External Affairs. who is quoted in the story. We would her happy to meet at a time and place of your convenience.

Thank you. I greatly appreciate your consideration of this request.

Regards,
Dennis J. Amari

McCain in NH: Would Be "Fine" To Keep Troops in Iraq for "A Hundred Years"
David Corn
January 3, 2008
http://www.motherjones.com/mojoblog/archives/2008/01/6735_mccain_in_nh_wo.html <http://www.motherjones.com/mojoblog/archives/2008/01/6735_mccain_in_nh_wo.html>

The United States military could stay in Iraq for "maybe a hundred years" and that "would be fine with me," John McCain told two hundred or so people at a town hall meeting in Derry, New Hampshire, on Thursday evening. Toward the end of this session, which was being held shortly before the Iowa caucuses were to start, McCain was confronted by Dave Tiffany, who calls himself a "full-time antiwar activist." In a heated exchange, Tiffany told McCain that he had looked at McCain's campaign website and had found no indication of how long McCain was willing to keep U.S. troops in Iraq. Arguing that George W. Bush's escalation of troops has led to a decline in U.S. casualties, McCain noted that the United States still maintains troops in South Korea and Japan. He said he had no objection to U.S. soldiers staying in Iraq for decades, "as long as Americans are not being injured, harmed or killed."

After the event ended, I asked McCain about his "hundred years" comment, and he reaffirmed the remark, excitedly declaring that U.S. troops could be in Iraq for "a thousand years" or "a million years," as far as he was concerned. The key matter, he explained, was whether they were being killed or not: "It's not American presence; it's American casualties." U.S. troops, he continued, are stationed in South Korea, Japan, Europe, Bosnia, and elsewhere as part of a "generally accepted policy of America's multilateralism." There's nothing wrong with Iraq being part of that policy, providing the government in Baghdad does not object.

In other words, McCain does not equate victory in Iraq--which he passionately urges at campaign events--with the removal of U.S. troops from that nation. After McCain told Tiffany that he could see troops remaining in Iraq for a hundred years, a reporter sitting next to me quipped, "There's the general election campaign ad." He meant the Democratic ad: John McCain thinks it would be okay if U.S. troops stayed in Iraq for another hundred years.....

Well, it was straight talk. And McCain's combativeness livened up a session during which he alternated between the old McCain (as in punchy, feisty, humorous) and the old McCain (as in just plain old). He moved a bit stiffly on the stage set up in the middle of the Adams Memorial Opera House. And he--somewhat oddly--shared the spotlight with Senator Joseph Lieberman, who has endorsed him. Lieberman did not merely introduce McCain; he stood by McCain during the entire event, helping McCain to answer questions about education, climate change, and the Iraq war. Several times, Lieberman gave more coherent and animated replies than did McCain. Repeatedly, Lieberman maintained that McCain could rack up bipartisan successes as president. (The Lieberman sidekick bit was curious. But an elementary-age girl in the audience did say, after being handed a microphone, that Lieberman was her role-model and that she fancied McCain. Lieberman hugged her, and the whole crowd oohed at this cuteness.)

McCain has been coming on strong in New Hampshire, where he beat George W. Bush by 18 points in the 2000 Republican primary. (Some polls place him in the lead.) Eight years ago, McCain thrived as an independent-minded GOPer willing to blast the corruptions of Washington. These days, his stock appears to be rising because he has stuck with the Iraq war and boasts of years of national security experience. "If the world was stable, we could afford Mitt Romney as the national CEO," says a McCain campaign aide (who asks not to be identified). "But in an unsafe and unstable world, Republican voters, and some independents, are coming to see that we need a warrior in the White House." The crisis in Pakistan, this aide notes, was a timely reminder.

So McCain is not doing so bad for a candidate who was on life-support last summer. But it's not that he has craftily orchestrated his revival; the other campaigns have fallen flat. Romney has hard a tough time selling himself as a fellow ready to be commander in chief. Rudy Giuliani cast himself as Mr. 9/11--which is different from persuading voters you are Mr. Win the War. Fred Thompson, who highlighted the foreign policy experience he obtained on the Senate intelligence committee, has mounted a lackluster bid. Mike Huckabee has had little to say about national security and has gaffed too often on foreign policy. Regarding national security and the war, McCain has become the default Republican.

"The Mac is back," Lieberman exclaimed in Derry. Perhaps it's merely that McCain managed to stay on his feet while his rivals have faltered. In the next few days, McCain and his supporters will be pushing him as the Republican who is ready for wartime. This is a potent argument. But will it win over the New Hampshire independents who swooned over McCain in 2000? This slice of the electorate is not particularly fond of the war McCain champions. Michael Dennehy, McCain's political director, says that independents "will agree to disagree on the war with him if they think he's being honest." Well, with McCain boldly declaring he doesn't give a damn how long U.S. troops are deployed in Iraq, his strategists can certainly say he is not holding back. Whether that indeed impresses independents (and Republicans) in New Hampshire won't be known until this Tuesday.

Everybody was happy - well maybe not Huma - but that was with me not with Q-Tip. He was lovely and eloquent. He talked to her about how it's important to let a young black kid in Harlem know how the events in Paris effect him, and how it's so important to connect with the millennial generation in ways that speak to them - being unique and authentic. She remembered that he DJed Chelsea's bday party without prompting! She's amazing. He did mention the radio show BUT it was just in the context of the things he's working on now.

I talked to him a lot before and after - I asked him what he thought about doing the radio show with an audience - which I think would allow us to curate an amazing collection of diverse influencers. This takes us out of his house and gives us more bang for the buck. I'm going to follow up with Betsaida on this!

What do you think?!!!! And THANK YOU for your help with this this morning.

Glass Half Full: House Democratic Caucus Backs McGovern Afghanistan Exit Amendment

Tom Andrews
June 25, 2009

For those concerned the U.S. is becoming mired in a military quagmire in Afghanistan there was good news and bad news on the House floor this afternoon:

The good news is that a majority of House Democrats just voted (131-114) to support the McGovern amendment to the House Defense Authorization bill that requires the Pentagon to develop a military exit strategy from Afghanistan.

The bad news is that the overwhelming majority of House Republicans voted against the amendment (164-7), leading to its defeat.

For opponents of endless war in Afghanistan, it is a question of the glass being half empty or half full.

One the one hand, the glass is half full: this was a strong first vote on what will likely become a prolonged struggle. The early Congressional votes on the Vietnam and Iraq wars were lopsided affairs as Members took the bait that a vote against administration policy is a vote against our troops. With this vote, it's clear that a majority of Congressional Democrats understand that establishing a clear mission that includes a strategy for getting our troops home is necessary to support and protect the men and women we're sending into harm's way. Endless war is not.

On the other hand, the glass is half empty: Congressman McGovern's proposal was very modest. It did not proscribe what the exit strategy should be or on what time-line it should be accomplished. It simply required the administration to come up with one. As Congressman McGovern argued on the floor today: "This should not be controversial." How does something that does what the president himself told a national television audience last month was needed in Afghanistan go down to defeat in the House? How does one oppose such a reasonable and modest proposal?

Simple. You find yourself under pressure from your party leadership-be it Democratic or Republican-and the administration. Leaders on both sides of the aisle pulled out all the stops to defeat this measure. The Democratic and Republican leaders of both the Armed Services and Foreign Affairs Committees lobbied hard. They circulated a letter from all four leaders of the committees imploring a no vote while the debate was underway on the House floor. The administration enlisted the direct engagement of Secretary of State Clinton and Ambassador Holbrooke to convince Members to say no. The president may believe in the necessity of an exit strategy for US forces in Afghanistan but his administration is loathe to actually come up with one.

The McGovern amendment may have come up short today, but nevertheless count me in the glass-half-full camp. Winning the House Democratic Caucus on an issue opposed by Democratic leadership and the White House is no small feat. Indeed, it is hard to vote against the position of a president who you so desperately want to succeed. But this is precisely why many did just that. They do not want to see this administration-and all of the hope and promise that it brings-mired in an endless war that ends in a disaster for all. The very real prospect that the escalation of our forces in Afghanistan will make things much worse and not better is why 80% of Afghans oppose it.

Our congratulations and thanks go to Congressman McGovern (D-MA), Congressman Walter Jones (R-NC), Congresswoman Barbara Lee (D-Ca), and Congresswoman Chellie Pingree (D-ME), the lead sponsors of this amendment. They deserve our thanks not only for taking a principled stand on an important and controversial issue, but for going to work to make this a significant vote - one that will stand as a marker for the struggle ahead. Come to think of it, with friends like these in Congress, our glasses are more than half full.

Now, back to work.

Subject: Campbell's New Position on GMO Labeling

Hi Gary,

I wanted you to hear from me directly that Campbell Soup Company today announced its support for the enactment of federal legislation to establish a single mandatory on-pack labeling standard for foods derived from genetically modified organisms (GMOs). The New York Times just posted a news item that will also appear in Friday morning's edition.

Campbell believes the time has come for the federal government to provide a national standard for labeling requirements to better inform consumers about this issue. The company will advocate for federal legislation that would require all foods and beverages regulated by the Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture to be clearly and simply labeled for GMOs. Campbell also supports a national standard for non-GMO claims made on food packaging. We are not endorsing any specific legislation at this time.

I have attached the statement we issued a short while ago. I welcome your questions.

DEMOCRACY CORPS
CARVILLE ◆ GREENBERG

Days of Rage, Reform, and a Winning 2016 Strategy

By Stan Greenberg & Page Gardner.

These are days of rage in American politics. Americans believe that the political and economic systems are rigged against them, that the government works only for the wealthy and that billionaires are buying elections. They believe experienced politicians are part of the problem, that the status quo has got to go, and their anger is fueling the success of outside candidates. That rage will shape the 2016 election ahead.

But it is time for progressives to see this as an opportunity, rather than a problem. If they do not get it, they will miss an opening to galvanize the great majority of Americans who are increasingly hungry for change. Coupled with this rising impulse is a demand for bold reform of how America does politics. Understanding this dynamic may be the difference between winning and losing this year, and could spark a transformation in the way we run elections and our government.

The Rising American Electorate — the combination of unmarried women, people of color and millennials—makes up the majority of eligible voters and this year, for the first time in history, could comprise the majority of votes cast in a national election. This year the Rising American Electorate will be voting for change. Many of them, particularly white unmarried women, stand out as among those most disaffected with the direction of the country, and share a lot of emotions with white working class women and men, the first audiences for the candidates of rage. They all crave fundamental government and political reform and are likely to vote for candidates who share their alarm and frustration, according to recent research conducted by Democracy Corps and the Women's Voices Women Vote Action Fund.

Over the course of last year, other major polls confirmed deepening voter belief in the need for reform. In November, a Pew Research Center poll found 59 percent of voters saying the government needs "very major reform," up from 37 percent in 1997. A June New York Times/CBS News poll found a stunning 98 percent believe campaign financing needs changing – with 85 percent saying that the system needs fundamental changes or to be rebuilt completely.

Tapping into this desire for reform and acknowledging the need to end the influence of special interest money in elections and reduce waste in government -- in combination with an agenda that helps working families -- brings core constituencies including swing and Independent voters into the 2016 conversation. It also produces significant shifts in the electorate and helps address three big challenges:

- Closing the enthusiasm gap: Our December 2015 Democracy Corps/WVWVAF poll showed unmarried women, millennials and people of color significantly less excited about the election than older, white, conservative voters.

- Ensuring unmarried women and millennial voters turn out in numbers large enough to drive wins not just in the presidential race but in Congressional and other races on the ballot too—a result that will help achieve their policy interests and goals.

- Seizing the opportunity to align and find common cause with white working class women.

We believe these challenges can be overcome by adopting a narrative that puts a middle class agenda at the center of the economic debate and leads the conversation with an embrace of reform: reform of BOTH politics and government.

Many candidates from the highest level down have embraced a bold work and family agenda that aims to level the playing field for the middle class. The agenda includes policies that protect Social Security, make college affordable and cut student debt and help working families with child care, paid sick days and equal pay for women.

But to engage, excite and increase turnout of progressive, independent and swing voters, these Americans must see that the parties and candidates themselves are enraged by the crony capitalism that is denying ordinary citizens a voice and a government that works for special interests, not taxpayers. That is why progressives must embrace upfront the call for systemic political and government reform that includes barring corporate and secret contributions, ensuring taxpayers get their money's worth and rooting out waste.

It is this sequencing of the message, starting with the demand to fix what's broken, that captures voters' attention and produces big increases in enthusiasm. In our most recent poll, 62 percent of Rising American Electorate voters described themselves as very enthusiastic about voting in 2016, up from 56 percent after hearing the linked reform/ middle class agenda message. The message also produced a 10-point increase among millennials.

Progressives should welcome the rage about politics because this momentum can be translated into electoral and policy changes. Messaging that combines a core progressive economic message with a powerful statement on reforming our politics and our government produces significant changes in the electorate that, if fully realized, could lead to increased voter participation and convert voter anger into positive action that starts to repair our political system and government. This year and this election might just be the moment when voters' outrage triggers a new age for our nation, when our democracy delivers on the promise of majority rule.

Dear Colleagues,

I am writing to share with you the news that after four and a half years of top notch, dedicated service to my office and the entire Law Center community, Katie Wrede is concluding her time as my executive assistant. As many of you may know, in Fall 2012, Katie was admitted to the Law Center's evening program. Since then, she has been supporting my office full time while at the same time working diligently as a law student. Katie will begin her final year this Fall, and will now be able to focus full time on her studies and her life and career beyond law school. Katie's last day working in the office will be tomorrow, Friday, May 15th, having concluded another year of meritorious service as we move on to this year's graduation ceremonies.

Since her arrival in December 2010, Katie has been an integral part of my staff. As you know, she welcomed numerous visiting guests, scheduled (and often rescheduled!) countless meetings, and managed my calendar, itself a moving target. Katie's professionalism and grace in the face of the constant flow of activity and changes in plans are both indicative of her dedication to the Law Center and a tribute to her. I thank Katie for her exceptional support these past years, and will miss her.

Please join me in thanking and congratulating Katie on her contributions to the Law Center and wishing her well on her final year in law school.

Sincerely,

Bill

Dear Jake,
Many thanks for your message.
I am very grateful to Stu for connecting us.
Unfortunately I went back home to Israel before we could meet.

I shall be delighted to keep in touch and talk with you over the phone any time (when in Haifa, I have a DC telephone line 202 640 1962). I can also send you a brief article (~ 3,000 words) on ISIS-Iraq-Syria which I have published recently in GIS, a private magazine issued for international businessmen.

My best wishes
Yours

My schedule is in some flux so I'm not sure when I'll be in DC this month, but I'm copying Corey to work on a time.

Looking forward to it,

Dear Jake,

I had dinner tonight with my long-time friend, Professor (Haifa University) Amatzia Baram, one of the top experts in the world on Iraq and ISIS, which was reinforced this evening. He was consulted extensively by the USG during the Bush Administration (they ignored his advice on the Sunni tribes); was at the US Institute of Peace, and the Woodrow Wilson Center, and Georgetown. He has just published a new book on Sadaam.

I really believe it would be worth a half hour of your time, to hear his insights, and could help shape Hillary's policies during the campaign and this increasingly timely issue.

He is in Washington until July 1, and can be reached at 202-247-7159 .

Best wishes,

Attachments:	McCain Summary On Economy.doc

MCCAIN LIKE BUSH ON ECONOMIC POLICY – WHILE WORKERS STRUGGLE, CORPORATIONS PROFIT

In Florida today, John McCain will offer Americans more of the same Bush economic policies that are responsible for our current economic struggles – more rising unemployment, sluggish wage growth, and rising cost of living. McCain even supports two trillion in new tax breaks for corporations and the rich – once again putting corporate profits before people.

After 8 years of Bush economics, America's families are hurting – but McCain only offers more of the same.

- For the seventh straight month, job numbers have fallen . With 51,000 jobs lost in July, unemployment jumped to 5.7 percent. The highest unemployment rate in four years.
- Like Bush, McCain offers billions in tax cuts for Big Oil, but no relief for families. According to the Center for American Progress Action Fund, McCain's tax plan gives nearly $4 billion in tax breaks to the top five American oil companies, but gives families very little. Economists have panned McCain's gas tax holiday, saying it won't help families with gas prices.

McCain's economic plan, like George Bush's, is filled with giveaways for CEOs and corporations, but gives very little to families. In addition to making the Bush tax cuts permanent, McCain offers massive new corporate tax cuts. While big oil and insurance companies get billions in tax breaks, middle class families get little.

- McCain's corporate tax cuts would give $3.8 billion in tax breaks to the 5 biggest oil companies and $1.9 billion in tax breaks to the 10 biggest health insurers. Meanwhile, families who are struggling to pay the bills get much less .
- America's top 5 oil companies Exxon, Shell, Valero and others would stand to receive a $3.8 billion tax break, while the average family might save $44.40 from McCain's gas holiday.
- To pay for these tax breaks, McCain will have to cut programs and services like early education, student loans, cancer research, affordable housing, and transportation by 30 percent -- adding to middle class Americans' economic burdens when they are already facing a rising cost of living.

Subject:	Head's up - Reference and Hillary

Hi John,

It was so good to see you at Erin Haber's wedding (how is it possible she's married!)

Two things:

1. I want to help with the Hillary for President campaign, so please forward my contact info (below) to the right person. And let me know if there is anything I can to to help with progressives and environmentalists in particular. I am very happy to be public and vocal among my enviro peers in making a clear and heartfelt case for enviros getting behind her NOW!

2. I have applied for a job as executive director of the Bay Area Open Space Council, and gave you as a reference. I used you as an example of a board member who I worked well with, and as someone who can speak to me as a strategist and organizational leader. I am one of two finalists, and they are moving quickly. My understanding is that there is some very strong enthusiasm for my candidacy though there are two areas of hesitancy: 1. Can I establish myself quickly as a lobbyist for open space issues in Sacramento (we will be working on a big land bond initiative on the ballot for 2016), and 2. Some people find me either as intimidating or a big organization-type person and wonder if I would be happy or a fit at a smaller organization that is a coalition of 65 + organizations working on protected lands in the Bay Area (ranging from small land trusts to big organizations like the National Park Service.) The head hunter is Nancy Painter.

Thanks so much for your help. I know you are crazy busy now, a word from you would be helpful.

Best,
Deb

John,

I know you've gotten a lot of emails from us lately, but your help matters now more than ever.

Tonight's midnight fundraising deadline is our most important yet -- and we're only $2,040 away from meeting our goal.

Can you help us get there with a $75, $40, or $20 contribution right away?

Newspapers have called my opponent's negative TV ads 'reckless, irresponsible fiction,' but they're not stopping-- and we need to fight back.

Every dollar and every contribution matters.

Thank you,

Friend —

Good news and bad news. While we've been blown away by the hundreds of donations since Terry launched his Rapid Response Fund, right-wing groups continue to pour money into Cuccinelli's campaign.

The RGA's thrown nearly $6 million behind Cuccinelli's campaign — and that's on top of hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of support from the Koch brothers, the anti-women's health group Susan B. Anthony List, and countless others.

We need to raise another $91,125 by the end of August if we're going to keep up with the Republicans' fundraising.

Donate $5 or whatever you can right now to help us fund Terry's Rapid Response Fund — and to make sure we can respond to the baseless attacks they're throwing at Terry.

Hi John--

Just a note to let you know the meeting with FM K. Shanmugam is locked for next Friday from 11 am - 12 pm. Would you prefer to go to him as a courtesy? He offered to come to you here at CAP (and we'd reserve an appropriate room, not just the office).

Also, when does the family arrive? After the meeting with FM Shanmugam, we have blocked 12 pm onward next Friday for pig roast prep and hanging with family, assuming you need that. If you don't, just tell us.

Thanks,
Eryn

Subject: [big campaign] McCain Out of Touch with Women

MCCAIN OUT OF TOUCH WITH WOMEN

The McCain campaign has been pushing the storyline that McCain is poised to win over Hillary Clinton voters, especially women. The facts undercut their argument. A look at McCain's policies and polling data shows that McCain will have trouble winning the women's vote in November*.*

MCCAIN'S POLICIES ARE BAD FOR WOMEN AND FAMILIES

McCain's policies on the issues women care about -- like the economy, the war in Iraq and health care -- leave families on their own.

- McCain's economic plan, like Bush's, helps big corporations and wealthy CEOs, but leaves families behind. While big oil and insurance companies get billions in tax breaks, middle class families get little.
- McCain's health care plan will raise costs and leave families at the mercy of greedy insurance companies. His plan is even more radical than Bush's – it does nothing for those without insurance and threatens the coverage of the 158 million Americans who get health care through their jobs.
- Like Bush, McCain is committed to endless war in Iraq and has no plan to bring our troops home.
  - By a 58 to 39 margin, women believe the US should withdraw troops from Iraq within the year – and unmarried women feel even more strongly, saying that troops should be withdrawn within the year 66 to 30 percent. [WVWV National Women's Survey, 4/14/08]

McCain, like Bush, is ANTI-CHOICE and stands to lose pro-choice supporters. He wants to overturn Roe v. Wade and wants a Supreme Court with "clones of Alito and Roberts."

- About half of the women who backed McCain in March were pro-choice. Half of the women surveyed in the poll also said they didn't know "enough about McCain's views on abortion to say whether he is in step or out of step with their own outlook." [Peter Hart Research Associates for Planned Parenthood Action Fund , 3/18/08]

McCain opposed equal pay. Tomorrow is the anniversary of the passage of the Equal Pay Act. McCain opposed the Ledbetter Fair Pay Act, which would have made it easier for women and other workers to pursue pay discrimination claims .

LOOKING AT THE NUMBERS, MCCAIN IS WEAK AMONG WOMEN:

McCain is losing women. Obama has support from 50 percent of women, McCain has support from only 44 percent. [Democracy Corps, 6/3/08]

McCain is behind where Bush was with women in 2004. While Bush won 48 percent of women in 2004, McCain gets support from only 44 percent. [Democracy Corps , 6/3/08]

Obama doesn't have a problem with women. Obama has support from 50 percent of women, about the same as Kerry's 51 percent. [Democracy Corps , 6/3/08]

Women are more likely to identify themselves as Democrats than Republicans. "This year, 44 percent of women have identified themselves in polls by The New York Times or CBS News as Democrats, 26 percent as Republicans and 24 percent independents." [New York Times , 6/9/08]

ADDITIONAL POLLING INFO: CLINTON VOTERS MOVING TO OBAMA

Clinton Voters Moving to Back Obama

On June 3 in South Dakota's closed primary 61 percent of Clinton's voters said they'd vote for Obama in November, while only 16 percent said they'd vote for McCain. In Montana, 59 percent of Clinton's voters said they would back Obama and 27 percent would vote for McCain. [Salon , 6/3/08]

On May 7, among Clinton supporters in North Carolina only 45 percent said they would back Obama over McCain in November while 38 percent they would vote for McCain. In Indiana, a third of Clinton voters said they would pick McCain over Obama, and only 48 percent said they would back Obama in the fall. [CNN , 5/7/08]

In March, 28 percent of Clinton supporters said they would vote for McCain if Obama got the nomination. [Gallup , 3/26/08]

…Just as Democrats Moved to Support Clinton in 1992

In February 1992, just 63 percent of Democrats who supported other candidates said they'd vote for Clinton in the fall; 31 percent said they'd vote for Bush. [ABC, "The Numbers ," 5/27/08]

In November 1992, 77 percent of Democrats voted for Bill Clinton while only 10 percent voted for Bush. Perot won 13 percent. [Roper Center, accessed 6/4/08]

Mr. Podesta:

It was a pleasant surprise to accidentally meet you once again on the 4 train this past Monday night. With this sort of luck, maybe I should start playing Lotto. I hope I did not talk your ear off during our discussion of the political developments in the disaster known as the Republican Primaries. If so, please accept my apologies.

As we discussed, I am still very eager to pursue an opportunity with DNCC. In reading political commentary by David Brock and others, there seems to be an emphasis on developing a cadre of Hillaryites who could work hard in different departments of the Democratic party, primarily to help implement her political vision for the party and the country as a whole. With all due modesty, I believe that I am precisely the sort of person that Mrs Clinton needs on the DNCC. I am relatively bright, skilled, politically engaged and a member of group that has been historically underrepresented on the DNCC. I could certainly use your support in this effort.

Please advise as to possible next steps in this quest. Thanks once again for your help in this matter.

Re other matters, I am very pleased to see that the campaign has ultilised Majority Leader Macarthy's flub to good use. Friend,

Do you know someone who wants to work on Governor Quinn's campaign? The Fall Organizing Fellowship might just be the perfect fit.

This is a great opportunity for someone looking to get their start in organizing, or for anyone looking to take their skills to the next level.

If this sounds like someone you know, pass this application along -- or apply yourself.

The fellowship is a volunteer program, but Fellows will receive professional training and hands-on experience in grassroots organizing -- working 20 to 40 hours a week alongside some of the best organizers in Illinois.

Our Summer Organizing Fellowship was a huge success, and we can't wait to welcome our next class. They'll be on the front lines of this campaign, fighting for the people of our state.

This program is especially close to my heart, because I got my start as an organizer through a fellowship just like it.

Joining a campaign was one of the best decisions I ever made. It gave me access to opportunities I never imagined -- and it's the reason I'm on this team now.

The deadline to apply is August 20th, and space is filling up quickly.

If you know someone who might be interested, share this application with them today:

Michael

MIKE HONDA for CONGRESS

Dear John,

I've made it my mission in Congress to stand up for working Americans and to defend the middle class. I've never backed down from this challenge, and I won't allowed special interests to silence our voice.

When you make a stand for what's right - people take notice .

Roll Call named me one of "The 10 Most Vulnerable House Members" because millionaires, conservative backers, and corporate interests are bankrolling my opponent's campaign. They know they can count on him to stand up for THEIR interests, not OURS.

Last election, they poured millions against me, even creating a Super PAC that spent over half a million dollars in misleading, slimy attack ads.

But I've got a secret weapon - something that no Super PAC or billionaire can buy. I've got supporters like you.

You stood with me last election, and we won. Now, I need you to stand with me today.

Mike

P.S. I've seen time and time again that grassroots donors beat outside spending and dark money. We know my opponent's right wing backers will spend whatever it takes to get this seat, that's why I need you to chip in right now.

Dear Finance Committee Members,

When we started this campaign together in April, we set an ambitious goal of raising $100 million in primary contributions by the end of the year. Thanks to your unwavering commitment and incredible support, we're proud to share that Hillary for America has raised $112 million in primary contributions this year, including $37 million during the fourth quarter!

This is a remarkable achievement that would not have been possible without your leadership. It also reaffirms the broad and deep base of support for Hillary from hundreds of thousands of Americans across the country and abroad. And because of your efforts, we can continue to build an organization that will mobilize millions of voters in the early states and beyond to ensure that Hillary is our next President.

Additional details will be released when our FEC report is filed on January 31, but here are a few highlights:

- Hillary for America set a new record for the best off-year fundraising of any non-incumbent in history
- 94% of Q4 donations were $100 or less
- More than 60% of donors for the year were women

On behalf of the entire Hillary for America team, we thank you and wish you and your family a very Happy New Year.

Now onto the next quarter!

- Dennis, Rebecca, Mike, Angelique, Jon, Kathy, Lindsay, Lisa, Marcus, Stephanie, Yael, and the Hillary for America Finance Team

We also wanted to share the 89,399 birthday wishes and 18 other numbers that tell the story of Hillary Clinton's campaign in 2015!

Data Debunks Claim That Hillary Clinton Paid Women Less Than Men

The following post first appeared on FactCheck.org .

The Republican National Committee chairman says Hillary Clinton paid women in her Senate office less than men. But annual salary data provided by the Clinton campaign show median salaries for men and women in Clinton's office were virtually identical.

What gives? The answer may be unsatisfying, but it boils down to methodology.

RNC chairman Reince Priebus based his claim on a report by the*Washington Free Beacon* of publicly available expense reports submitted biannually to the secretary of the Senate. Looking at median salaries among full-time, year-round employees, the Free Beacon concluded that women working in Clinton's Senate office were paid 72 cents for each dollar paid to men.

Pushing back against that analysis, the Clinton campaign provided FactCheck.org a list of the names, titles and annual salaries of every full-time person employed in Clinton's Senate office between 2002 and 2008. Those data show the median salary for men and women to be the same at $40,000. The data also show Clinton hired roughly twice as many women as men.

The Clinton list of salaries included full-time workers who may have worked only part of the year, or who took brief unpaid leaves of absence. The Free Beacon list excluded anyone who did not work for an entire fiscal year. Left off the Free Beacon list, for example, was a male assistant to the chief of staff earning a salary of $35,000, because he took a two-week unpaid leave of absence to work on a House campaign.

"There are many different ways to measure these things and you will get slightly different answers," Eileen Patten, a research analyst at the Pew Research Center told us in a phone interview. "It's not that either data set is flawed. They just show different things."

American Enterprise Institute scholar Norman Ornstein, who regularly sifts through disbursement reports from the secretary of the Senate while doing research for the annual Vital Statistics on Congress report , said the data are difficult to use to track salaries because Senate staffers often toggle between Senate and campaign work. That churn was particularly true on Clinton's staff, he said, because she was running for president in 2007 and 2008. For that reason, he believes the Clinton campaign methodology provides a more accurate measure of her record on pay equity.

We take no position on which may be the superior methodology — as Patten told us, both have benefits and tradeoffs. But we think it's instructive to consider those benefits and tradeoffs.

Pay in Clinton's Senate office figures to be an issue because Clinton has made pay inequality, and gender discrimination, a focus of her campaign for president.

Priebus' Attack

On the day Clinton formally announced her candidacy for president, Priebus went on CBS' "Face the Nation" and attacked Clinton on one of her signature causes — equal pay for women — claiming that she paid women in her office less than men.

"[She] can't have it both ways," Priebus said. "She can't pay women less in her Senate office and claim that she is for equal pay."

"We don't know she did that," host Bob Schieffer interrupted.

Said Priebus: "Well, the facts don't bear that out, the facts show that she didn't pay women an equal amount of money in her Senate office."

As we said, Priebus' claim is based on an analysis by the *Washington Free Beacon,*which concluded that women in Clinton's Senate office were paid 72 cents for each dollar paid to men. Using publicly available disbursement reports, the *Free Beacon*based its conclusion on the median salary for men and women — regardless of position — among employees who worked full-time for an entire fiscal year from 2002 to 2008.

"Salaries of employees who were not part of Clinton's office for a full fiscal year were not included," the Free Beacon report states.

Using that methodology, the Free Beacon found the median annual salary for women working in Clinton's office was $40,791, and it was $56,500 for men. The *Free Beacon*reporter who prepared the report, Brent Scher, declined to provide us with the raw data from his analysis to compare with the data from the Clinton campaign. But he said the Free Beacon stands by its report and its methodology, and his methodology was transparent enough to see how he arrived at his numbers.

The Clinton campaign doesn't dispute the accuracy of the Free Beacon data, but it argues the data and methodology lead to a misleading conclusion.

"The Free Beacon based their analysis off an incomplete, and therefore inaccurate set of numbers," said Josh Schwerin, a spokesman for the Clinton campaign. "The fact is, Hillary paid full-time men and women equally."

Schwerin provided FactCheck.org a list of the name, gender, title and annual salary of every full-time person employed in Clinton's Senate office between 2002 and 2008. Notably, the Clinton campaign's figures show the annual salaries of employees regardless of how long they worked in any given year. So if a woman was hired at an annual salary of $50,000 but only worked part of the year (and therefore earned some fraction of that $50,000), the Clinton data would include that salary in the women's salary column. The Free Beacon report would not have included that employee at all. The Clinton campaign data also include employees who may have taken a brief leave of absence (sometimes to work for Clinton's 2008 presidential campaign). Because they did not work the entire fiscal year, they were not included in the *Free Beacon*report.

Taking out Hillary Clinton's salary — we didn't think it was fair to include her since she didn't hire herself — the median annual salary for both men and women, regardless of how much of the year they worked, was identical: $40,000.

(We spot checked dozens of the salaries provided by the Clinton campaign against the expense reports filed with the secretary of the Senate. Direct comparisons were not possible because the Clinton salary data was based on calendar years, while the public disbursement records are based on fiscal years. The annual salary numbers also do not take into consideration any bonuses an employee might have earned. But pro-rated for the amount of the year worked by the employee, the figures we checked generally matched up.)

The 77-Cent Figure

The Free Beacon notes that its methodology more closely mirrors the methodology used by the Census Bureau to arrive at the oft-cited statistic that women earn 77 cents for every dollar earned by men in the U.S. Like the Free Beacon, the Census Bureau only considered full time, year-round employees. And so, the Free Beacon argues, Clinton leaves herself vulnerable to this kind of attack because she has, in the past, repeatedly cited that same 7 7-cent figure.

For example, on Clinton's Senate Web page just before she left the Senate (accessed via the Internet Archive Wayback Machine), it stated, "More than forty years after the Equal Pay Act was signed into law by President Kennedy, women still earn only $.76 cents for every dollar men earn for doing the same work."

More recently, Clinton tweeted this last year:

> @HillaryClinton, April 8, 2014: 20 years ago, women made 72 cents on the dollar to men. Today it's still just 77 cents. More work to do. #EqualPay #NoCeilings

We at FactCheck.org have been critical of this statistic in the past when it is portrayed as the pay disparity "for doing the same work." That's not what it represents.

As we noted when Obama cited the statistic in a campaign ad, the Census Bureau figure is the median (midpoint) for all women in all jobs, not for women doing "the same work" or even necessarily working the same number of hours as men. In fact, women on average work fewer hours than men and are generally under-represented in jobs that pay more. In other words, it is inaccurate to blame the entirety of that wage gap on discrimination against women doing the same jobs as men for the same number of hours. Furthermore, the raw gap for all women is not quite as large when looking at weekly earnings rather than yearly earnings.

The Pew Research Center, for example, did estimates based on hourly earnings of both full- and part-time workers and found that women earn 84 percent of what men earn. Why? According to Pew's surveys, women were more likely to take career interruptions to care for their family, which can hurt long-term earnings. In addition, Pew noted, "women as a whole continue to work in lower-paying occupations than men do." And last, Pew noted "some part of the pay gap may also be due to gender discrimination." Women were nearly twice as likely as men to report that they had been discriminated against at work because of their gender.

In a recent speech at the United Nations Conference on Women on March 10, Clinton did not cite the 77 -cent figure, and she noted that in addition to fighting for equal pay for equal work, closing the pay gap will require "encouraging more women to pursue [higher-paying] careers in science, technology, engineering or mathematics" (about the 11:35 mark).

But the Clinton campaign isn't arguing that the Free Beacon report is skewed because it is not a comparison of similar-level positions. It says the data show there was no pay disparity in Clinton's office when looking at the median salaries of men and women*regardless* of job title. For that reason, we would caution that neither methodology — neither the Free Beacon's nor the Clinton campaign's — purports to compare the salaries of men and women who were doing the same jobs.

Using the salary data supplied by the Clinton campaign, we looked at median and average salaries for men and women in Clinton's office year by year and found relatively minor differences. In five out of the seven years, the median salaries were slightly lower for women without Clinton's salary included. But when all the years were combined, the median salary was $40,000 for both groups. The average salary — again, taking out Clinton's salary — was nearly identical, $50,398 for men and $49,336 for women. And again, Clinton hired nearly twice as many women as men.

So what accounts for the difference between the two sets of findings? Is it just because one includes employees who worked only part of the year (or had a leave of absence)? The example of 2008 is instructive.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

According to the 2008 salaries provided by the Clinton campaign — which, again, includes anyone who even worked part of the year – the median salary for women was $39,500, while the median for men was $43,000. That works out roughly to women making 92 cents for every dollar earned by men. (In other years, it was the opposite — but as we noted earlier, the median for all seven years combined showed median salaries to be the same.)

We then compared the annual salary data provided by the Clinton campaign with disbursement data available from the secretary of the Senate for fiscal year 2008 (Oct. 1, 2007, to Sept. 30, 2008). That doesn't perfectly match up with the Clinton campaign's calendar year figures, but it's close.

Of the 44 women listed in the annual salary data provided by the campaign, 26 of them worked only a portion of the year. And 10 of 24 men worked only part of the year. That means they either started or ended their employment sometime during the fiscal year, or, as was often the case, they took unpaid leaves of absence at some point during the fiscal year. Those would be the people not included in the *Free Beacon*analysis. If those part-year employees are excluded, the median gap widened to $42,500 for women and $59,000 for men. That translates to women earning just 72 cents for every dollar earned by men.

In other words, the Clinton campaign has a good point: Not counting those who worked only part of the year results in a wider pay gap for women in Clinton's office.

A comparison of both data sets shows that those who only worked part of the year represent a little over half of the men and women who worked in Clinton's Senate office that year. Among those who only worked part of the fiscal year, and would not have counted in the Free Beacon analysis, the average and median salaries were higher for women. The median annual salary for women who worked only part of the year was $38,000, compared with $35,000 for men, our analysis of the Clinton salary database showed. The Clinton campaign argues that including those who only worked part of the year makes more sense, because it shows that women and men were offered comparable salaries.

Some Examples

The Clinton campaign also argues that any analysis ought to consider the salaries paid to Senate staffers who also worked for any of Clinton's three political entities: Hill PAC, Friends of Hillary or Hillary Clinton for President. Often, employees were splitting their time between the Senate and political entities and earning significant salaries from those campaign entities, sometimes more than their work for the Senate office.

For example, Huma Abedin, Clinton's longtime assistant/senior adviser, was making a modest salary in Clinton's Senate office ($14,000 in 2002 to $20,000 a year in 2008), but in the latter years of that time period, she was making significantly more money working for Clinton's political entities (Friends of Hillary, Hill PAC and then the presidential campaign beginning in 2007). Public records filed with the Federal Election Commission show in 2008 that she was paid a total of nearly $97,000 in wages from Friends of Hillary, Hill PAC and Hillary Clinton for President.

Another employee, Sarah Gegenheimer, was being paid a $20,000 salary as deputy communications director for Clinton's Senate office in 2007, but she was also making $40,000 a year in the communications office of the Democratic Leadership Offices — Office of Senate Majority Leader and Office of the Democratic Whip, the Clinton campaign says. In addition, FEC records show she was paid another $24,000 in wages for work provided to Hillary Clinton for President and Friends of Hillary.

In other words, both of those employees would have been counted in the *Free Beacon*tally, and both were paid less than the median in Clinton's Senate office, even though their combined salaries were much higher than the median.

On the other hand, Dan Schwerin, a system administrator/assistant to the chief of staff, was not counted in the Free Beacon report, Scher said, because disbursement records show he was not on the payroll from Nov. 2 to Nov. 15, 2007 — even though his salary for the first half of the fiscal year was $15,349 and $20,333 for the second. The Clinton campaign said Schwerin took a brief unpaid leave of absence to help out on a House campaign.

Ornstein said this kind of movement is typical in Senate offices, particularly if the senator is running for reelection or higher office. Some full-time employees are permanently on the payroll year to year, but others bounce back and forth. The better way to make pay comparisons, he said, would be to look at the annual salaries adjusted for the amount of the year someone worked.

"You have to try to compare apples to apples and that is difficult to do, but there is more sense in the way the Clinton people said to do this," Ornstein said.

LegiStorm, a nonpartisan group that tracks congressional salaries, warns on its website that the disbursement figures in the reports filed with the secretary of the Senate do not represent annual salary figures. On its FAQ page , LegiStorm explains, "Because of fluctuations associated with things like holiday bonuses or leaves of absence to work on political campaigns, annual salaries must be calculated with great caution. Some staffers receive additional non-taxpayer-paid income for political work they perform in their free time."

According to the Hatch Act, federal employees like those in Clinton's Senate office are prohibited from engaging in partisan political activities while they are working on government time. However, as the Congressional Research Service explains, the law allows "most federal employees to engage in a wide range of voluntary, partisan political activities on their own off-duty time and away from the federal workplace." Indeed, as the New York Times noted in 2001, "Virtually every member of Congress enlists government employees to do some campaign work."

As the data show, heavy turnover in the office together with movement between Senate and campaign staffs can make a big difference when comparing salaries in Clinton's Senate office.

Let me know if you have changes to this - will get to Mike Allen...

We aren't going to referee decisions about who should or should not be a committee chair. President-elect Obama looks forward to working with anyone to move the country forward. We'd be happy to have Sen. Lieberman caucus with the Democrats. We don't hold any grudges.

Subject: Last night

Dear John,

What a weekend. The Senate has moved forward on the crucial health care bill and now we're one step closer to bringing the real reforms Americans desperately need.

While the bill may not be perfect, we successfully eliminated the anti-choice language found in the Stupak Amendment from the House of Representatives' version. This legislation reforms the current system in dramatic ways. No longer will you have to worry about your insurance being dropped because of a pre-existing condition and no longer will you be denied preventative care.

I want to thank you so very much because the most important voice in this entire process was yours. You stood up and demanded progress; you stood with us and protected a woman's right to choose; as well as a public option; and you stood with us and spoke up for our 47 million fellow Americans that are uninsured.

It is unconscionable that America could go another year with a broken health care system. Too many American families have to make a heart-wrenching choice between putting food on their table or paying their monthly health insurance bills.

After last night, we're on our way to real health care reform. The fight is not over, but we have taken a significant step on the path to progress.

Sincerely,

Kirsten

Dear John,

Today, we're going up on the air in Indiana against a Tea Party Senate candidate, at a total cost of $300,000, and wanted you to see what we're doing, and ask for your help.

SEE WHAT WE'RE UP TO IN INDIANA HERE

Our ad features Iraq and Afghanistan veteran from Indiana, Sam Schultz, who takes on Tea Party favorite, Richard Mourdock, for saying he didn't pledge to support every job in Indiana, and suing to stop the Chrysler bailout – at a time when veterans were desperate for jobs.

There's just about a month until the election, but we have a lot of opportunities out there. But, it will take money.

John,

It was good talking to you today. I'm attaching my template for the economic piece of the transition. This could obviously be scaled up or down. The financial crisis part would need to be scaled up pretty quickly. Most of these people are actively involved in the campaign or the Senate Office and all are outstanding.

One important issue we didn't discuss: Fed governors. They're desperately undermanned. My ideal would be if we could pick our own candidates for President Bush to nominate. They could then be confirmed by the Senate in November and start immediately. Christina Romer (or her husband David) would be excellent at the Fed. As would some of the NY financial people we discussed. Although I haven't checked which districts are already represented to know if this is possible.

Finally, I think it is worth someone talking to Austan about his views on the personnel side, especially since he goes way back. Does not need to be you, but Mike Froman or Jamie Rubin would be good.

Best,
Jason

John,
As we briefly discussed, in Michigan I have focused like a laser on replacing our dwindling manufacturing jobs with clean tech and renewable energy jobs. I pushed through major energy legislation this year, fully restructuring our energy laws. We have now adopted an RPS and a robust energy efficiency law, and a full array of new energy economic development tools. I am deploying an aggressive renewable energy business recruitment strategy -- in fact, I'm leaving for Israel next week on another jobs recruitment mission. I am determined to have our American auto industry help to lead the way in distributed generation, American-grown battery technology, smart grid connectivity and jobs. With Michigan's diverse natural resources (water, forests, wind, geology, and even waste) and because of our history with the auto industry, I know I could blend experience, smart policy, political intelligence and good management on behalf of the Obama Administration.

I know the Secretary of Energy cabinet position is highly sought after, and I am certain the transition team has many terrific candidates.
I'd respectfully like to add my name to the list. If I can be of service, I would be an effective and loyal and deeply committed member of the team. I don't have Carol Browner's contact information, but if she's the right person, I hope you can forward this email on to her. I am attaching some self-serving clips and info about what we have been doing in Michigan on energy, and I have included some information about how I have been able to manage what has been the most challenged state in the nation.

Finally, John, it should go without saying that I'm a happy camper no matter what happens. I am certain President Obama will need partners "on the ground" in the states as well; I love my job and I will be happy to complete my second term as governor if DOE is not available.

I will not abuse this email, and I appreciate your confidential consideration.

Subject:	Re: Question about Congressional Investigations Paper

OK. The grade does matter to me (clerkship applications, etc.), so I'll try to beef it up. If I don't quite make 20 pages of text, I'd ask for a little leeway, because I did include a number of textual footnotes, where the substance broke up the flow too much above-the-line.

Thanks,
Brian

John -- I'll be blunt:

We're in an awfully tough race. Almost every forecaster is calling our race a "TOSS UP" -- many are even calling me the underdog. Here's where we stand:

- FIRST: Boehner launched a $1,750,000 smear campaign all across the Arizona airwaves.
- THEN: Today, my opponent, Andy Tobin, was promoted to the GOP's elite "Young Guns" list.
- NOW: As of 2:30 pm, we're still 234 online donations short before tomorrow's critical ad buy deadline.

John, we don't have time to waste. Pitch in $5 or more to help us break the tie.

Here are updates and success stories in each of our ProgressNow partner states:

CALIFORNIA/Courage Campaign:

Camp Courage. Inspired by the "Camp Obama" trainings that powered neighbor-to-neighbor organizing across America in 2008, Camp Courage is an intensive two-day training designed to teach the principles and skills of community organizing to activists working to restore marriage equality to California. To date, Courage has held four Camp Courage events across the state - in Los Angeles, Fresno, San Diego and Oakland. Over 500 people have attended. The camps seed the development of local grassroots activist teams and networks, especially in communities of color and in so-called "red" parts of California often overlooked by marriage equality activists. http://www.couragecampaign.org/CampCourage

Equality Teams: Organized by volunteers county-by-county, the Courage Campaign has mobilized 23 Equality Teams in 15 counties across California. These teams are creating infrastructure to restore marriage equality to California, enabling community organizers to recruite a grassroots army of marriage equality activists, identify undecided voters, and participate in coordinated statewide Courage Campaign events. In the two months, Equality Teams have canvassed neighborhoods across California, recruiting scores of volunteers and conducting important preliminary conversations with undecided voters. http://www.couragecampaign.org/EqualityTeams

COLORADO/ProgressNow Colorado:

Online and new media success with Angie Zapata trial the first successful prosecution of a hate crime for murder of a transgender

In April, ProgressNow Colorado partnered with 50 progressive organizations including GLAAD and the Colorado ACLU to advocate for passage of federal hate crimes legislation by organizing around the hate crimes trial of Angie Zapata's killer in rural Greeley, Colorado. Angie Zapata was brutally beaten to death with a fire extinguisher because she was a transgender woman. The trial of Angie's killer marked the first time that Colorado's recently-expanded hate crimes law was applied in a case with a transgender victim, and it was also the first time that any state's hate crimes law resulted in the conviction of a transgender person's killer.

We placed full-page ads in four major-market daily newspapers and 19 regional weekly newspapers to raise awareness of Angie's murder and the need for federal hate crimes legislation. We placed op-eds in papers around the state signed by opinion makers as diverse as a community organizer in Denver to a Pueblo city D to Congressman Jared Polis and U.S. Senator Mark Udall. We brought in nationally-recognized blogger Autumn Sandeen of Pam's House Blend to live-blog the trial from a transgender person's point of view. Her 975 updates on Twitter during the trial kept the world informed moment-by-moment, and her personal interactions with reporters at the trial had a noticeable influence on the traditional media coverage both locally and nationally.

Before the trial, ProgressNow Colorado's Jen Caltrider interviewed members of Angie Zapata's family and produced a poignant video that has been watched over 17,000 times online and played on CBS Television's Logo network. We organized and advertised on Facebook, with 1,125,000 people seeing our message at least nine times each, and building a list of over 5,000 supporters in two weeks. We also advertised with Google Adwords, with our message being shown over 13 million times and seen by over 2 million people. 25,000 people visited AngieZapata.com to learn about federal hate crimes legislation. The U.S. House of Representatives passed the bill with a large bipartisan majority two weeks ago, and the U.S. Senate is poised to take up the legislation in the next few weeks.

FLORIDA/Progress Florida:

Working with NAACP and other progressive partners, Progress Florida distributed a letter among targeted members of the press from the Florida NAACP to Gov. Crist regarding his next Supreme Court appointment and the need for diversity. After following up the letter distribution with phone calls to contacts in the media, Progress Florida helped generate press for the NAACP on this critical issue. Working in coalition with Planned Parenthood, ACLU, Equality Florida and the NAACP, we recently succeeded in helping convince Gov. Crist to appoint a more moderate minority judge rather than the radical right wing jurist pushed by the NRA and Conservative Christian Coalition.

Progress Florida successfully drove continued media scrutiny and helped orchestrate a major public backlash that forced the resignation of House Speaker Ray Sansom (R-Destin) after ethics violations and corruption were unearthed by the St. Petersburg Times.
Our www.SackSansom.com website was featured and staff quoted, in numerous newspapers , radio programs and political/news blogs across the state. The public outcry led to a grand jury investigation and on April 17th, Rep. Sansom was indicted on felony charges of "official misconduct". The implications of this are much greater than one person, as the grand jury indictment has sent shockwaves throughout the Florida capital and it calls for major reforms in the budget process.

MICHIGAN/Progress Michigan:

Progress Michigan's Lansing Can Do Better campaign targeted for defeat a proposal to build a new coal-fired power plant in the state's capital. Through strong messaging, earned media and online organizing pressure was put on Lansing Board of Water and Light Commissioners and City Council members. In less than a year, the utility's initially steadfast pro-coal position has eroded and they are now looking at clean energy alternatives.

In our work with the Cure Michigan Campaign, the Embryonic Stem Cell Ballot Initiative, Progress Michigan was responsible for the online marketing and grassroots support of the issue. Through our efforts on Facebook, Twitter, YouTube and working with progressive bloggers across the state, we were able to mobilize activists and supporters on an issue that we were not expected to win. It won 53-47 on the ballot. Pollsters and pundits after the fact attributed much of that success to the online activism. This week the Cure Michigan Campaign was awarded 'Best in Show' by the Central Michigan Public Relations Society of American (CMPRSA) for it's efforts in both traditional press outreach efforts as well as online outreach and marketing. In the year since the creation of our Twitter feed, we now have over 644 followers, who we engage regularly and in turn often retweet our calls to actions, blog posts, rapid responses out to their network, which has lead to spontaneous organic blog posts follows by influential online activists and members of the media.

Progress Michigan worked with the America Votes table on the Obama Budget, and helped to organize, with the national support of Renew and Rebuild America, a press event around the Obama Budget. We were able to bring together environmental organizations, health care organizations, and labor organizations to call on Senator Stabenow to continue support for the Obama Budget. Progress Michigan took the lead on organizing the press event, putting together press materials, and writing talking points, as well as reaching out to the press. We also put out an online take action to call on members to write Senator Stabenow.

MINNESOTA/Alliance for a Better Minnesota:

Pre-Tea Party Blogger Briefing:

Before the national tea parties - several that were being held in Minnesota - on the evening of April 14 ABM shared with the progressive bloggers in our state a memo we put together outlining the facts about the tea parties. The memo was titled "tea party primer" and was used extensively by bloggers throughout the rest of the week to counter the news coverage put out by the right wing. In addition to ABMs news conference, this groundwork gave the bloggers the tools and facts needed to smack down any untruths about the activities - and also forced several right wing bloggers to spend the time talking about the tea parties defending their organizing, participants, etc - in other words, we got them off their message.

Tea Party Pushback:

ABM took on the right wing on the day it's claimed as its own in Minnesota for more than 10 years - tax day. Building on the resources provided by national groups, ABM held a news conference on tax day that garnered coverage from every tv, radio and newspaper outlet (and most online) in direct response to the right-wing "tea party" concept. The coverage provided an argument for the things taxes pay for (services like teachers, police and roads) as well as cast doubt on the organizing and real intent of the events. The result: their tea party looked more like a whiny brat festival. ABM's response was used in several national meme's as well - and we started an online twitter fight that also got mainstream attention - when we asked folks to tweet about the things they are thankful that taxes pay for.

NEVADA/ProgressNow Nevada:

ProgressNow Nevada partnered with Si Se Puede to plan, organize, promote and moderate a forum designed to raise awareness about different types of immigration reform. The event was conducted in both Spanish and English and featured a wide variety of experts ranging from local attorneys, Hispanic business owners, teachers, legal and undocumented immigrants and grassroots political organizers coming together to discuss progressive immigration reform. This event generated significant Spanish media.

ProgressNow Nevada successfully completed an online petition campaign urging the governor to accept federal stimulus funds for unemployed Nevadans. The governor had previously written to the president rejecting the funds. After the petition campaign, our press event and resulting media coverage the governor changed his mind and agreed to accept hundreds of millions of dollars in unemployment benefit money. The majority of Nevada's unemployed are lower-income service workers and ethnic minorities. ProgressNow Nevada led a coalition of non-profit social service groups, many of which were quoted in news stories about pressuring the governor.

NEW HAMPSHIRE/Granite State Progress:

Granite State Progress has focused on helping partner organizations increase their online capacity, providing tools and language to increase online participation. For example, Granite State Organizing Project wanted to participate in the Good Jobs petition action but wouldn't have been able to collect many petitions in person on the four-day lead time. Using GSP's online tools, GSOP generated dozens of petitions from their membership in a couple of days.

Progressive in New Hampshire were at a loss of how to handle President Obama's offer of a Cabinet position to Republican U.S.

Senator Judd Gregg, and the Democratic Governor's likely appointment.

Granite State Progress quickly presented the message frame that Gregg was refusing the hand of bipartisanship by dictating his successor, and then built on that message when Gregg chose not to take the position. Appearing in all major political columns and regional TV news, GSP successfully directed some of the attention away from Obama and Lynch's actions and focused in on criticism of Gregg's

NEW MEXICO/Clearly New Mexico:

Clearly New Mexico coordinated an all out pr blitz on pending legislative attacks on the nonprofit sector, working with over 30 organizations, a dozen letter to the editor, three op-eds and a half a dozen radio shows. we also coordinated a radio ad and grassroots calls with 4 nonprofit allies to kill a $400 million tax increment development district in the legislative session.
http://newmexicoindependent.com/22712/todays-blog-roundup-leprechauns-at-the-roundhouse-and-manny

Clearly New Mexico created over 200 news stories this year, leading to the first ever limit on contributions in New Mexico campaigns and heightened awareness on the role of political contributions and pro-industry votes.

OHIO/Progress Ohio:

Health Care: As part of HCAN, national leaders needed a Senate champion of a public financing option for the pending Healthcare debate. ProgressOhio was the direct HCAN conduit with Sen. Sherrod Brown's staff throughout the Fall of 2008 and Winter of 2009 to secure his role as the "champion" in the Senate of a public insurance option. ProgressOhio committed and arranged a date for a rally in support of the Senator with our partners in HCAN. Their was some concern about the date and time allotted - a Friday at 10:15 in the morning - but through our online to offline work and collaboration with traditional organizing groups we delivered over 500 people to a rally where Sen. Brown publicly committed his leadership to the public plan option.

Youth: Sweatfree came to ProgressOhio for help in obtaining an executive order eliminating state purchasing from sweatshops oversees that take advantage of underage children. ProgressOhio launched a public relations program for them including a Shadows On High column, two press conferences that got statewide play, and worked with a local High School Girl's Field Hockey team which requested their school send back their uniforms and purchase others not made in Sweatshops. The result was an Executive Order by Governor Strickland changing State purchasing policy.

PENNSYLVANIA/Keystone Progress:

Held 2 RootsCamps, training and networking over 200 activists across Pennsylvania, Created news service for progressive bloggers and other new media. More than 75 participants who have placed hundreds of stories we forwarded to them from national and state partners. Assisted partners in conducting news conferences and developing media campaigns. Also wrote news releases and contacted media for numerous partners including SEIU BJ 32, ACORN, Sierra Club, Planned Parnethood Advocates, Equality Advocates, SEIU Healthcare PA, AFL-CIO, SEIU PA State Council, Alliance of Retires Americans.

Built online network of 150,000, with over 40,000 active participants in first 8 months of existence. Created network of nearly 30 partner organizations doing cooperative netroots organizing.

WASHINGTON/Fuse Washington:

Budget Crisis Communications Program: Earned Media and Progressive Coordination

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Fuse coordinated communications strategies and collaborative grassroots organizing for the progressive groups working on the State budget crisis. As the only group who was not focused on protecting specific programs, we were in the best position to coordinate collaborative efforts and promote cross-cutting themes. Our work directly generated ten TV news stories, over 60 radio news stories, and dozens more direct (quoting Fuse) and indirect (other groups using our messages) news hits. This story from KIRO news is a good example: http://www.kirotv.com/video/19055943/index.html

Veto Prevention Strategy: 2 days, 3 bills, 42 organizations, 2500 activists, 1 powerful message. After the Governor indicated she was seriously considered vetoing three of the biggest progressive wins of the 2008 legislative session (including the conservation community's Toxic Toys and Local Solutions bills), Fuse launched an urgent campaign to send the Governor a compelling message from progressives on all three bills. Fuse was the only group in Washington that had actually worked on all three bills.

Our two-day campaign recruited 40 of the leading progressive organizations in the state to cross issue lines and send a message to the Governor urging her to stand with the people of Washington and sign all three bills. Dozens of labor unions and social justice groups weighed in on behalf of the two conservation bills, while conservation groups supported a tax fairness bill. The message was reinforced by a letter from more than 2,500 progressive activists- over 50 single spaced pages of signatures. She signed all three into law.

WISCONSIN/One Wisconsin Now:

One Wisconsin Now led the pushback effort against the "teabaggers" in Wisconsin, generating and providing talking points for coalition partners and leading the countermedia effort. OWN was featured in television, print and radio across the state, ensuring a progressive taxation message was featured universally in stories about the teabagging events. OWN pushback included earned media at the main teabagging event at the state capitol, press releases and follow-up opinion pieces in the state's largest newspapers.

The Institute created and executed a successful strategy to draw media attention and pressure on the state's chamber of commerce, Wisconsin Manufacturers and Commerce, WMCWatch.org, which has spent millions of dollars on advertising and lobbying to promote a conservative policy agenda. As result of the Institute's work at WMCWatch.org and media attention to its effort, WMC publicly-announced its decision to refrain from continuing to run anti-progressive issue advertisements.

OWN developed the Wisconsin Research Project, a collaborative legislative and judicial research program that is creating a permanent in-state progressive opposition issue research program. This program includes a research database which allows the categorization and organization of information on a permanent basis - the goal being a lasting resource for the progressive movement to assist with issues polling and strategic earned and paid media communications.

Ruby told me that you are the person to reach: Previously Sec. Clinton has been ambiguous, to my knowledge, on whether she believes same-sex couples have a constitutional right to marriage. Does Sec. Clinton believe states can ban same-sex couples from marrying, or does she believe such bans are unconstitutional?

Jeb Bush eyes new role for his super PAC during 2016 campaign

DES MOINES, Iowa -- Jeb Bush is preparing to embark on an experiment in presidential politics: delegating many of the nuts-and-bolts tasks of seeking the White House to a separate political organization that can raise unlimited amounts of campaign cash.

The concept, in development for months as the former Florida governor has raised tens of millions of dollars for his Right to Rise super PAC, would endow that organization not just with advertising on Bush's behalf, but with many of the duties typically conducted by a campaign.

Should Bush move ahead as his team intends, it is possible that for the first time a super PAC created to support a single candidate would spend more than the candidate's campaign itself - at least through the primaries. Some of Bush's donors believe that to be more than likely.

The architects of the plan believe the super PAC's ability to raise unlimited amounts of money legally outweighs its primary disadvantage, that it cannot legally coordinate its actions with Bush or his would-be campaign staff.

"Nothing like this has been done before," said David Keating, president of the Center for Competitive Politics, which opposes limits on campaign finance donations. "It will take a high level of discipline to do it."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The exact design of the strategy remains fluid as Bush approaches an announcement of his intention to run for the Republican nomination in 2016. But at its center is the idea of placing Right to Rise in charge of the brunt of the biggest expense of electing Bush: television advertising and direct mail.

- Jeb Bush headed on overseas trip in June
- Watchdog groups: Jeb Bush, others violating campaign finance laws

Right to Rise could also break into new areas for a candidate-specific super PAC, such as data gathering, highly individualized online advertising and running phone banks. Also on the table, tasking the super PAC with crucial campaign endgame strategies: the operation to get out the vote and efforts to maximize absentee and early voting on Bush's behalf.

The campaign itself would still handle those things that require Bush's direct involvement, such as candidate travel. It would still pay for advertising, conduct polling and collect voter data.

Bush's plans were described to The Associated Press by two Republicans and several Bush donors familiar with the plan, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the former Florida governor has not yet announced his candidacy.

Bush spokeswoman Kristy Campbell said: "Any speculation on how a potential campaign would be structured, if he were to move forward, is premature at this time."

The strategy aims to take maximum advantage of the new world of campaign finance created by a pair of 2010 Supreme Court decisions and counts on the Federal Election Commission to remain a passive regulator with little willingness to confront those pushing the envelope of the law.

For Bush, the potential benefits are enormous. Campaigns can raise only $2,700 per donor for the primary and $2,700 for the general election. But super PACs are able to raise unlimited cash from individuals , corporations and groups such as labor unions.

The main limitation on super PACs is that they cannot coordinate their activities with a campaign. The risk for Bush is that his super PAC will not have access to the candidate and his senior strategists to make pivotal decisions about how to spend the massive amount of money it will take to win the Republican nomination and, if successful, secure the 270 electoral votes he will need to follow his father and brother into the White House.

Super PACs got their start in presidential politics when former aides to GOP nominee Mitt Romney set one up to support him at the outset of the 2012 campaign. The group, called Restore Our Future, raised and spent more than $142 million. By comparison, his formal campaign raised $446 million.

The primary complication is the ban on coordination. For example, if the campaign decided to change its focus from one issue to another, it could not share that decision with the super PAC.

One way Bush is already addressing the coordination ban is by frontloading his efforts inside Right to Rise. Because he is not yet a candidate, he can now spend time raising money for the super PAC and take part in strategic campaign planning under its auspices.

Critics also believe that coordination can take place surreptitiously, and such illegal activity isn't punished by an FEC comprised of three Democratic and three Republican members unable to agree on most anything.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Former FEC commissioner Scott Thomas, a Democrat, doubts the Justice Department would ever look at such a case because the FEC has been so precise in detailing what is allowed and what is not.

"You'd have to show a true smoking gun, showing the candidate controlling the campaign and the super PAC," said Thomas, a lawyer now in private practice in Washington. He can't see campaign operatives being that clumsy: "It would have to be a smoking gun left by someone who had the intelligence of an advanced fern."

POLITICO REPORTS: GOP money writes off Trump, shifts focus to keeping Congress

With Donald Trump surging toward the GOP nomination for president, the GOP's special interest allies are getting worried.

Reports are coming in that the GOP is going all in to preserve their majorities in both houses of Congress, and completely writing off supporting Trump in the general election.

THIS IS AN ALL-HANDS-ON-DECK SITUATION!!

John, we've got to raise $10,000 in the next 24 hours if we want to stop the GOP from DESTROYING our chance at a Democratic majority this year.

http://www.foreignpolicy.com/story/cms.php?story_id=4598&page=0

Actually, if you go thru all the story, it is both better and worse than being top progressive, but 17th overall:

In the categorization, CAP is listed as one of the partisans: "These ideology-driven organizations generate the leading ideas on the right and left, develop new political talent, and offer a home to out-of-power party leaders." But not in classses of policymakers, scholars, or activists.

CAP is noted as one of the best new think tanks (last 5 years): "Thanks to its all-star roster of experts and savvy use of new media, CAP has emerged as the intellectual center of Democratic D.C."

But it is not listed in most impact on public debate or most innovative ideas (Brookings is listed in both categories).

Matt: thought you'd find the international listings of interest.

I just accidently ran accross this ranking of think-tanks. The good news: CAP is arguably the top-rated progressive think tank. The bad news: we're 17th overall.

Subject: DC on Friday 7th

Dear Caroline,

I hope that you are well and coping with the winter. You may have noticed that I am visiting DC on Friday the 7th. I shall be giving a talk in the afternoon at USIP.

However if by any chance John Podesta had a few minutes it would be really good if I could see him. Usual topic of how to deal with the Talibs. But I just got back from the region yesterday and so have some fresh feedback if he is interested. Methinks Mr. Podesta does not get to meet anyone with the kind of access to the T's which I have so I think he would find it useful.

Any suggestions on how to get to see him? Apart from the 3-4.30 meeting in USIP I am pretty flexible on Friday.

regards

Michael

For a client we have been testing jeb bush's economic message. It has been remarkably strong. Getting even half of african americans and democrats and two thirds of latinos. Some thought it ended too harsh. But the perspective on the economy has really worked. Now we didn't tell people this was from bush. But its a warning

Our economic recovery has been everywhere but in family paychecks for tens of millions of Americans. Working Americans have a right to be frustrated because they see only a small portion of the country riding the economy's up escalator; more of us deserve to get on. Americans are working harder than ever, more than ever, and earning less than they once did. The answer to closing this opportunity gap is smaller government, lower taxes, and less government involvement so our innovators and our small businesses can get operating again.

John, we were hoping you might be able to take a quick glance at these two excerpts from HRC's book dealing with climate change and energy. We're trying to finalize the text and get it to the publisher, and want to be sure we're not stepping on any unforeseen land mines here, especially in terms of fracking, keystone, etc.

Many thanks

Cheryl asked me to think about a piece from HRC that could accompany the release of her tax returns. One idea is to follow Jeb's example and use this as an opportunity to walk through her personal and professional history (https://jeb2016.com/news/my_career_through_33_years_of_tax_returns?lang=en). Another option, which Jake and I find more attractive, would be to use this as a hook for driving a contrast message on tax policy. I've taken a stab below at what that might look like. This could be a post on The Briefing or Facebook or however we're planning to roll out the returns. If folks don't like this, I'd be happy to try the more personal narrative instead.

Over the past few months, I've listened to Americans' concerns about an economy that still seems stacked for those at the top. Nowhere is this imbalance more apparent – or more problematic – than in our tax code. It's full of loopholes that allow the wealthiest Americans and most powerful corporations to game the system and avoid paying their fair share. It shouldn't be possible for a highly-paid Wall Street trader to ever pay a lower tax rate than a teacher or a nurse, but too often that's what happens. The current tax code also creates perverse incentives that discourage long-term investments that would grow our economy and raise incomes for hard-working Americans.

I've made reforming our tax code to promote strong, fair, long-term growth a centerpiece of my campaign, and I will continue detailing specific new ideas in the months ahead.

Today, I'm releasing my own family's tax returns, on top of previous releases going back all the way to 1977. Since 2008, we have paid $38,648,195 in federal taxes – with an effective tax rate of 35.7% in 2014 – and donated $11,867,350 to charitable organizations. For those who remember Mitt Romney paying just a 14.1% effective tax rate, our bill may seem surprisingly high. But the truth is, for people who have been blessed with as much good fortune as Bill and I have been, it should probably be even higher.

I believe tax reform should be guided by some simple principles.

First, hard-working middle class families and small businesses need and deserve tax relief and simplification.

Second, those at the top have to pay their fair share. That's why I have called for closing the carried interest loophole, which lets wealthy financiers pay an artificially low rate, and implementing the Buffett Rule, which makes sure millionaires don't pay lower rates than their secretaries.

Third, the tax code shouldn't reward companies for shipping jobs or profits overseas, or encourage quick trades on Wall Street at the expense of long-term investments that create jobs and raise incomes here at home. I've proposed raising short-term capital gains tax rates for those in the top bracket and then going to a six-year sliding scale that will encourage longer-term investments.

We hear very different principles from the Republican candidates running for President. For example, Jeb Bush would eliminate capital gains taxes for wealthy investors with no incentives for long-term holding. Marco Rubio's plan would cut taxes for households making [around $3 million] a year by [almost $240,000] – more than three times the earnings of a typical family. That's a budget-busting give-away to the super-wealthy and the sort of bad economics you're likely to get from any of the Republican candidates.

Families like mine that reap so many of the rewards from our economy have a responsibility to pay our fair share. And it's not just the right thing to do -- it's also good for growth. To create jobs and raise incomes, our country needs resources to make big investments in infrastructure, innovation, clean energy, and education. That's vital if we're going to make the economy work for everyone, not just those already at the top.

I believe that we all have to do our part to renew the basic bargain of America: If you work hard and do your part, you should be able to get ahead and stay ahead. And when you get ahead, America gets ahead too.

Friend,

The billionaire Koch brothers are back to bail out Bruce Rauner -- with television ads, online ads, and direct mail attacking Governor Quinn.

Voting starts on Monday, which means that undecided voters are making up their minds about who to support as we speak. That's why the Koch brothers are moving in right now.

It's up to us make sure voters don't fall for it.

Chip in $5 or more now to counter the Koch brother's latest attacks.

The Koch brothers are the masters of "dark money" -- unlimited contributions to conservative candidates in close races across the country.

They believe that the very wealthy should have more influence on politics, and Bruce Rauner is their guy.

The Governor may not have billionaires like the Kochs on his side, but he believes in the power of people like you, pitching in what they can, when they can.

Let's prove him right -- chip in $5 or more right now:

I was hopeful that the bipartisan bill passed by the Senate in 2013 would spur the House of Representatives to act, but they refused even to advance an alternative. Their abdication of responsibility paved the way for this executive action, which follows established precedent from Presidents of both parties going back 70 years. But, only Congress can finish the job by passing permanent bipartisan reform that keeps families together, treats everyone with dignity and compassion, upholds the rule of law, protects our border and national security, and brings millions of hard-working people out of the shadows and into the formal economy so they can pay taxes and contribute to our nation's prosperity. Our disagreements on this important issue may grow heated at times, but I am confident that people of good will and good faith can yet find common ground. We should never forget that we're not discussing abstract statistics – we're talking about real families with real experiences. We're talking about parents lying awake at night afraid of a knock on the door that could tear their families apart, people who love this country, work hard, and want nothing more than a chance to contribute to the community and build better lives for themselves and their children.

Thanks. I can raise 2 with them tomorrow and if you all want to join tomorrow, that would be great too.
Also note - Governor Padilla is scheduled to come to CGI next week and to participate in the "island energy issues" discussion. So might be a second opportunity to raise #2 with him in a room full of folks who would give moral support.
I know this probably is crazy talk - but do you think we should invite PRPPA head to the cgi island energy discussion? Would put them in a tight spot to be in that room and face all those folks and not agree to "do" something.

Two points I would push them on:

1) If all they are going to do is prepare a report, I am not sure that gets us anything. PRPPA is fighting hard against any change at the moment and a report doesn't move the ball forward. They need to use the report as a tool to generate a call for action on some concrete steps, like a law requiring PRPPA to meet specific targets with a timeline for the conversion to renewables. They talk about some pretty specific goals but process of making them happen is critical and its not clear from the memo how that will occur. The key challenge they face is not figuring out what they need to do but figuring out how to get it done.

2) The Culebra idea is interesting. In the past the previous Governor has called for making Vieques energy independent. Working on these two islands is something the foundation might want to explore as a joint project with the Government and PRPPA. Because of WJC's history with Vieques, it also gives us a hook. This would require a meeting between someone with the Foundation, PRPPA and the Governor. Don't know if they would agree but would be big if they did and would show the rest of PR that it can be done. PRPPA may have a lobbyist in DC and it might be easier to make the deal up here than down there where everything is so polarized.

Subject: [big campaign] McCain Has Rejected Goldwater Legacy, Says Granddaughter

Big hat tip to Leighton at BraveNewFilms who connected us with Alison (after she randomly left a comment on BNF's site)...

http://www.huffingtonpost.com/2008/05/27/goldwaters-granddaughter_n_103725.html

McCain Has Rejected Goldwater Legacy, Says Granddaughter

John McCain is prone to tout himself as a "Goldwater Republican," the inheritor of a party and ideology that his Senate predecessor from Arizona, Barry Goldwater, helped shape decades ago.

But Goldwater's own family members say that, if the family patriarch were alive today, he would be sour on McCain and shudder at the kind of conservatism that the current GOP nominee is proposing.

"I don't know if he would recognize the Republican Party today," Alison Goldwater Ross, a registered Democrat and granddaughter of the 1964 GOP presidential candidate, told The Huffington Post. "I'm sure if we were to raise his ashes from the Colorado River... he would be going, 'What? This is not my vision. This is not my party.'"

Such bewilderment, Ross offered, would extend to McCain, the man who took over Goldwater's seat in the Senate in 1987 and currently is the GOP standard-bearer. The two Arizonans clashed on several occasions during their political careers. Goldwater, as documented in "Pure Goldwater," a book by the Senator's son Barry Jr., was depressed and angered by McCain's involvement in the Keating Five scandal. Later in his career, a rift developed between the two after McCain used Goldwater's name -- without his permission -- for fundraising purposes.

"My grandfather felt that he was deceived by McCain," she said. "Because he looked at McCain and said, here was this young guy who has a lot of potential in the Republican Party, who is coming through the ranks, and then he pulled something like this. My grandfather had to ask, 'Is this something I want to be close to?'"

That Goldwater's grandchild says McCain doesn't represent her grandfather's political tradition is not an insignificant revelation. McCain has, in the past, acknowledged a deep desire to impress the elder Goldwater and continue his conservative legacy. In his memoir, "Worth the Fighting For," McCain said of his predecessor: "I admired him to the point of reverence, and I wanted him to like me.... He was usually cordial, just never as affectionate as I would have liked."

And on several occasions, McCain has deliberately taken steps to position himself as the inheritor of the Goldwater revolution. In the final speech of his "biography tour," McCain traveled to the historic Yavapai County Courthouse, a location where Goldwater started all his bids for office.

The reality, some observers claim, is that McCain and Goldwater are two contrasting breeds of Republicans. Ideologically, Matt Welch writes in "McCain: The Myth of a Maverick," the two have a fundamentally different idea about the role and scope of the federal government. But, on a broader level, the Republican Party as a whole has shifter drastically away from Goldwater's vision.

"I think, at the end of my grandfather's career, first of all he would be looking at what state we are in today with what Bush has done, and I think he would be just incredibly appalled," said Ross. "I think his head would be spinning. How in the world did we get ourselves in this state? How did this happen? What went wrong? Where did this Republican Party go?"

On the issues of Iraq, women's rights, and the separation of church in state, Goldwater's granddaughter says the gulf between Barry and McCain is vast.

"I don't think my grandfather would ever pander to the religious right like McCain did. That would get him angrier than anything. He believed in the division between church and state, he fought that constantly. And these guys are getting in there... religion is a wonderful thing but it does not have any place or purpose in politics," she said. "My grandfather was for women's rights. The idea that my body is mine, and what I want to do with it, I will do with it... McCain isn't of that mindset."

So, whom would Goldwater support if he were alive today? Ross, whose dissatisfaction with McCain was first expressed on the website of BraveNewFilms, wouldn't say. But she herself is "leaning towards" Sen. Barack Obama, despite believing that Sen. Hillary Clinton has gotten the short end of the stick in terms of press treatment because of her gender.

"Hillary, you know, was a Goldwater girl. And she has this great tenacity," Ross said. "Unfortunately, she has been directed in some ways that haven't really worked for her campaign... I really like what Obama is representing. I like the fact that if he becomes our next president, the walls will come down; people around the world will view the U.S. as a more enlightened, open-minded country. It will be, overall, an extremely positive mood."

New TV Ad from Americans United for Change Challenges the Party of NO to Support Obama's Plan for Creating Millions of Clean Energy Jobs

*See Early Media Coverage Below

Washington D.C. – Americans United for Change unveiled a new television ad today that invokes images of President John F. Kennedy and compares his challenge of putting a man on the moon that led to the technological jobs of the future to President Obama's challenge to create millions of new clean energy jobs for our generation. The ad called "Jobs of the Future" will air on DC cable this week as the U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee continues work on "The American Clean Energy and Security Act."

Tom McMahon, Acting Executive Director, Americans United for Change: "Congress is acting quickly to meet President Obama's challenge for a clean energy future with transformational legislation that will wean our nation off its dependence foreign oil, dramatically curb pollution that causes global warming, save American consumers hundreds of billions of dollars in energy costs -- all while creating millions of new clean energy jobs. When the time comes, will the Republican Party of NO join with President Obama in his historic effort to grow our economy, improve our energy security, and create millions of green jobs -- or will they continue to look out for big oil's bottom line?"

Obama Ad Compares President To JFK, Lumps GOP With Oil Companies

First Posted: 05-19-09 02:22 PM | Updated: 05-19-09 02:37 PM

The Democratic advocacy group Americans United for Change is releasing a new ad comparing the president's economic policies to John F. Kennedy's Apollo project and lumping Republicans alongside "oil companies" in the opposition.

Titled "Jobs of the Future," the spot will begin airing on D.C. cable starting on Wednesday and throughout the week.

"Fifty years ago, a young President challenged us to put a man on the moon. John Kennedy's vision put America in the forefront of the technological revolution that created the jobs of the future -- for a generation Americans," reads the script. "Today President Obama has challenged us again -- to create the jobs of the future for our generation -- millions of clean energy jobs. But the oil companies and the Republicans just say no."

The ad comes roughly a week after several media outlets reported that Obama's stimulus package was not being implemented in an expeditious manner, and as Congress currently debates a climate change bill that proponents say would create "millions" of new green jobs.

Two key Democrats in the House -- Reps. John Dingell of Michigan and Gene Green of Texas -- have signaled support for the legislation, increasing its odds of passage. But Republican opposition won't be light.

"When the time comes," said Jeremy Funk, the communications director at Americans United for Change, "will the Party of NO help President Obama create millions of green jobs -- or keep looking out for big oil's bottom line?"

"John Kennedy's vision put America in the forefront of the technological revolution that created the jobs of the future -- for a generation Americans. Today President Obama has challenged us again - to create the jobs of the future for our generation - millions of clean energy jobs."

The ad asks voters to call their members of Congress to issue their support for Obama's proposal.

"When the time comes, will the Party of NO help President Obama create millions of green jobs -- or keep looking out for big oil's bottom line?" said Jeremy Funk, comm. dir. of the group.

Trying to counter Republican opposition to sweeping climate change legislation moving through Congress, a liberal-labor coalition is calling them obstructionists tied to Big Oil.

Americans United for Change, in a TV ad that is to begin airing Wednesday in Washington, in contrast compares President Obama to another young, ambitious Democrat.

"Fifty years ago a young President challenged us to put a man on the moon. John Kennedy's vision put America in the forefront of the technological revolution that created the jobs of the future -- for a generation Americans," the announcer says.

"Today President Obama has challenged us again – to create the jobs of the future for our generation – millions of clean energy jobs. But the oil companies and the Republicans just say no. There have always been those who said no to progress. But America has never taken no for an answer."

The spot ends with a plea to call Congress to urge passage of the bill, which supporters say will create clean energy jobs and reduce carbon emissions.

The ad is the latest in a series trying to paint Republicans as the "party of no" -- opposing Obama's agenda, but bereft of any ideas of their own.

Republicans say the cap-and-trade global warming bill would mean huge energy tax increases -- the last thing the economy needs during a recession.

Americans United for Change is going up with another TV advertisement on Wednesday promoting President Obama's plans for job creation and hitting Republicans for their opposition.

The ad draws parallels between Obama and President John Kennedy.

"Fifty years ago a young President challenged us to put a man on the moon," the narrator says. "John Kennedy's vision put America in the forefront of the technological revolution that created the jobs of the future — for a generation Americans.

"Today President Obama has challenged us again - to create the jobs of the future for our generation - millions of clean energy jobs."

And, as it has in the past, the group labels the GOP as the "party of no."

"But the oil companies and the Republicans just say no," it says.

The ad is going on D.C. cable on Tuesday and will run through the end of the week, so not a particularly large ad buy. Check it out below:

John,

I've been tasked with putting together a basic architectural theory for the outside organization(s) for all of us to kick around. I'd love to bounce it off you before we talk as a group – any chance you can spare 15-20 tomorrow morning to discuss?

Best,

In case this is helpful, here is a letter of recc that Tom Lovejoy is sending in for me.

You should have received 2 invitations to submit a letter for me -- one for UMD and one for Georgetown. I"ve heard from David Hayes that the one from Georgetown sounds very generic from it's email address -- hard to tell it came from Georgetown.

The titles for the 2 positions are:

Professor of Science and International Affairs at Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service
Professor in Energy, Security and Environmental Policy at University of Maryland (UMD)'s School of Public Policy

Thanks,

Subject:	He's not backing down

John,

On Monday, I asked you to help Sen. Claire McCaskill defeat Tea Party challenger Congressman Todd Akin -- whose reprehensible anti-woman remarks showed his true colors. The response has been incredible.

But Akin's not backing down. He's vowed to stay in the race and already launched a TV ad defending his position.

Claire needs your help – right now – if she's going to win in November. We cannot wait.

Contribute to Claire's campaign right now. There's no better way to take a stand against Akin's harmful and dangerous brand of politics.

Akin may have issued an apology but his policies reveal the truth – he's authored legislation outlawing abortion, even in cases of rape and incest.

It clarifies yet again why it is so important we have women in Washington playing a key role in decisions that affect our health and our bodies. You can help that cause by sending Claire back to the Senate and preserving our Democratic majority. Click here to give.

I can't thank you enough for all that you do.

Subject: "legitimate rape"

Dear Friend,

In all my years of public service, I've heard a lot of shocking remarks on the campaign trail. But yesterday's appalling comment by Tea Party senatorial candidate Rep. Todd Akin of Missouri took things to a whole new level.

"If it's a legitimate rape, the female body has ways to try to shut that whole thing down," he said, defending his absolute opposition to abortion, even in cases of rape.

This from someone who's tied with Senator Claire McCaskill in the polls, from someone who could tip the balance of power in the Republicans' favor.

We can't let Akin win. We need to help Claire, who's been a strong progressive voice in the Senate on behalf of women's rights.

Give to Claire McCaskill's campaign today and help make sure Akin and his abhorrent views don't reach the Senate.

Click here to make your donation to Claire's campaign right now. It's the best way to express your outrage about Akin's remark and ensure the Democrats keep our Senate majority.

Akin's comment is not just profoundly insensitive to all victims of rape, it shows an astounding ignorance about the workings of the human body. It's hard to believe that he is actually a member of the House Science Committee!

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

But we've come to see how some right-wing Republicans will invent all sorts of unfounded, far-fetched theories to support their ultraconservative ideological beliefs.

It's up to us to make sure Claire has the resources she needs to beat Akin and help us protect the critical Democratic majority in the Senate.

Give to the McCaskill for Senate campaign as soon as you can and make your voice heard. Even just $5 will make a real difference in this extremely tight race.

I believe this could be a real turning point in the Missouri race and in our overall effort to keep control of the Senate. Let's be sure to take advantage of this moment as best we can.

Thanks for your generous support,

Kirsten

Hillary,
I've been thinking about this a lot since our last foreign policy meeting. I'm worried that the hostility toward Obama among donors who buy Bibi's line about his commitment to Israel could cause you to run away from his (and your) overall foreign policy record, which would be a big mistake in the same way that it will squeeze you into a corner that you do not need to be in and prevents you from making a bold case for your success as Secretary of State.

Let's assume a deal with Iran gets done. Then, as I write here, http://www.project-syndicate.org/commentary/obama-foreign-policy-record-by-anne-marie-slaughter-2015-04, Obama will have a foreign policy legacy to be proud of — doing exactly what he said he would do when he came in by opening up relations with Myanmar, Cuba, and Iran and thereby helping to to transform US relations with three distinct regions. These are diplomatic achievements rather than military, and economic as much as political. George W. Bush isolated us in the world; Barack Obama reconnected us in ways that allow us to advance peace and prosperity, etc. There's still a gaping hole in terms of your kind of leadership, but he kept his eyes on the prize and did things that mattered. And you did one of those with him (Myanmar) and laid the indispensable groundwork for the other two.

Finally, the entire "Obama doesn't care about Israel" narrative shifts attention from the real issue with Israel, which is that this government is missing one of the greatest opportunities in Israel's history to move from pariah state to political broker and economic anchor of the Middle East. I made that case in a few short paragraphs in the New York Times Up for Debate (reprinted below) yesterday; Fareed's column this week makes almost exactly the same case. It's not even about what is right for the Palestinians; it is about what Israel could be and do if it could just move to the next phase of its history rather than remaining mired in insecurity and hostility of its past.

This didn't seem like Mother's Day reading, so wanted to get it off today!
Best,
AM

Israel's Rightward Shift Helps Make It Its Own Worst Enemy

It is a difficult and immensely frustrating time to be a friend of Israel. Never in Israel's history would peace with the Palestinians yield such rich and enduring dividends, and never since the peace process began has the

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Israeli government been so resolutely opposed even to serious negotiations.

Real peace could allow Israel to form political, military and economic alliances to make it a regional power broker and let Palestinians thrive.

The center of the Middle East – Iraq and Syria – is disintegrating, mixing virulent and horrifically violent religious fanaticism with civil war and criminal and corrupt governments. But that conflagration has created a new set of actual and potential alignments. Saudi Arabia and the Gulf States are openly willing to work closely with Israel – against Assad, and in the Saudi case, against Iran. But Turkey and Iran would be willing to work with Israel – drawing on its superlative intelligence and military capabilities – against ISIS. And Egypt under President Abdel Fattah el-Sisi is once again willing to work with Israel against Hamas.

With a Palestinian peace that included normalizing relations with all Arab countries, as the Arab Peace Initiative of 2002 and 2007 proposed, Israel could move from pariah state to power broker overnight.

On the economic front, the opportunities are even greater. An Israeli-Palestinian peace would lay the groundwork for Ispajor (an economic union of Israel, Palestine and Jordan), the Middle East equivalent to Benelux (Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg). It's hard for us to remember now, but Benelux was created as a customs union in 1944, when World War II was still raging and the entire European economy was in a shambles. It became the nucleus for the entire European Union.

Israel and Palestine have the strongest tech economies in the region; a peace that would allow Israeli economic growth to extend to Palestine would then create opportunities for Jordan to join and turn its current divide between Palestinian Jordanians and native Jordanians into an advantage. Investors worldwide would flock to a stable and relatively well-governed bright spot in the region, with oil and gas resources, a port on the Mediterranean and highly educated Israelis and Arabs. It seems like a mirage today, but with an Israeli-Palestinian peace it would become a logical next step.

Abba Eban, the great Israeli diplomat and author with a flair for epigrams, is supposed to have said, after the Geneva Peace Conference in 1973: "The Arabs never miss an opportunity to miss an opportunity." Today it is the Israeli government that never misses an opportunity to miss an opportunity.

But Eban also said: "History teaches us that men and nations behave wisely once they have exhausted all other alternatives." Let us hope that the current Israeli government is the last alternative Israelis exhaust before they finally realize the tremendous opportunity of peace – if it is not too late.

Erskine,

Hope you're doing well. Things are going well in St. Louis. Erin is here, as you probably know, and it is good for her to have gotten out of the craziness and we found a much better situation for her husband than he had in NC. We're having a good time and everyone thinks we're remarkably calm whenever there is a (minor) problem. Tough time in the city, but we are doing what we can to try to help. Budget looks pretty reasonable as we had a good year in the market and academic medicine is just roaring right now. Emma and John are here and my mother is coming on Tuesday for our first Christmas in the heartland of America. We miss everyone back home, but are grateful for how it all came out, and I can't thank you enough for your help.

Some of the hard-charging, brilliant students at WU have figured out that you and I worked together and want me to help connect them with folks in the Clinton camp for jobs in the campaign. I don't want to bombard you with their resumes. Is there a good person for me to send them to?

Love to all the Bowles. Hope it's a merry Christmas. Thanks, Pal.

After much searching, they found it! What do you want to do, John? Cabbie is bringing it back to their office in Northeast for now. I can go get it Monday, charge it up, and drop it at your house on my way home if you like. Their office closes at 5 pm so it would be too late by the time you got back from NY. Will do vmail checks today and tomorrow to ensure you aren't missing too much.

I edited the title and added the "too dangerous to fly" line.

Dan - I couldn't tell if this was a typo or just me not understanding, but can you look at the last sentence in paragraph 4?

These past few days, all of us have tried to make sense of yet another senseless terrorist attack. I know that Americans are anxious and fearful, and we have reason to be. The threat is real. The need for action is urgent.

Our intelligence and law enforcement agencies will continue learning about what led to the massacre in San Bernardino just as French and Belgian authorities are doing so in Paris and Brussels. But this much we do know: The threat from radical jihadism has metastasized and become more complex and challenging. We're seeing the results of radicalization not just in far-off lands but right here at home fueled by the internet. It's the nexus of terrorism and technology, and we have a lot of work to do to end it.

As hard as this is, Americans now have to move from fear to resolve. America has beaten bigger threats before, and we will defeat this one as well.

Resolve means depriving jihadists of virtual territory just as we work to deprive them of actual territory. They are using websites, social media, chat rooms, and other platforms to celebrate beheadings, recruit future terrorists, and call for attacks. We should work with host companies to shut them down. It's time for an urgent dialogue between the government, and not just our government – government and the high-tech community to confront this problem together.

Resolve means supporting also our first responders, like the officer in San Bernardino who said he would take a bullet for the civilians he was rescuing. We owe them our support and gratitude and whatever help they need. Local law enforcement should get the support, training, and coordination they need in their communities from counterterrorism experts in Washington. It also means taking a close look at safeguards in visa programs and working more effectively with our European allies on intelligence and information sharing. And yes, Congress must act to ensure that no one who is a suspected terrorist can buy guns anywhere in America.

Resolve means going after the threat at its source in Iraq and Syria and beyond. Our goal must not be to deter or contain ISIS; our goal must be to defeat ISIS. And I have put forth a three-prong plan to do that.

First, deny ISIS territory in Iraq and Syria by leading an intensified air campaign and working with local and regional forces on the ground. Second, dismantle the global infrastructure of terror, the networks that supply radical jihadists with money, weapons, and fighters, and stop them from recruiting and inspiring. And third, toughen our defenses at home and those of our partners against external and homegrown threats.

An effective fight on the ground against ISIS is essential, but that does not mean deploying tens of thousands of American combat troops.

It does mean stepping up efforts to get more Arabs and Kurdish fighters into the fight against ISIS on both sides of the Iraq-Syrian border, supporting the Iraqi Security Forces while pressuring Baghdad to pursue a more inclusive and effective approach, and immediately deploying the Special Operations Forces that President Obama has already authorized with more to follow as more Syrians get into the fight. We also have to demand that our Arab and Turkish partners carry their share of the burden with military, financial, and diplomatic contributions. We will do our part, but it's their fight too, and they need to act like it is.

Dealing with the conflict in Syria with respect to Assad is central to this whole effort. We need to continue Secretary Kerry's efforts to move toward a diplomatic solution to the civil war in Syria that paves the way for new leadership and enables Syrians from every community to take on ISIS. Investing the Russians in this outcome and getting them to step up and do their part will be difficult but essential. And we have to pursue a transition away from Assad and an intensified fight against ISIS simultaneously. We're not going to get Syrian opposition forces to fight ISIS in earnest without the credible prospect of a transition, and that's going to take more pressure and leverage. It's one of the reasons why I have proposed creating a no-fly zone as well as safe havens and more robust support for opposition forces.

And finally, it's crucial that we embed our mission to defeat ISIS within a broader struggle against radical jihadism.

Extremist groups like ISIS feed off instability and conflict, and there is no shortage of that in the Middle East today. Decades of repression, poverty, corruption, a lack of pluralism and tolerance turn the region into a powder keg. That's why we have to keep working with our friends and partners to support economic and political modernization; train effective and accountable local intelligence, law enforcement, and counterterrorism services. And once and for all, the Saudis, the Qataris, the Kuwaitis, and others must stop their citizens from funding extremist organizations and stop supporting radical schools and mosques around the world that have set too many young people on a path toward extremism.

So across the board, we must act with courage and clarity. And it's important to remind ourselves that Islam itself is not our adversary. This is not and we should not let it become a clash of civilizations. It is a clash between hate and hope -- and the vast majority of Muslims are on our side of the battle unless we drive them away. We can't buy into the very narrative that radical jihadists use to recruit new followers or alienate partners we want and need at home and abroad with reckless rhetoric. Declaring war on Islam or demonizing the Muslim American community is not only counter to our values; it plays right into the hands of terrorists.

Muslim Americans are our neighbors, our co-workers, loved ones, friends. Many are working every day all over our country to prevent radicalization. We should be supporting them, not scapegoating them. But, at the same time, none of us can close our eyes to the fact that we do face enemies who use Islam to justify slaughtering innocent people. We have to stop them and we will. Radical jihadists, like so many adversaries in our history, underestimate the strength of our national character. Americans will not cower or cave, and we will not turn on each other or turn on our principles. We will defeat those who threaten us. We will keep our country safe and strong, free and tolerant.

HuffPost: The Obama Test: Personnel is Policy

By Thomas B. Edsall

Forget the election. With November 4 just days away and Barack Obama positioned to become the nation's first African American president, the question has begun to turn to: Who gets what?

Does former South Dakota Senator and Majority Leader Tom Daschle have the inside track to become the White House chief of staff (COS), or maybe William Daley, Secretary of Commerce in the Clinton administration?

Obama campaign manager David Plouffe could seek the COS post himself, and he has a lot of chits outstanding. Sources say John Podesta, a former COS to President Clinton and head of Obama's transition team, has indicated he does not want to go back to the same job, but some think he could change his mind if pressed.

If Obama wants to pick a close personal friend and trusted adviser for the job, he may look to Valerie Jarrett, an African American mover-and-shaker in Chicago who, in 1991 while deputy chief of staff to Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, hired Michelle Robinson, Obama's wife-to-be.

The Chief of Staff choice may prove to be one of the most important Obama makes at a time when the country faces a severe economic crisis, and when newly enlarged Democratic majorities in the House and Senate will be pressing for approval of their special projects after eight years in the wilderness. President Clinton, who took office after 12 years of Republican administrations, picked a weak manager as his first chief of staff, Thomas F. "Mack" McLarty III, and many believe the choice contributed to Clinton's problematic first two years in office.

It's widely agreed that John Kerry would give up his Senate seat if offered Secretary of State, but does Obama want him? Kerry is keenly watching at least two potential competitors, Greg Craig, a top Obama foreign policy adviser, and Indiana Republican Senator Richard Lugar, who would bring bipartisanship to the Cabinet. Would Kerry take UN Ambassador? Richard Holbrooke is a possible, but not likely, choice at State, given the view inside the Obama camp that Holbrooke lost his shot in trying to persuade foreign policy types to sign up with Hillary instead of the Illinois Senator.

One source raised the question: "Is there a role for Tony Lake?"Lake put the Obama foreign policy team together but has said that his job ends on November 4, and that he wants nothing. Could Obama make him an offer --- like CIA director -- that he can't refuse? Lake was willing to take the job under Clinton, but withdrew in the face of Republican opposition in the Senate. Lake might also be tempted by the UN job, "although he has a second marriage and young kids."

Craig, Susan Rice, Samantha Power and a number of others are considered likely candidates for National Security Adviser.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Craig and Rice have been speculated about for the UN.

Within days of winning, Obama is expected to announce his economic team. One theory is that he will try to calm the markets by appointing Larry Summers at Treasury, and Laura Tyson as his number two. Summers has a brilliant academic record and relevant experience, but he also has enemies, especially among women angered by his comments about female under-representation at the top levels of research science. Obama is known to be looking closely at Timothy F. Geithner, the respected president of the New York Fed, as another possibility for Treasury.

Obama has indicated that he will consider reappointing Henry Paulson at Treasury, but Paulson's performance has not been receiving high grades lately, diminishing this possibility.

The appointments Obama makes are not only the blood and guts of Washington gossip, but, more importantly, they are clear signals of the direction the new administration will take, reflecting the accuracy of the observation that "personnel is policy." For the Washington lobbying and special interest group community, appointments are crucial, determining success, access, and business.

A key test will be Secretary of Defense. Obama has indicated he is considering keeping Bush appointee Robert Gates. Such a move could signal that the new president wants Republican cover for a relatively quick troop withdrawal, or that he is acceding to pressure from generals on the ground to go slow on the promised pull-out. There are others on the Defense list, including Nebraska Republican Senator Chuck Hagel who would lend a bipartisan aura, and Thomas Pickering, a career foreign service officer who became Under Secretary of State for Political Affairs during the Clinton administration. Pickering, in the view of some Obama watchers, is a man of parts who, after making good money working for Boeing, could take over at the CIA, the National Security Agency, or become Director of National Intelligence.

Another man mentioned as a potential candidate in the Defense-National Security orbit is Richard Danzig, who served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics under President Carter, and as Secretary of the Navy under President Clinton. Danzig has also emerged more recently as a Middle East expert.

A 'Class A' Cabinet post, Attorney General, could go to Arizona Governor Janet Napolitano, or possibly to African American Obama adviser Eric Holder, or to Jamie Gorelick, considered a top-flight lawyer and a star at both the Pentagon and as Deputy Attorney General at Justice under Clinton. Massachusetts Governor Deval Patrick has been mentioned as a possible AG, although sources in the state say that he has told them he wants to complete a first term and run for a second. Other AG possibles include Alabama Congressman Artur Davis and Chicago US Attorney Patrick Fitzgerald, who prosecuted the Scooter Libby CIA leak probe.

There has been talk that Napolitano could be picked as Secretary of Homeland Security, as there has been that former Indiana Congressman Tim Roemer, who sponsored legislation creating the Department and who later served on the 9/11 Commission, is in the running. Roemer has also been discussed as a possible head of the CIA

If Daschle does not make the cut for COS, he could be offered Secretary of Health and Human Services (HHS), according to yet another source. Additional prospects for the HHS post are Connecticut Representative Rosa DeLauro and Howard Dean, who is a medical doctor as well as the current Democratic Party chairman.

Two high-ranking Democrats in the House, Norm Dicks of Washington and George Miller of California, could be in the running for Secretary of the Interior; Miller has also been mentioned as a possible Education Secretary. Another politician with a shot at Interior is Former Alaska Governor Tony Knowles.

The list of potential Education Secretaries includes Joel Klein, New York public schools Chancellor, and Stanford's Linda Darling-Hammond.

While not as important as Chief of Staff, the White House Counsel has in many administrations played a crucial role, especially in fights with Congress over executive branch testimony and over access to information. Top campaign finance expert, Robert Bauer, who is a key Obama advisor and a widely admired legal advisor, may have an inside track for this job if he wants it, but he has told associates that he plans to remain outside the administration while providing advice to the political wing of the operation.

California Republican Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger has not ruled out serving in a Democratic administration and is viewed as a possible Secretary of Energy or as the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency. Another potential choice for Energy Secretary is Massachusetts Congressman Ed Markey, although if Kerry were to get State, Markey might fix his attention on an appointment to Kerry's Senate seat.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Cassandra Butts, "a pal of Obama's at Harvard," could be a candidate for Housing and Urban Development or for the Education Department. She may have to fight off competition from a powerful interest group, the US Conference of Mayors, however. At least three current and former chief executives of major cities have been mentioned for HUD, including the District of Columbia's Tony Williams, Detroit's Dennis Archer and Atlanta's Shirley Franklin.

There could be some intense competition for the Labor Secretary spot, with Service Employees Institutional Union (SEIU) president Andy Stern, former Democratic House Leader Dick Gephardt, and former House Democratic Whip David Bonior looking at the post.

Among those under consideration for Transportation are Minnesota Congressman James Oberstar, chairman of the Transportation & Infrastructure Committee, and Pennsylvania Governor Ed Rendell, a Hillary supporter in the primaries. Rendell has also been discussed as a possible Commerce Secretary, along with former Dallas Mayor Ron Kirk and Kansas Governor Kathleen Sebelius.

Montana Governor Brian Schweitzer has been mentioned for Agriculture, but sources say that coming to Washington could damage Schweitzer's appeal as a Western politician and his potential as a candidate for national office in the future. Former Iowa Governor Tom Vilsack, who also backed Hillary in his state's caucus, is another prospect for the post.

A choice that would probably win widespread support would be the selection of former Georgia Senator Max Cleland, who lost both legs and one arm in Vietnam. Many Democrats remain deeply bitter over Cleland's defeat in his 2002 re-election bid at the hands of Saxby Chambliss who ran an ad showing Cleland's face morphing into Osama bin Laden.

The prospects after November 4 for all of these competitors remain highly uncertain. One of the most consistent qualities of the Obama operation is that key players hold their cards close to the vest. From all outward appearances, Obama intends to make his appointments quickly and has reportedly already started the vetting process on 700 possible candidates for jobs at all top levels. Facing two wars and the threat of a brutal recession, Obama will have little leisure time after election day, when he will have to negotiate the tricky two-and-a-half-month transition process during which he will be the president-elect with an adversary still holding the powers of office.

ALLEN RAYMOND: And I think, again, this gets to what I said earlier. You know, the question to ask yourself is why: Why am I getting this phone call? And I'll go to the one about free trade, using Hispanic or Latin accents. And the point there is to create cross-pressure.

So if you call a Democratic household that you're fairly certain is—maybe even a union household—opposed to legislation such as, or policies such as NAFTA, the national—the North American Free Trade Agreement, which a union household is going to perceive as a threat to their job, if you make that phone call that says—you know, talking about NAFTA in that accent, you're going to create cross-pressure, because you're going to be saying to that household, you know, while—depending on who they support, they may be in conflict, and they may just throw up their hands and say, "You know what? I'm not going to vote. I'm just going to stay home." Or they may cast a vote that ultimately is not in their best interest. So what you're doing is you're—

Another example might be, you know, if you're a Republican, calling into what you've identified as a Green Party leaning household and encouraging them to vote for the Green Party, because more than likely, that household is going to be a Democratic-voting household if they're not a Green Party household.

So, essentially, you're polarizing, you're dividing, and that's how you win in politics. I mean, this is a—as I said earlier, this is not about morality, this is about winning, but winning in a way that you stay on the right side of the law, which, again, as your listeners know, is something I violated and paid a stiff price for. But nonetheless, the idea is, to win, you need 50% plus one, that means half the electorate plus one vote. And sometimes it's not even a majority, sometimes it's just a plurality. So this is about polarization. It is about division, and it is about wedge issues.

lot of it from your google alerts. I have copied a couple of pieces below. The first is a picture from a news-stand that says it all, followed by an article that will run in the Australian Financial Review tomorrow by the most senior resources writer in the country who sums up the situation pretty well.

The campaign is not over yet - but it is getting closer by the day and we have some more ammunition yet to fire. Next week Tim Buckley & the IEEFA team will be launching their Indian Energy Sector report (Tim has actually built a financial model of the Indian energy sector) that shows that India will cease coal exports within the next few years and building the case for Adani (and everyone else) to invest in renewables instead.

The coalition of groups that have been campaigning to get the banks to rule out financing the project have already pivoted today to escalate the campaign towards the other 3 big Australian banks who are all holding their AGMs at the same time as the Paris COP. And on Monday we have a meeting to thrash out the federal election strategy to build on the momentum from the Galilee/Reef campaign.

The court win and the imminent win against the Adani project is only hardening the resolve of the mining industry and the Federal Government to try to smash the environmental movement. They are claiming that the court win was 'a technicality' a 'bureacratic stuff up' and a 'loophole' when it was clearly a case of the Minister failing to examine the impact of the mine on endangered species. Of course it isn't the first time that the coal industry has treated endangered species (or indeed climate change) as a 'technicality'.

The industry have also dusted off the old 2012 leaked coal strategy to try to claim that there is some kind of foreign funded and tightly orchestrated conspiracy to systematically destroy the Australian coal industry. (I seriously don't know where they get these whacky ideas from!) Shudder to think that environmentalists would use environmental laws to protect the environment!

The attacks will no doubt continue over the coming weeks but the movement here is really firing well and is continuing to build more and more momentum.

Anyhow, I'm going to have the evening off. And then tomorrow afternoon I am going to buy a few bottles of bubbly for a celebration with the EDO legal team, our colleagues at Getup, Greenpeace, 350.org , ECF, Australian Youth Climate Coalition, Mackay Conservation Group, Market Forces and the brilliant and tireless Sunrise team.

You should all drink a toast for a very successful week. Without your support none of this would have happened and the mine might have been half built by now.

The fight isn't over yet but we are on the trajectory to win and it is important to celebrate the big milestones along the way.

Thanks again for your support.

Time-out for Adani's Queensland coal pariah
Matthew Stevens
Australian Financial Review
http://www.afr.com/business/mining/coal/timeout-for-adanis-queensland-coal-pariah-20150806-git3ws (Paywall)
Aug 6 2015

The existential struggles of a hard-working skink and slightly poisonous but otherwise unremarkable snake have left Queensland's $16 billion Carmichael coal project on life support and its sole proponent, Adani Group, in emergency-room discussion with the state government.

But it is increasingly difficult to believe that Adani will linger too much longer before pulling the plug on this pariah of a coal project that has, so far fruitlessly, absorbed just shy of $2 billion.

Carmichael was planned to be Australia's biggest coal mine. The first phase of the central Queensland mine was supposed to cost $US6.5 billion ($8.9 million), making it one of the bigger countercyclical resources investments in Australian history. And preconstruction work was supposed to begin at the mine site some time in September so that first coal could start sailing off to Adani's power stations in India by late 2017.

But a bureaucratic stuff-up that was cleverly identified, and then impressively prosecuted in the Federal Court, by the coalition of anti-coal lobbies that have lined up against a fleet of six Galilee Basin projects means that Adani's September deadline will be missed.

In May and June, the head of Adani's Australian operations, Jeyakumar Janakaraj, told The Australian Financial Review that there was ever less tolerance at head office for further delay of progress at Carmichael and the window of investment opportunity would be put at risk of closure if schedules were again pushed out by Australia's approval lethargy.

Time is the factor of critical importance to an investment decision most often overlooked by politicians and observers alike. It is an issue, though, well-appreciated by the activists armed to stop coal.

Projects are designed and costed around schedules. Carmichael's milestones, ultimately, reflect Adani's increasingly immediate need for coal to feed its own power stations. By our reckoning Adani needs about 10 million tonnes a year of reliable high-quality coal supply by 2017. For four years Adani has worked to make Carmichael the solution. But all the evidence suggests the project is now the problem and that Adani is close to burying Carmichael and seeking more certain alternatives.

Depending on you view point, that is either a massive win for the environment regionally and globally, or a highly indicative setback for the Australian economy and for the people whose current and future welfare depended on development of the Galilee Basin's coal.

Carmichael the frontier project

That is the great thing about living in a democracy: people can own and propagate vastly different views on matters trivial or important. And let's be very clear here: this one is important. Carmichael is the frontier project in the Galilee Basin. If Adani walks then this new energy horizon closes for the forseeable future and possibly permanently.

To appreciate what is up for grabs here, you need to understand that Carmichael is about 800 kilometres from the coast. Adani, in the form of either the company or its billionaire senior owner Gautam Adani, wants to build the mine and the railway that will link it to an already expanded coal terminal at Abbot Point.

There are five other proposals to build mines around the Galilee Basin. Only one other had a realistic plan to build a railway and that project (the Hancock-GVK joint venture) has collapsed into legal contest over the Indian group's failure to meet payment schedules.

So, as coal globally reaches what the anti-coal lobby hopes is an investment tipping point of no return, Adani's is the first and maybe last hope of any sort of progress for the Galilee.

Coal is a relatively ubiquitous and cheap source of energy. That is why it is a cornerstone of most serious long-term forecasts of global and regional energy needs. Coal is also the biggest single contributor to the global accumulation of carbon emissions that an informed consensus says is changing our climate. That is why the Financial Times has dubbed coal the world's most hated commodity.

The First World's problem with coal has, in a moment of classic economic perversity, made it all the more attractive to the emerging world. Coal is suddenly in relatively shallow and apparently permanent oversupply, and that means the price is flat-lining at historically low levels.

So, while the underlying economics of Carmichael are being tested by the current low coal price, Adani suddenly has a whole lot of choice about where it might source its coal. The market for mines and the commodity they produce is highly liquid. Adani needed to spend another $US4 billion to bring the first phase of the Carmichael story to a close. The fact is that Adani's capital might easily be redirected to more mature opportunities less likely to be critically delayed by activists legal and direct.

There is a lot of talk, for one example, that Rio Tinto's Hunter Valley coal system is on the market, with both Glencore and Mick Davis' X2 said to be circling the dataroom.

Since March there has been gathering evidence of Adani's growing ambivalence about Carmichael as work on planning, preconstruction preparations and project financing was either pulled or slowed. Most recently, Adani withdrew a funding mandate from the Commonwealth Bank, which had been the Australian bank charged with marketing Carmichael's three-layered funding package.

Skewed confusion

There has been some typically skewed confusion over this decision. Some have preferred to believe that the CBA dropped Adani's business, and to market this as a sea-change in Australian banking's embrace of coal as an asset class. But we have been reassured by both bank and former client that Adani ended the mandate, and that Australia's biggest bank remains open for coal business.

Certainly this fits with advice consistently offered by the CBA's chief executive, Ian Narev. Like his peers among the pillars, Narev routinely receives anti-coal's most important advocates and, just as routinely, insists that just walking away from coal would be as bad for his shareholders as it would be for the Australian economy.

Until the canning of the CBA, Adani presented each of these retreats as sensible brinkmanship. The foreign investor was simply announcing to governments state and federal that it would spend no more without final tick-off on the last of its Commonwealth environmental approvals. But closing the door on finance appears to signal more enduring intent.

Just to be clear on the approvals issue, the one Adani regarded as its investment trigger was a Commonwealth sign-off on the week's worth of dredging needed to drive a new shipping lane between Adani's new coal export pier at Abbot Point and the existing shipping channel that take boats through the Great Barrier Reef.

This approval has been a matter of local and global contention. It sat central to the environmental lobby's sustained effort to get the GBR placed on UNESCO's list of "at risk" environmental wonders. Had that happened, then Carmichael's goose would already have been cooked. But it didn't: in late May UNESCO decided not to risk-list the Reef.

Adani and the state government (which is the applicant for the dredging approval because the port authority will do the digging and the spoil dumping) expected Commonwealth indulgence to arrive finally in August. And with that Adani would get work started at the mine site.

But that potential has been blown out of the water by Canberra's stuff-up. By failing to indicate that the Environment Minister had adequately contemplated the impact of the mine on a pair of endangered species that live around the impact area, the environment department has undermined the legal sustainability of Carmichael's approval and this little part of the whole has to be addressed all over again.

That is going to take maybe two months. But that might be time that Carmichael just doesn't have. And can we really expect that the even more fraught dredging approval will arrive in happy tandem with the redrafted mine sign-off? If not, then we might be into November and possibly beyond before Adani's approval-chickens are lined up. Again, that might be time that this project doesn't have.

To: Edie Irons <edieirons@inthefire.com >

Hey folks,

I've got an incredible offer.

They have offered to bring their computer, camera, backdrop, high-quality photo printer, and photoshop skillz to fundraisers between now and the election to help raise money for Obama. This was a HUGE hit at a fundraiser I was just at, and they charged $10 per photo, which includes a glossy printout and an electronic copy via email.

So, do you know of any Obama fundraisers coming up where they can set up shop? Ideally they need about a 8x8 space indoors where they can set up computer, printer, lights, backdrop, etc. I believe they have all the materials they need, so you wouldn't have to do much extra besides give them space. Decisions about where they will go will be made based on their schedules, and if demand is high, then possibly on the expected size of the event (i.e. they'll come out for larger events if they have to pick and choose).

Let me know!

I am writing to support Ned Farquhar's application to work in the Administration. I know him from my service as Colorado House Majority Leader and as well as board chair of Western Progress. Everyone who knows Ned thinks incredibly highly of him. He has a strong reputation of being able to get things done, and he has worked well across party lines and in cooperation with industry and environmental advocates to pursue western clean energy and climate policies.

Ned would be an excellent choice to bring western perspectives to the Administration's national energy/climate program. I think he would be a great fit as Assistant Secretary for Land and Minerals, among other possible positions. His resume is attached.

it sounds like getting a picture of taking the girls to school would involve a waiver. What is a 2nd option for a photo that day?

Do we have a podium sign with the seal being printed somewhere?

We have locked a ballroom at the Hyatt for avails. We are trying to lock an additional ballroom for the meeting followed by avail for Friday.

We are close to having office space locked for Wed-Friday. Adam Hitchcock will update later today. Hopefully Ariel Cap which is one block from our HQ and one block from Hyatt.

We should get this to BO if no one has issues.

This riveting biography from the American Bar Association, visits the spectacular life of Edwin Land, breakthrough inventor. At the time of his death, he stood third on the list of our most prolific inventors, behind only Thomas Edison and one of Edison's colleagues. Land's most famous achievement of course, was the creation of a type of film and camera that could produce a photographic print an instant after the picture was taken. The book takes you behind the scenes of his discoveries, his triumphs, and defeats. This book presents an unprecedented look at a reclusive genius.

You'll learn details of Land's involvement over four decades with top-secret U.S. military intelligence efforts during World War II and through the Cold War in the service of seven American presidents. Additionally, you'll thrill to the compelling first-hand look at perhaps our nation's most important legal battles over intellectual property - Kodak versus Polaroid. This corporate and legal struggle is a story of almost operatic dimension. What began as a cooperative and collegial relationship ended in Kodak's betrayal. The conflict led to an epic legal battle, a dramatic event for Land who, from the witness stand, personally starred in a compelling courtroom drama.

Gone Fishin': Right-Wing Media Hook Another Dubious Obama Conspiracy Theory

Summary: The right-wing media fell hook, line, and sinker for the latest Obama-centric conspiracy theory. Easily made puns aside, the story was tailor-made for "conservative journalism." After all, the initial report hadn't a shred of evidence to support its claims.

Subject: The lifeblood of our campaign

MIKE HONDA for CONGRESS

Dear John,

In a few short days, we will be making critical decisions about how to proceed in winning this election. We are facing another close race, and our opponents have proven they are willing to do or say anything to win. But that isn't what Silicon Valley voters need right now.

This district needs a real progressive champion who will fight to stop the voices of darkness in the Republican Party. I've been that throughout my entire career, and I have no intention of stopping now; not when Donald Trump and his supporters are rising in the polls. This fight for America's soul is deeply personal for me, and I believe Congress needs an advocate for justice, equality, and peace more than ever.

Beyond that, we need someone who will fight to create jobs, protect worker's rights, stand up to the NRA and pass sensible gun safety legislation, and combat climate change. I believe that I am the only person in this race who is truly committed to those progressive issues, and that is why I am working so hard to earn re-election and continue the honor of serving you in Congress.

If you agree, can you take a moment to make a contribution to our campaign and help us reach $10,000 online by Sunday? Invest in our campaign by giving $10 or more today:

DONATE $10
DONATE $25
DONATE $50
DONATE $100
DONATE $250

Your support is the lifeblood of this campaign, and it will make a real difference in this election.

Let's show my opponents the strength of our people-powered movement.

In solidarity,

Mike Honda

TODAY'S FINANCIAL CRISIS IS THE MCCSAME AS SAVINGS AND LOAN SCANDAL

McCain has been at the center of a circle of greed, special interest favors, and lack of bank and government oversight once before. McCain was reprimanded by the Senate Ethics Committee for his involvement in the Keating Five Savings and Loan scandal. Years later McCain, along with Phil Gramm, advocated for the aggressive deregulation of Wall Street that led to today's financial crisis.

Deregulation and Corporate Greed, Supported by McCain and his Special Interest Lobbyists, Has Led to Current Financial Crisis

Economic experts say that McCain Advisor Phil Gramm and others are to blame for the current crisis that is shaking Wall Street. Gramm's successful effort to pass banking reform laws in 1999, which reduced decades-old regulations separating banking, insurance and brokerage activities, helped to create the current economic crisis. [ABC News, 9/17/08]

McCain Voted to De-Regulate Wall Street McCain voted for 1999 Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act, which de-regulated wall street by breaking, "down the walls between banking, insurance, and securities…" [American Banker, 3/11/08, emphasis added]

McCain Has a Long History of Putting Corporations and Lobbyists Interests Before American Families

McCain Was Top Recipient Of Keating Contributions During Senate Bid. McCain received $55,000…from Keating's company. "Tory Clark, McCain's press secretary, the biggest recipient of American Continental-linked money, acknowledged that he co-sponsored a House resolution in 1985 urging [Bank Board Chairman Edwin] Gray to delay for six months implementation of the regulation." [United Press International, 11/1/86]

Regulator Said McCain Took Advice from a Criminal.
"In the S&L crisis, he took his advice from the worst [kind of] criminal. Charles Keating is the person he went to for his policy advice," Black said. [Huffington Post 10/01/08]

Keating "Sought a Quid Pro Quo" From McCain. The banker's attitude was summed up the day a reporter asked whether his political donations to the senators encouraged their intervention. 'I want to say in the most forceful way I can, I certainly hope so,' Keating replied."[Associated Press, 3/23/08]

McCain Leaned On Federal Regulators To End Examination Of Keating's Company. In 1987, the Los Angeles Times reported: "Five U.S. senators in an unusual show of support for a constituent, pressed federal regulators at a meeting last April to wind up a then yearlong examination of Lincoln Savings & Loan Assn. and to end 'unfair treatment' of the Irvine-based S&L, a spokesman for one of the senators said Monday." [Los Angeles Times, 9/29/87, emphasis added]

McCain's "Poor Judgment" Admonished By Senate Ethics Committee. According to the Associated Press, the Senate Ethics Committee admonished McCain for his involvement in the Keating 5 Scandal, saying he used "poor judgment." [Associated Press, 12/20/07]

U.S. Taxpayers Stuck With Keating's $2.8 Billion Bill. The Associated Press reported, "The U.S. government seized Lincoln in 1989, sticking taxpayers with a bailout cost of $2.8 billion." [Associated Press, 3/23/08]

McCain Surrounded By Lobbyists Fights Reforms

McCain Led Effort To Allow Campaign Funds For Personal Use. In 1994, McCain introduced a motion to kill a Democratic amendment prohibiting the use of campaign contributions for personal purposes, including a salary for the candidate. McCain's motion to kill the amendment passed 64-35. S. 2, Vote #9 , 1/10/1995]

McCain Opposed A Provision Prohibiting Members Of Congress And Staff From Converting Frequent Flyer Miles From Official Travel To Personal Use. In 1995, McCain voted to kill an amendment that would have barred Members of Congress or their staffs from using frequent flyer miles accrued while on official travel for personal use. The motion to kill the amendment passed 54-45. [S. 2, Vote #10 , 1/10/1995]

McCain Repeating Keating Era Mistakes, Regulator Warns "In the S&L crisis, he took his advice from the worst [kind of] criminal. Charles Keating is the person he went to for his policy advice," Black said. "Now, he certainly is getting advice from Phil Gramm, Carly Fiorina, Rick Davis -- the whole group of economic and top political advisers are lobbyist types. He just doesn't seem to get it, ever, that the advice is going to favor their clients. [Huffington Post 10/01/08]

Subject:	Cabo -- let's consider DCA

You were right. No cheaper options that don't have you on a 7 hr plus layover. And you definitely have the best option going out of IAD.

However, for the same mileage price of 75k round trip per person, let me give you 2 DCA outbound options, and a DCA return, if that interests you, in case you don't want to park and spend the money at IAD. The times are also better. The fees on the itinerary below appear to be identical to your current itinerary.

2 DCA OUTBOUND OPTIONS:

DCA - Houston - SJD
Departs DCA at 8 am (which would at least allow you to metro)
Layover at Houston is 1 hr 20 mins
Gets into SJD at 1:26 pm, which is nearly the same as your current arrival.
Seats look great; again, that's 37.5k, just like your current outbound

OR

DCA - ORD - SJD
Departs DCA at 6 am (can't metro, but still, it's an option)
Layover at ORD is 1 hr 53 mins
Gets into SJD at 12:45 pm
Seats look great; again, that's 37.5k, just like your current outbound

1 RECOMMENDED DCA RETURN:

SJD - IAH - DCA
Departs SJD at 2:16 pm (30 mins later than your current itinerary)
Layover at IAH is 1 hr 20 mins
Arrives DCA at 11:05 pm (30 mins earlier than your current itinerary gets you into IAD)
Seats look great; 37.5k per person, just like your current return

Thoughts on switching to a comparable, and slightly better timed DCA itinerary, or would you rather keep the IAD itinerary?

And I hope you at least savored the look of 2 million miles before you made the purchase! So cool.

Makes total sense that they would be doing this, as they have to be aware of how much their brand is damaged, especially among anyone who isn't an older white male. But we shouldn't let them get away with it, because rebranding their party is a total façade, as evidenced by the policies they push – both economically and socially. Agree that we need to continue to drive, and perhaps more forcefully enhance, that contrast with all of our target groups. Pushing the future/past contrast is important in face of what they are trying to do here.

I watched them this morning. I was surprised by how little real estate they give to "Republican". Clearly they feel they need to peel off women and people of color. I think this makes our work driving the contrast with our target groups all the more urgent.

Subject: VIDEO: Unite for Change

Obama for America

John --

Last weekend, tens of thousands of people attended Unite for Change meetings in all 50 states.

These meetings connected Obama supporters, Democrats who supported other candidates in the primary, Independents, and even some Republicans.

They came together to talk about the change this country desperately needs and form the fundamental building blocks of change in their communities.

Check out this video we put together from events all over the country and share it with your friends:

http://my.barackobama.com/ufcvideo

Unite for Change was an incredible display of the strength of our grassroots movement and the power of Americans to unite around our common desire for change.

No one of us can change this country alone.

That's why it's so important to bring Democrats, Independents, and Republicans who are tired of the politics of the past together to plan how to organize their neighborhoods.

Here are some stories we heard from people who participated in Unite for Change events this weekend:

> "Obama attracts really great folks. Our small apartment had 18 of us all chatting about Obama and the good to come nationally and even locally. During the DVD, my 2 year old kept saying 'that's Obama' whenever we saw our candidate. For those of us here in the reddest state it is very affirming to see others supporting a good cause and speaking freely and about the change this country needs. I really feel like we did some good for Obama and for ourselves today. His community organizer roots were showing because we had a room full of the young and young at heart being involved politically for the first time."
> -- Amylouise in Coeur d'Alene, ID
> "About thirty-five Obama supporters, former Clinton supporters, Republicans, and Independents gathered in Key West, the southernmost point in the United States. A number admitted that they have not been active in politics for forty years, and the two youngest got extremely choked up as they described friends in Iraq. People left with a commitment to register voters, hold future house parties, get out the vote, and do whatever they can to elect Democrats all the way down the ticket."
> -- Beverly in Key West, FL
> "I had over 50 show, with others wanting to come!! A wonderful gathering of friends, community members, neighbors (even my son's first grade teacher) and lots of new faces in my house, coming together to see how they could become part of the process of change they are feeling with Barack Obama. I am so grateful for the opportunity to show my two children, ages 5 and 7, that this is how America works. Thank you for the opportunity to help. I look forward to more in the future."
> -- Walker in Sherman Oaks, CA
> "We met neighbors that we had never met. We all shared one common goal -- black, white, old, young, all united for change. Wow! It was magical to see our young college students and graduates so involved and it was rewarding to see our seniors revitalized and charged with enthusiasm and hope. We can't wait until the next event on Independence Day."

What a speech.

If you missed President Obama's State of the Union address -- or even if you heard every word -- you should check out the White House's interactive version of the speech with facts, charts, graphics, and more:

http://my.barackobama.com/Watch-the-Interactive-Speech

As I watched the speech last night, I was incredibly proud of my president -- and not just because I ran his reelection campaign.

When he talked about health care reform, and making college more affordable, it meant more to me than just a list of accomplishments.

I thought of the people whose lives have changed because of those achievements -- friends of mine, supporters across the country I've had a chance to meet, and millions more Americans.

That's what motivates me to finish what we started and keep making progress on the issues we care about.

That's exactly what Organizing for Action will do.

Over the last six years, I have been on the receiving end of hundreds of White House farewell emails (none tops Alyssa's email with the video from Thelma and Louise going over the cliff). It always seems like an impossible task to say appropriate thank you's and farewells in this format. However, I will try.

Right before the election in 2008 Dan Balz told a couple of us that if we won, we would all be known as "Obama people" for the rest of our lives no matter what we did. (At the age of 32, that seemed a bit extreme.) So I leave the building today, but like so many of you on this email I will be always be an "Obama person." And I couldn't be prouder of that fact or more gratified by the people I have gotten to work with.

After today I can be reached at danpfeiffer2008@gmail.com , and if you need help with White House specific business, please contact Clay Dumas (Clay_A_Dumas@who.eop.gov).

John--

We need affordable health care for all Americans. I've been a leader in the fight for universal coverage for years. In Congress, I'll put my expertise and experience to work to make it happen for all of us.

My plan for health reform will guarantee:

Access for everyone to the full range of benefits provided to Members of Congress.
A choice of plans You can keep your existing plan or enroll in a new public or private plan.
Portable coverage even if you lose your job.
An end to discrimination based on age or pre-existing conditions.
Affordable premiums with subsidies for families who need assistance.

The status quo simply isn't good enough any longer. I'm ready to lead the way to a better health care system for all Americans but I can't make it happen without your help.

Last week my campaign manager asked you to help us raise $15,000 in the 15 days before our May 21st deadline. We've received a terrific response and we're now only $6,520 away from our goal!

We only have one week left before our May 21st deadline. Can you make a contribution today to help us reach our goal?

I am so grateful for your support. Together we can achieve quality, affordable health care for all Americans.

Des Moines Register: “Hillary Clinton: Looking back, and forward”

By Jason Noble

September 14, 2014, 8:51 a.m. CDT

When former Iowa Attorney General Bonnie Campbell's husband died in 2010, the first condolence phone call she received was from Bill Clinton. The second came from Hillary Clinton.

The Clintons checked in on Ed Campbell every few weeks as he battled a long illness, Bonnie Campbell recalled in an interview last week, serving if only over the phone as a shoulder to lean on.

"They have many more friends than just me, and closer friends," Campbell said of the former president and perhaps future president. "But when I hear people say Hillary seems cool and distant — that's just not right. She's one of the warmest, most genuine people I know."

When Hillary and Bill Clinton arrive in Indianola this afternoon for the 37th Harkin Steak Fry, they'll rekindle relationships in the nation's leadoff presidential voting state that go back three decades — and perhaps begin forming new ones as she deliberates another run at the presidency.

Campbell, a veteran of Bill Clinton's Department of Justice whom he later nominated (unsuccessfully) for a federal judgeship, is just one of many Iowans sharing a long history with the powerful couple.

A 2016 campaign in Iowa would almost certainly combine members of that trusted network with a new generation of campaign talent, many of whom came up over the past seven years in the Obama campaign machine, Iowa politicos said last week.

Beyond Campbell, the loyalists include Jerry Crawford, an Iowa fixer dating to Bill Clinton's presidency, and former Gov. Tom Vilsack and his wife, Christie. The new crew will skew younger, and comes with resumes mentioning President Barack Obama's victorious Iowa campaigns and Ready for Hillary, the independent pro-Clinton group active in the state.

Hillary Clinton is well-known for surrounding herself with a core of longtime, forever-loyal aides, said Jonathan Allen, a Bloomberg News reporter and co-author of "HRC: State Secrets and the Rebirth of Hillary Clinton."

"Hillary Clinton values loyalty, and she's a pretty insular person," Allen said. "She wants people around her she can trust."

But Allen said Clinton and her top aides are looking to expand the circle in 2016.

"There is a desire on the part of Hillary Clinton and some of the people closest to her to hire new people this time, to try to welcome folks who are better with modern technology, and who have a better feel for grass-roots campaigning in various states and particularly in Iowa," he said.

Nationally, speculation has been running high as to who might lead a new Clinton campaign. Politico reported early this month that John Podesta, a longtime Clinton associate who serves as counselor to Obama, was most likely to serve as chairman or in another top executive role.

Longtime advisers and aides Minyon Moore, Cheryl Mills, Huma Abedin, Jake Sullivan and Dan Schwerin are expected to have roles in the national campaign as well, Politico reported.

The old guard

A run for president in 2016 won't be Hillary Clinton's first statewide campaign in Iowa, of course, and she'll have plenty of pre-existing relationships to draw on as she looks to build support. Here are a few:

Jerry Crawford

Crawford, 64, might be thought of as the dean of Iowa Democratic political strategists. The Des Moines attorney's resume includes chairman or director roles on six presidential campaigns. His history with the Clintons runs deep. He was state director for Bill Clinton's presidential campaigns in 1992 and '96 and a Midwest regional co-chair of Hillary Clinton's '08 race. He's now advising the independent Ready for Hillary group ahead of a possible 2016 run.

Bonnie Campbell

Campbell, 66, a former Iowa attorney general and candidate for governor, traces her history with the Clintons to 1987, when she was chairwoman of the Iowa Democratic Party and Bill Clinton was exploring the possibility of a presidential run in '88. After her gubernatorial defeat in '94, she joined the Clinton Justice Department, working on violence-against-women issues that are dear to Hillary Clinton. In 2008, she was Hillary Clinton's Midwest co-chair alongside Crawford.

The Vilsacks

Tom and Christie Vilsack — Iowa's first couple from 1999 through 2007 — are longtime Clinton friends and backers of Hillary Clinton's presidential aspirations. One early connection comes through Christie Vilsack's brother, Tom Bell, who served with Clinton on the Watergate Committee in the 1970s. More recently, Tom Vilsack endorsed Clinton and served as a national co-chair for her 2008 campaign (after ending his own short run for president).

Andy McGuire

McGuire, 57, a doctor and health care executive, has a long history of activism and support for Democratic candidates in Iowa, not the least of whom is Hillary Clinton. McGuire was a co-chair of Clinton's 2008 campaign and made several appearances with the candidate and on her behalf throughout the caucus campaign. In one high-profile appearance, McGuire lunched at Palmer's Deli on Ingersoll Avenue in Des Moines with Hillary Clinton; her mother, Dorothy Rodham; and Hillary's daughter, Chelsea Clinton.

The new guard

Several prominent Iowa politicos who weren't part of Clinton's machine in 2008 are signaling allegiance — or at least hearing their names floated — for a second run in 2016.

Derek Eadon

Eadon, 30, has Iowa campaign experience dating to 2002, and was one of the first Iowa politicos to join then-U.S. Sen. Barack Obama's caucus campaign team in January 2007. He was state director for the '08 campaign's successor organization, Organizing for America, and worked for Obama's re-election through 2011 and 2012. For the past several months, he's been Midwest regional organizing director for Ready for Hillary, the independent group building grass-roots support for a Clinton candidacy in 2016.

Sarah Benzing

Benzing, 37, is running Bruce Braley's campaign for the U.S. Senate, previously managed his congressional campaign and was chief of his House staff. The Neola native and University of Northern Iowa grad also has extensive campaign experience across the country. She was campaign manager for Sens. Kirsten Gillibrand of New York in 2010, Sherrod Brown of Ohio in 2012 and Edward Markey of Massachusetts in a 2013 special election — all winners.

Tyler Olson

The four-term state representative was an early supporter of Obama in 2007, served briefly as state party chairman in 2013 and was a declared candidate for governor before withdrawing amid a divorce from his wife. Although he's not on the ballot this year and won't hold office in 2015, he's not quitting politics and has already signaled support for Clinton's candidacy. Olson, 38, was the emcee last January at a Ready for Hillary event in Des Moines.

Jackie Norris

Once a fixture of ObamaWorld, Norris sent signals this year that she's backing Clinton for president in 2016. The 44-year-old New York native has a long history in Iowa, serving as finance director for Tom Vilsack's successful 1998 run for governor and state director for Al Gore's 2000 presidential campaign. She was a senior Iowa adviser to Obama in 2007-08 and followed him to the White House to be first lady Michelle Obama's chief of staff. Like Olson, she has appeared publicly on behalf of Ready for Hillary.

WEATHER: It looks ideal, partly sunny, with temperatures in the high 60s. If there is rain, the steak fry will go on as scheduled, organizers said. The stage is covered, but the grass fields around it are not.

BRING A SEAT: Because it's an outdoor event with limited seating, attendees are encouraged to bring blankets or lawn chairs to sit on.

Associated Press: “Back To Iowa: Clintons To Campaign In Caucus State”

By Ken Thomas

September 14, 2014, 4:49 a.m. EDT

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — White House speculation in overdrive, Hillary Rodham Clinton returns to Iowa to pay tribute to the state's retiring Democratic senator as anticipation builds over the possibility of another presidential campaign.

Clinton and her husband, former President Bill Clinton, were to headline Sen. Tom Harkin's annual steak fry fundraiser in rural Indianola. Sunday's event is expected to draw more than 5,000 party activists who form the backbone of Iowa's presidential campaigns every four years.

Following a summertime book tour, Clinton was making her biggest campaign splash in 2014 so far, opening a fall of fundraising and campaigning for Democrats who are trying to maintain a Senate majority during President Barack Obama's final two years. The event was serving as a farewell for Harkin, a liberal stalwart and former presidential candidate who is retiring after four decades in Congress.

Obama defeated Clinton in the state's leadoff presidential caucuses in January 2008, and the former secretary of state has not returned since. Iowa Democrats said Clinton remained widely popular and predicted she would receive broad support if she chooses to run again.

"Barack Obama was a phenomenon. He just was. I'll give him credit, he worked hard in Iowa, but so did she," Harkin said, when asked if Clinton would do things differently in Iowa if she runs in 2016. "I don't think she ran a bad campaign at all. I just think Obama was on a roll."

The hotly-contested 2008 caucus created a record turnout of more than 239,000 Iowans, far above the 124,000 who participated in 2004.

The Clintons' arrival offered the possibility of a fresh start for the former New York senator and first lady, whose campaign stumbled in the months leading up to the caucuses.

Anti-war activists opposed her vote to authorize the Iraq war in 2002 and coalesced around Obama, who had opposed the war as an Illinois state senator. Clinton was often insulated by a large entourage in a state where face-to-face retail politics has long been a hallmark of campaigns.

Clinton, who has conferred with Iowa Democrats in recent days, would enter a presidential campaign with a large advantage over potential rivals. Early polls have shown her leading other Democrats by wide margins, including Vice President Joe Biden and Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley.

Biden is traveling to Des Moines next week and has not closed the possibility of another campaign while O'Malley has made several visits to the state and dispatched staffers to Iowa this fall.

Harkin's final steak fry was expected to be the largest since Hillary Clinton's last appearance in 2007, when she was joined by Obama, Biden and other Democrats running for president. Bill Clinton has appeared at the event three previous times.

It was also serving as a pep rally as Democrats try to hold onto Harkin's seat. Democratic Rep. Bruce Braley faces Republican state Sen. Joni Ernst in one of the nation's most competitive Senate campaigns. Clinton is also expected to make the case for Staci Appel, a Democrat running in an open congressional seat against Republican David Young. No woman has ever been elected to Congress or governor in Iowa.

Clinton has said she expects to decide on another campaign early next year.

The Clintons were attending a private reception for Harkin at Principal Park, the home of Des Moines' minor league baseball team, before traveling to the hot-air balloon field where the senator has held the fundraiser since the early 1990s.

The Clintons count Harkin and his wife, Ruth, as longtime friends. Harkin was a vocal supporter of Bill Clinton during the impeachment crisis and Hillary Clinton served alongside Harkin for nearly a decade. Bill Clinton faced Harkin in the 1992 presidential primaries but never competed in Iowa. The candidates bypassed the state because of the Iowa senator's role.

Ready for Hillary, a super PAC laying the groundwork for a Clinton campaign, plans to be visible at the steak fry, handing out T-shirts and signing up volunteers.

September 13, 2014

DES MOINES — Hillary Rodham Clinton will wade back into Iowa and the unique brand of retail politics that so confounded her during the 2008 campaign on Sunday, taking her first steps back toward the presidential stage in the state that did so much to doom her White House ambitions.

Mrs. Clinton's attendance at the 37th and likely final steak fry hosted each year by Senator Tom Harkin, a Democrat who is retiring, will bestow some much-needed heft on Democratic candidates in Iowa who are stuck in tight midterm races and who, unlike Republicans in the state, have not benefited from the support of many 2016 presidential hopefuls.

But the handshaking, speechmaking and beef eating will also allow Mrs. Clinton, alongside former President Bill Clinton, to take a measure of the pivotal early caucus state, which came to symbolize the dysfunction and disappointment of her last presidential campaign.

More than 5,000 people are expected to attend the steak fry, the most since Mrs. Clinton last went in 2007, along with then-Senator Barack Obama and other Democratic presidential hopefuls. Over 200 journalists have requested credentials.

Mrs. Clinton has not been in the state since January 2008, when she finished in third place in the caucuses and Mr. Obama was first propelled toward the nomination. For many Iowa Democrats counting on the Clintons to bolster their ticket this year, the once and perhaps future first couple's return cannot come soon enough.

"I'm anxious to see them Sunday and chat," said Mark Smith, the Democratic leader of the Iowa House. He said he would ask the Clintons, who have been in demand in tight 2014 races, "for help and to explain to them the value of investing in Iowa and a Democratic House here."

Iowa Democrats need to gain only four State House seats to win a majority, and particularly at the local level, party officials here rely on the fund-raising prowess of national figures.

The Clintons are expected to arrive with their personal staff on a private jet early Sunday and attend an expensive fund-raiser at a minor-league baseball stadium in Des Moines for Mr. Harkin's To Organize a Majority PAC before going to Indianola for the steak fry.

Excitement to see Mrs. Clinton will not necessarily translate to votes, as she learned in 2008, when she finished behind Mr. Obama and John Edwards.

Activists in Iowa, like those in New Hampshire, famously demand personal attention from White House prospects, a ritual that can grate on the candidates and their staffs. For all the talk about whether Mrs. Clinton's centrist tendencies match her party's liberal moment, winning in Iowa is often as much about paying respect to its one-vote-at-a-time tradition as it is about ideology.

After Mrs. Clinton's unexpected 2008 defeat, aides bruised Iowans' egos by playing down the state's influence in presidential elections. "The worst thing would be to overcount Iowa and its importance," Mark Penn, Mrs. Clinton's chief strategist in 2008, said after the votes were counted. "Iowa doesn't have a record of picking presidents." Another aide compared the Iowa caucus to "a mayor's race in a medium-sized city."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Organizationally, Mrs. Clinton's campaign struggled with the Iowa style of politics. For example, Jan Bauer — the Democratic chairwoman of Story County, north of Des Moines, who supported Mr. Obama — received three calls from him and only one from Mrs. Clinton, she said. And, unlike Mr. Obama, Mrs. Clinton did not ask for Ms. Bauer's vote when she did call. "If you're not willing to ask, you're not going to get a commitment," Ms. Bauer said.

Asked whether she would get behind Mrs. Clinton in 2016, Ms. Bauer said: "I haven't gotten to that point yet. I'm looking to see what kind of an organization they're going to put together."

Mrs. Clinton's supporters said she had learned her lesson. "The challenges she saw in 2008 would be fixed this time around," said Jennifer M. Granholm, a former governor of Michigan and an adviser to Ready for Hillary, an outside group that builds grass-roots support for Mrs. Clinton's candidacy.

Ready for Hillary has already signed up backers in all 99 Iowa counties and has 250 volunteers at 84 county conventions. It has run phone and email drives to promote the steak fry and rented a billboard near the Des Moines airport.

"One of the lessons from last time is that people have to feel very attended to at the most local level," said Jerry Crawford, a Des Moines lawyer and longtime Clinton supporter.

Mitch Stewart, director of Mr. Obama's field operations in Iowa in 2008, said it was important to remember how unusual that election was. "She got 70,000 people to caucus for her," he said of Mrs. Clinton. "By any other standard, it would have been a gigantic success."

Mr. Stewart, who now advises Ready for Hillary, said several early supporters of Mr. Obama had already signed up to support Mrs. Clinton in 2016, including State Representative Tyler Olson of Cedar Rapids and Jackie Norris, who was Mr. Obama's Iowa caucus director.

Mrs. Clinton is not expected to say anything explicit about the 2016 race on Sunday. Mr. Crawford said her team had been "very precise about what they want to do": honor Mr. Harkin's long career in public service and fire up Democrats for this November's elections, with a particular emphasis on the tight Senate race here, which could decide which party controls the chamber.

Mrs. Clinton's position as the presumptive Democratic front-runner has lessened the usual swarm of would-be candidates to Iowa. The only Democrat with serious presidential aspirations to engage extensively here so far is Gov. Martin O'Malley of Maryland, who has contributed over $30,000 to Iowa candidates and committees, raised more by hosting fund-raisers and held 12 events.

But Republicans have had the benefit of near-constant visits by 2016 hopefuls.

"It's been six years since Mrs. Clinton came to Iowa after her third-place finish, and definitely we are curious to hear what her explanation is," said Jeff Kaufmann, chairman of the Republican Party of Iowa.

He said he did not expect Mrs. Clinton to receive an improved reception, "unless there's been some kind of born-again experience in terms of how to interact with the common people."

At least one master of Iowa politics, Mr. Harkin — like others who want to ensure that Mrs. Clinton competes here — disagreed with that assessment. “There’s this myth that somehow she screwed up,” he said. “It’s just that Barack Obama was a phenomenon. He just outhustled everyone. She knows that. I think she knew it then.”

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Washington Post: “Tom Harkin, Bill Clinton and the changing Democratic Party”

By Dan Balz

September 13, 2014, 1:18 p.m. EDT

DES MOINES — Sen. Tom Harkin keeps two mementos on the wall of his office, reminders of where he came from. One is a picture of his mother’s birthplace in Slovenia, a house with a dirt floor, a house that her family shared with the animals. The other is the card his father received when he joined the Works Progress Administration during the New Deal.

His mother died when he was 10. His father never got beyond sixth grade and was in his 70s and suffering from black lung and other maladies by the time Harkin was in high school. He watched one of his brothers, who was deaf, struggle and eventually lose his job when the factory owners broke the union.

Harkin learned his politics from those experiences growing up in tiny Cumming, Iowa, whose 2010 population was 351. He saw what the New Deal and Social Security, and later Medicare, did for his father. Out of all that, he came to believe that “government could do good things for people. It could help lift people up and give people hope.”

He has been described in many ways over the years: brash, in your face, a no-excuses Democrat, a partisan and bare-knuckle orator with a zest for political combat. When he announced his candidacy for president in the fall of 1991, he said, “I’m here to tell you that George Herbert Walker Bush has feet of clay, and I intend to take a hammer to them.”

During times of changing political fashions, Harkin never wavered in his beliefs. As the country shifted to the right, as public dissatisfaction with big government rose, as organized labor went into retreat, Harkin continued on the same path. Today he is seen as one of a dying breed of Democrats. At a time when many in his party have run from the label and government’s effectiveness has been called into question by Republicans, he remains unabashedly an old-fashioned liberal.

Richard Bender, who worked for Harkin from 1977 to 2013, told my colleague Phil Rucker this weekend: “To staff, he is not Senator Harkin. He is Tom. There’s too much of a tendency for these guys to become something that’s super-special — the elevator’s always open, the senator sits where the senator wants to sit — and he’s still this little guy from Cumming.”

At the end of the year, Harkin will retire from elective office after five terms in the House and five in the Senate. Among his accomplishments is the one of which he is most proud: passage of the Americans With Disabilities Act. He is also proud of the fact that he has defeated more sitting members of Congress (five) in his elections than anyone else in history.

Steak fry politics

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

On Sunday, Harkin will convene his annual steak fry and political rally at a balloon field near Indianola. It will be the 37th and last steak fry. The featured speakers are former president Bill Clinton and former secretary of state Hillary Rodham Clinton. It will be her second appearance and his fourth.

With the 2016 presidential campaign looming, more attention Sunday will be on Hillary Clinton than her husband. But in many ways, the event will highlight a relationship between Harkin and the former president that offers a window into the ebbs and flows within the Democratic Party over the lifetime of their careers.

Harkin and Bill Clinton ran against each other for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1992 — the old-fashioned prairie liberal vs. the Southern New Democrat. Harkin was a throwback to the party's proudest days under Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Clinton was out to redefine the party after the Democrats had lost three consecutive presidential elections to Ronald Reagan and Bush.

The 1992 campaign began with Bush appearing almost unbeatable, with an approval rating touching 90 percent in the winter of 1991 after the Persian Gulf War. Democrats were terribly demoralized. Long before Clinton even announced his candidacy, it was Harkin who began to rouse his party back to life.

In that summer of 1991, Harkin traveled the country preaching his brand of the old-time religion. He offered hot rhetoric that brought audiences to their feet cheering. "It's time to get up off our knees and fight back," he would thunder at labor rallies and party dinners.

Clinton entered the race in the fall of 1991 and soon became the front-runner for the nomination, despite the scandals that hit his campaign. A frustrated Harkin lashed back at his rival during the heat of the primaries. He said Clinton had "bought into Reaganomics" and that his tax policies "did to Arkansas what Reagan did to this country."

Reminded of those lines on Friday, Harkin chuckled. "I wonder who wrote those lines for me," he said. But then he said this: "It became clear to me that Clinton was much better prepared to run for president than I was and really had it all put together. And watching him in the campaign, I became convinced that he really had the right stuff."

Shortly after dropping out of the race, Harkin endorsed Clinton. That fall, Clinton made his first appearance at the Harkin steak fry. He came back in 1996, when he was cruising to reelection but when Harkin was in one of the toughest reelection battles of his career. Harkin has never forgotten.

Clinton returned again on a rainy Saturday in 2003. The other speakers included the party's 2004 presidential candidates. Clinton overshadowed them all. No other speaker has appeared as often.

Yet, though they have become friends and allies, their politics remained at different ends of the Democratic Party spectrum. Even as his party under Clinton and later was moving to the center and becoming more business friendly, Harkin never shed or hid his liberal identity.

"I couldn't do that," he said. "So I had to win elections by being the liberal, the progressive that I am, the pro-labor candidate that I am."

Thoughts on Hillary Clinton

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

I asked Harkin on Friday where he thinks his party is today and where he fits into it. He paused a few seconds to think. “As a whole, I think the Democratic Party is much more progressive, liberal, now — oriented that way now — than it has been for a long time.”

He believes that it has moved back toward the left both because of the Republican Party moving to the right and because of President Obama. “Obama was pretty damn progressive … when he ran and the issues he ran on,” he said. “That was a very liberal person. Still is, I think.”

And where does he think Hillary Clinton fits along the spectrum? “Well, I think that’s probably yet to be determined,” he replied. “I think that from what I know of Hillary — I’m not terribly close, but we’ve known each other for a long time — she’s very smart, very intelligent and, I tell you, she is much more progressive in her thoughts and her inclination than most people may think.”

Harkin almost became an airline pilot. He took steps to become a life insurance salesman. He said he narrowly escaped becoming part of a small law firm whose principal later went to jail for embezzling his clients’ money. Now he is about to become an ex-senator. Where does he fit in? “I hope that I’ll continue to have an outlet for my progressive views,” he said. “I’m looking for different outlets for that. But I know one thing. Once you leave the Senate, you’re out. I got that.”

Politico blog: Politico Live: “Harkin: Progressives have questions for 2016ers, including Clinton”

By Katie Glueck

September 14, 2014, 12:07 p.m. EDT

Sen. Tom Harkin, who is hosting Hillary Clinton at his annual steak fry on Sunday, acknowledges questions remain for progressives about her positions--as they do for all potential presidential candidates.

In an interview that aired Sunday on ABC's "This Week," the retiring Iowa Democrat was asked about concerns progressives may harbor about Clinton--the favored Democratic 2016 nominee should she run, including whether she's too close to Wall Street or too hawkish on foreign policy.

"We're always nervous about people moving too far to the right," Harkin replied. "See we -- a lot of us believe the center ought to be moved back, that the that center has moved too far right."

Asked where Clinton "is", he noted that questions persist, but said they do so for everyone weighing a run.

"Well, I don't know," he said. "I mean I think this is something that will be developed and we'll find out when she -- if -- when and if she decides to run. You know, what's her vision for America?"

He noted that he thought President Barack Obama-- whose presidential candidacy took off in Iowa in 2008, though Clinton was initially considered the frontrunner--was "a great progressive and a great populist," but that he hasn't always been happy with the president's record, either.

Politico blog: Politico Now: “Sanders considering 2016 run as Democrat”

By Jennifer Shutt

September 14, 2014, 11:50 a.m. EDT

Sen. Bernie Sanders said on Sunday he’s considering running for president in 2016, but maybe not as an independent.

“The issue is setting up the infrastructure of running,” the independent senator from Veront said on NBC’s “Meet the Press.” “One of the reasons I’m going to Iowa is to get a sense of how people feel about it.”

Sanders said he believes more people are frustrated with their political parties and could align with an independent presidential candidate, but that setting up the infrastructure needed for a serious candidacy throughout the states could be difficult.

Whether he runs for president as a Democrat, he said, doesn’t have anything to do with whether former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton runs.

“The issue is not Hillary. I’ve known Hillary Clinton for many years. I have a lot of respect for Hillary Clinton," Sanders said. "The question is at a time when so many people have seen a decline in their standard of living, when the wealthiest people and the largest corporations are doing phenomenally well, the American people want change.”

Sanders said he would be a voice for working and middle class Americans, if he runs for president by addressing the growing influence of money in politics as well as defending Social Security, Medicare and Medicaid.

“I know that the middle class of this country is collapsing. I know the gap between the very, very rich and everybody else is growing wider. I know there is profound anger at the greed on Wall Street and corporate American, anger at the political establishment, anger at the media establishment,” Sanders said. “The American people want real change.”

Economist: “She's in harness now”

“WE WANT to alternate ‘Ready’ and ‘Thank You Tom!’ signs all the way down,” volunteers were told by a staffer for Ready For Hillary, the shadow presidential campaign machine being built by fans of Hillary Clinton, should she decide to seek the White House in 2016. The instruction was well-advised. The scene was a lovely, sun-dappled field outside Indianola, Iowa. The time was lunchtime on Saturday, September 13th, a day before the annual “Harkin Steak Fry”, a giant festival of steak grilling and political fundraising hosted by the Democratic senator for Iowa, Tom Harkin.

Senator Harkin, who is retiring this year, has gently lobbed a rock into the swirling waters of 2016-speculation by inviting Mrs Clinton and her husband to speak. For the former secretary of state, senator and First Lady, it marks her first visit to Iowa since her bruising third-place finish in the 2008 presidential caucus, behind Barack Obama and John Edwards.

Some 200 reporters are expected at Sunday’s steak fry. Almost all will be there to write stories about 2016, and whether Mrs Clinton’s return to Iowa is a sign that she is preparing for a fresh presidential run (yes, of course) or whether it signals that she has taken a firm decision to run (not yet, would be Lexington’s guess). Yet for Iowa Democrats, the 37th and final Harkin Steak Fry is also a grand farewell for their beloved senator.

That makes the day tricky for the Clintons: guest stars who must not upstage their host. The puzzle is doubly fiendish for the bosses of Ready for Hillary, who are essentially trying to lay the foundation for a presidential campaign without a candidate. As a Super PAC, or political action committee, it may raise political funds as long as it does not co-ordinate its work with Mrs Clinton. The ginger group has thus spent many months following her at a distance—signing-up grassroots supporters and donors, especially in early presidential primary states, building e-mail and address lists, holding house parties for fans, voter registration drives and generally trying to build excitement for their hoped-for contender.

The Ready for Hillary team have come close to their heroine before. Their campaign bus has parked outside bookshops during her book tour for her memoir of her time at State (a grim slog of a read, reviewed by Lexington here). Plenty of supporters have asked Mrs Clinton about her 2016 plans while sporting “Ready for Hillary” badges and shirts.

On Sunday at the steak fry, for the first time, Mrs Clinton will find herself speaking at an event decorated with Ready for Hillary signs and banners, next to her shadow campaign bus. Lexington, in a nerdy moment, found himself recalling the Ghostbusters film, and “Don’t cross the beams!” How close, he wondered, could a non-candidate come to her not-yet-a-campaign paraphernalia without tearing the fabric of the political universe?

But for Ready for Hillary the benefits outweigh the risks, as they seek to build a grassroots operation across Iowa, erasing memories of how that ornery farm state never quite warmed to Mrs Clinton or her Blackberry-toting city-slicker team in 2008. The group has rented half-a-dozen buses to bring students from eight Iowa colleges to the steak fry, in an effort to recruit an inner core of Iowa campus organisers. Still, they know they must not push aside Mr Harkin or the local Democratic machine. After all, the day is meant to raise money and drum up votes for Democratic candidates in Iowa in the mid-term congressional elections this November. Hence the careful instructions to alternate “Thank You Tom!” signs with those tastefully oblique “Ready” signs along the sidelines of the steak fry. The group also brought large signs thanking Ruth Harkin, the senator’s wife. The graphics are simple, the colours laden with meaning (blue lettering giving way to an exclamation mark in a grown-up shade of pink).

All in all, a delicate dance. Some 6,000 people are expected for the steak fry. It promises to be interesting. Your columnist was glad to have arrived a day early. It was an oddly moving scene. A perfect early autumn sun bathed the site, as seats, hay bales and a red antique tractor straight from a children’s book were arranged just so. Mr Harkin toured the field to thank long-time staff, followed by a young grandson.

Democrats are due to have a bruising 2014. As he retires from 40 years in elected politics, Mr Harkin admits to gloom about the role of big money in politics. But “people will still beat money,” he said, surveying the field sloping below him. “That’s what this is about, getting the vote out.” Asked why he had invited Mrs Clinton to his final steak fry, he said she was a friend, and he expressed hope that she was coming to “get the vote out for 2014”. Aides had signalled that they preferred questions about the mid-terms and Mr Harkin's own legacy, not 2016. But Mr Harkin is a politician, and he knows why 200 journalists are making their way to Indianola for some barbecue. Mrs Clinton had been out of active politics as secretary of state, he noted. Now he sounded glad to see her back in the Democratic fray, for whatever ultimate purpose. "She's in harness now," he volunteered. "And she's leading now." With that, he hopped in a golf cart and was gone.

MSNBC: "For Hillary Clinton in Iowa, 6 years makes a huge difference"

By Kasie Hunt

September 13, 2014, 4:49 p.m. EDT

DES MOINES, Iowa — Hillary Clinton left Iowa 2,444 days ago as a third-place loser, an experience she called "excruciating." This weekend, she returns to the first-in-the-nation presidential voting state with almost no one standing in her way.

Clinton is set to take the stage at the final Harkin Steak Fry, an event hosted by retiring Iowa Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin that will take place late Sunday afternoon in Indianola, Iowa. Officially, Clinton's Iowa visit serves as a "thank you" to Harkin for his decades of work and for his efforts as a Democratic fundraiser.

"She's very clear about her mission coming to Iowa: They are coming to thank Tom Harkin and [wife] Ruth Harkin for their service, and they are there to rally the troops from the Democratic ticket up and down the ticket," said Teresa Vilmain, a longtime Clinton confidante who ran her Iowa campaign in 2008.

Unofficially, the Steak Fry is the starting gun for the 2016 presidential race in Iowa. Five thousand people have bought tickets to the fundraiser, where Hillary and then Bill Clinton will close out a speaking program featuring Democratic candidates, including Senate hopeful Bruce Braley. More than two hundred reporters have RSVPed. The super PAC "Ready for Hillary" has posted a billboard with Hillary Clinton's picture just outside the airport in Des Moines, and the group is holding an all-day session to organize volunteers, as well as a dinner at the Marriott downtown. Democratic operatives with Iowa ties have also descended on the state, holding events to celebrate Harkin but wondering openly about how a future Hillary Clinton campaign will be structured.

All that already has Republicans attacking like it's 2016.

"The thing that Iowans are going to expect is a presidential candidate who can sit down in their living rooms, talk the talk," Iowa GOP chairman Jeff Kaufmann told reporters. "I don't think Mrs. Clinton fits the bill … unless there's been some kind of born again experience in her ability to interact with the common Iowan."

The farm fields of Iowa have been fraught — and sometimes foreign — territory for the Clintons. Bill Clinton didn't compete here in 1991 because Harkin, the state's favored son, was running; Harkin won Iowa with 77% of the vote.

In 2008, Hillary Clinton stumbled in her campaign when a leaked memo suggested she should simply skip Iowa and instead focus on "Super Tuesday" contests elsewhere. That was interpreted as a major slight in a place that holds deep pride in being the first to have a say in presidential politics.

In the end, Clinton competed aggressively here, though the process itself was a difficult one — Iowa voters and activists expect time consuming one-on-one interaction. She faced criticism for running a traditional, top-down campaign that prioritized winning endorsements from local political figures instead of reaching new voters. Her campaign focused primarily on trying to win over people who had come to lengthy, hours-long caucuses in previous years.

Barack Obama's 2008 campaign, meanwhile, reached out to Democrats and independents who had never caucused before. That was a new strategy.

"She ran a really aggressive campaign in 2008. She just sort of ran into a buzz saw with Obama, who ran a campaign like [one] never seen before in Iowa," said Jeff Link, a longtime Democratic strategist and Harkin adviser who was unaligned in 2008.

Operatives and activists widely say that the landscape in Iowa has changed for Clinton now, largely because there's no significant alternative candidate at this point in the emerging race. That's not to say other Democrats aren't trying. Later this week, Vice President Joe Biden will visit Iowa with Nuns on the Bus, Vermont Sen. Bernie Sanders is in the state this weekend, and former Sen. Jim Webb paid a visit recently. In addition, Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley is paying more than a half-dozen staffers who are working inside the Democratic Party and for Democratic campaigns.

Several Iowa activists privately suggested that there is an appetite for a Clinton alternative among core Democrats — Braley's Senate campaign is picking up that sentiment from focus groups asked about the former secretary of state.

However, Clinton's lock on Iowa at this stage is overwhelming. Link, the Harkin adviser, points out that even the longtime Iowa senator lost almost 25% of the vote in the state's 1992 caucuses. "There will be other candidates that get a share of the vote, even if she articulates a clear message," he said.

There are also some signs that many of the voters who backed Obama in 2008 are excited about the prospect of a Clinton candidacy in 2016.

"In 2008, that hope and change message really resonated, and we really believed that people could compromise," said Chris Diebel, a key Obama supporter in Iowa in 2008 who helped with outreach to young people and the LGBT community. "Then, eight years later, you get far more pragmatic. For me, at least, it's much less about hope and change and more about, 'who's going to get in there and fight the good fight?'"

The Hill blog: Ballot Box: "Bill Clinton: Dems have better-than-even shot at holding Senate"

By Alexandra Jaffe

September 13, 2014, 11:38 a.m. EDT

Former President Bill Clinton on Friday offered an optimistic appraisal of Democrats' midterm chances, saying he thought his party has a better-than-even shot at retaining control of the Senate.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Democrats, he said on PBS's "NewsHour," "will "do better than people think."

"I think we have a slightly better than 50% chance to hold the Congress. I still think we've got a chance win in Georgia and Kentucky. We're now competitive in Kansas. And we have to, I think, we've got a great chance to win in North Carolina," he said.

"I think we're now going to hold Michigan, and I believe we'll win in Iowa. And I think [Sens.] Mark [Pryor (D-Ark.)] and Mary Landrieu [D-La.] will win, so I'm not with the skeptics. I think we're going to do better than people think."

Most independent election forecasters have, over the past two weeks, found Republicans favored to pick up the six seats they need to regain control of the Senate.

Georgia and Kentucky are Democrats' main offensive opportunities — in the former, Sen. Saxby Chambliss' (R) retirement has opened up what Democrats believe is a competitive seat, especially with their candidate, Michelle Nunn, whom they see as a strong recruit against Republican David Perdue. Polling has indeed shown a tight race there, with two polls out Friday offering a conflicting outcome: One gave Perdue the edge, while one showed Nunn up, both with a margin under five points.

In Kentucky, Democrat Alison Lundergan Grimes is working to take down Sen. Mitch McConnell (R) in one of this year's fiercest and most expensive contests. Recent polling has, however, shown McConnell breaking open a slim but significant lead over the past month, though his margin still remains in single digits.

And Democrats found a new opportunity in Kansas, where Sen. Pat Roberts (R) has emerged as surprisingly vulnerable following a fierce primary fight. The most recent survey found independent Greg Orman leading the pack of four candidates, and Democrat Chad Taylor is attempting to remove himself from the ballot to give Orman — seen as the stronger candidate against Roberts — a better shot at taking him down.

Taylor's attempt was blocked by the Kansas secretary of State, a Republican, and heads to the state Supreme Court this week. But Roberts is taking no chances against Orman, revamping his campaign team and going on offense against Orman, painting him as a liberal Democrat in an independent's clothing.

Roberts's campaign manager, Corry Bliss, issued a statement Saturday suggesting Clinton labeling Kansas as one of Democrats' offensive opportunities is further proof Orman isn't who he says he is.

"So-called 'Independent' Greg Orman has run for office as a Democrat, donated money to Democrats, and now Bill Clinton is talking up Orman's candidacy as a way for Democrats to retain control of the Senate," Bliss said. "Greg Orman isn't being honest with voters and he will say and do anything to get elected, even if it means pretending he's not a Democrat."

Clinton's other predictions are still somewhat rosier than most independent prognosticators. Sen. Kay Hagan (D-N.C.) is seen as the strongest of the party's four red-state incumbents, and is currently favored to hold her seat, though she continues to face a tough race through the fall. And Rep. Gary Peters (D-Mich.) has held a solid lead over Republican Terri Lynn Land in the Michigan Senate race, and is also favored to hold that seat.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Democrats believe Rep. Bruce Braley (D-Iowa) will benefit from the blue lean of the state and from some of his opponent's more controversial remarks, once voters begin to tune into the race, but polling has so far shown that contest to be close.

And Arkansas and Louisiana are typically listed near the top of the list of Democratic-held seats most likely to flip. There, the red lean of the states coupled with strong GOP challengers have put Democrats in tough spots heading into November.

They all may, however, receive a boost from Clinton himself, and perhaps his wife. Bill Clinton has proven to be a prolific and effective surrogate for vulnerable Democrats this cycle, and Hillary Clinton is expected to hit the trail for the party's top candidates this fall as well. The Clintons will be in Iowa Sunday at the final steak fry hosted by retiring Sen. Tom Harkin (D-Iowa).

Washington Post: "O'Malley returning to South Carolina to campaign with gubernatorial candidate"

By John Wagner

September 14, 2014, 10:10 a.m. EDT

Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley plans to return to South Carolina next weekend to campaign for the state's Democratic gubernatorial nominee, party officials there confirmed Sunday.

The trip will provide the latest chance for O'Malley (D) to mingle with Democratic activists who could prove helpful if he moves forward with a White House bid. South Carolina is scheduled to hold an early primary in 2016.

On Saturday, O'Malley plans to join gubernatorial nominee Vincent Sheheen at a meet-and-greet event and at a fish fry, both in the Midlands of South Carolina, according to Kristin Sosanie, a party spokeswoman.

O'Malley has helped Sheheen out previously, hosting a fundraiser for his campaign in Charleston in early May.

O'Malley's latest South Carolina trip is part of a busy stretch of travel for the Maryland governor, who also plans to be in New Hampshire, the nation's first presidential nominating state, later this month.

O'Malley has said he is moving forward with preparations for a possible White House bid regardless of whether Hillary Rodham Clinton decides to run for the Democratic nomination. Clinton is in Iowa this weekend for the first time in six years.

In South Carolina, Sheheen, a state senator, faces incumbent Gov. Nikki Haley in November.

How Bernie Sanders' Campaign 'Disappointed And Offended' Nevada's Most Powerful Union

BY ALICE OLLSTEIN JAN 28, 2016 3:16 PM

Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., speaks during a town hall meeting at the Culinary Workers Union Tuesday, March 31, 2015, in Las Vegas.

Reports surfaced Thursday alleging that campaign employees of Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT) hadposed as hotel workers on the Las Vegas Strip in order to preach to members of the Culinary Union — one of the biggest and most politically influential unions in the key early caucus state.

The Culinary Union confirmed the reports, telling ThinkProgress in a statement that the campaign's actions left them "disappointed and offended."

"It's completely inappropriate for any campaign to attempt to mislead Culinary Union members, especially at their place of work," said the union's Secretary-Treasurer Geoconda Arguello-Kline. "We strongly condemn anyone falsifying their affiliation with the Culinary Union in order to gain access to properties and we will cooperate with casinos and hotels so that this matter is fully resolved."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Sanders campaign workers visited four unionized hotels, The Rio, Paris, The Mirage and Planet Hollywood, and by wearing the union's iconic yellow button, accessed employee dining rooms to speak with and give Sanders literature to workers.

The Sanders campaign did not respond to inquires from ThinkProgress about the incident.

In 2008, the Culinary Union endorsed Barack Obama over Hillary Clinton, though Clinton went on to win the popular vote in the state.

This year, the union says it will not make an endorsement in the primaries. Instead, they will focus on making sure as many of their 57,000 members as possible are registered to vote and trained the caucus process. Many members are naturalized U.S. citizens who will be voting for the first time this year.

In this election cycle, both Sanders and Clinton have sought endorsements from unions on the national and local level. Some, including National Nurses United , American Postal Workers Union, and Iowa's Steelworkers Union came out for Sanders, while the massive Service Employees International Union (SEIU) and American Federation of Teachers were among several endorsing Clinton so far.

Until now, Nevada's Culinary Union has maintained a good relationship with all three Democratic candidates, who have all traveled to the state to speak , and in some cases march, with hotel workers.

Instead of choosing and stumping for one candidate, the union says it is putting its energy into fighting organizing battles at several Vegas establishments, including at the hotel run by Republican frontrunner Donald Trump .

Questions raised on authorship of chemicals bill

By David McCumber
March 16, 2015

WASHINGTON — It's certainly well-known in Washington that when it comes to the making of the sausage, lobbyists frequently have their thumbs in the pork. But usually, they don't actually leave their electronic signatures on bills.

The elaborately titled Frank Lautenberg Chemical Safety for the 21st Century Act makes its debut at a Senate Environment and Public Works Committee hearing Wednesday. It's a high-stakes bill: If it becomes law, it would be the first update in 39 years of federal regulation of toxic substances like asbestos, formaldehyde and hundreds of other chemicals.

In recent days, a draft of the bill — considered the product of more than two years of negotiation and collaboration between Sen. David Vitter, R-La., Sen. Tom Udall, D-N.M., and both chemical industry and environmental groups — was circulated by Udall's office ahead of the hearing. The draft bill, obtained by Hearst Newspapers, is in the form of a Microsoft Word document. Rudimentary digital forensics — going to "advanced properties" in Word — shows the "company" of origin to be the American Chemistry Council.

The ACC, as the council is known, is the leading trade organization and lobbyist for the chemical industry. And opponents of the Vitter-Udall bill have pounced on the document's digital fingerprints to make the point that they believe the bill favors industry far too much.

"We're apparently at the point in the minds of some people in the Congress that laws intended to regulate polluters are now written by the polluters themselves," said Ken Cook, president of the Environmental Working Group, who will testify against the bill at Wednesday's hearing.

"Call me old-fashioned, but a bill to protect the public from harmful chemicals should not be written by chemical industry lobbyists. The voices of our families must not be drowned out by the very industry whose documented harmful impacts must be addressed, or the whole exercise is a sham," Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., said Monday.

Boxer, who chaired the committee when the Democrats held the majority, and Sen. Edward Markey, D-Mass., have introduced an alternative version of the bill with much more stringent regulatory provisions.

Udall's office was a little indignant and somewhat embarrassed Monday. "That document originated in our office," said Udall's communications director, Jennifer Talhelm. "It was shared with a number of stakeholders including at least one other senator's office. One of those stakeholders was the ACC.

"We believe that somebody at the ACC saved the document, and sent it back to us," Talhelm said, accounting for the digital trail. "Sen. Udall's office has been very, very engaged with bringing various stakeholders to the table as part of the process of writing the best possible bill," Talhelm added. "This is just one example."

Earlier this month, a New York Times story detailed Udall's alliance with the chemical industry on the bill. In that story, ACC President Cal Dooley, a former California Democratic congressman, said "the leadership (Udall) is providing is absolutely critical" to the industry.

On Monday, ACC spokeswoman and vice president Anne Kolter said, "It doesn't mean the original document was generated here. Anyone could have put that (digital signature) in there. You could change it."

Asked if that meant she was denying ACC wrote the document, she said, "I have no idea. ... There's no way for anyone to tell."

"You're not the first reporter to ask about this," she said. "We've been able to raise enough questions" that nobody else has written about it, she added.

Cook of the Environmental Working Group said the copy of the draft he received bore the same electronic signature, and a Boxer staffer on the committee confirmed that their copy did as well. A Senate IT staffer told Boxer's office, "We can confidently say that the document was created by a user with American Chemistry Council. Their name is specified as Author and their Organization is specified as American Chemistry Council."

The Vitter-Udall version of the bill is expected to gain enough bipartisan support to pass out of committee to the Senate floor.

The bill's fate from there is uncertain, and some of the Boxer-Markey provisions could possibly be included in the final bill.

In its current form, the bill is opposed by many environmental, health and labor organizations and several states, because it would gut state chemical regulations.

FYI, we lost Bill Ritter as a senior partner for our Energy, Climate, and Environment group. The folks at the Energy Foundation (where he serves as Vice Chair) were worried about the public affiliation. We will keep him engaged on the policy work, but in a less public role.

Granholm and Browner are still confirmed and excited about their roles.

Just wanted to give you the heads up.

Huma ,

Following up on our conversation , some observations and suggestions.

The observations are anecdotal , if you agree with them you can either accept them or data test them through research.

When President Clinton ran for office in 1992 an new generation of "bundlers" emerged. They had been just below the surface

Learning the business in the 1988 campaign(Terry McCauliffe and David Jones with Gephardt ;Peter knight , Ken Jarin ,Alan Kessler, Gordon Giffin ,Vance Opperman ,Elizabeth Bagley, Pam Eakes, yours truly and others with Gore, Michael Adler with Biden, Bob Farmer and Marvin Rosen with Dukakis,)and in 92 fully emerged to put a new generation of leadership into office. David Wilhelm , Rahm Emmanuel, George Stephanopoulos, Michael Whouley ., Paul Carey ,Regina Montoya , emerged in the 92 campaign along with a new infusion of time line younger fundraisers like Jorge Perez, Chris Korge, Paul Cejas Clay Constantine, Alan Solomont, Jack Rosen, Arthur Schechter…

There are others who came along Carol Penske., Beth Doesertz ,to name a few..

Kerry recruited a few new ones like Alex Heckler but essentially it was still the same group…Lew Solomon was always an outlier

This group and others took rotating leadership roles in various important campaigns until 2008 ..

Then a new group of bundlers emerged in their late 30's and early 40's people like Matthew Barzun, Frank Sanchez, Henry Munoz, Paula Boggs, Kurt Wagar, Suzie LeVine ,Andrew Weinstein along with them a new group of political talent emerged many of whom are currently employed by you. These types of individuals were not well represented on Thursday.

It seems to me that many more of your 100 plus bundlers must emerge from the 35 to 45 group. Ideally they should not be legacies but individuals who are making their way up the latter to leadership in their communities and wish to promote large amount of time and resources to this effort because they believe that the effort will insure a better future for their families, businesses , communities and country will be well served by their effort here. They also wish to network with like -minded entrepreneurial emerging professionals and business leaders. It is their networks, employees , business associates, that are the back bones of communities day in and day out. The 55 plus crowd has money yes, but the 35 plus crowd makes or breaks campaigns. They bring money , marbles and chalk…the whole package.

This group also needs to understand sending a group email is not the type of networking needed to bundle large sums of money , unless the rules of fundraising for bundlers have completely changed during the last decade.

These platitudes aside ,

And you may have already given some thought to this and if you have , please forgive the redundancy.

If my observations present a concern -what can be done to attract the 35 plus bundler to this campaign

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Some suggestions. Have your political staff who used to work for Obama identify the young Obama bundlers who did not perform or underperformed to date, set time aside from the candidate and campaign leadership to meet with them and talk to them separately. You might do a series of dinners with them in New Hampshire , Iowa, South Carolina, and Nevada in which they are invited to bring 10 k a piece. Theoretically , they would be asked to come to a primary /caucus state to engage taking less of the candidates time while giving them a unique experience to Meet the local staff on the ground and talk to HRC in a primary ,or caucus setting; this should be done by specific word of mouth invitation and emphasize it is for those who bundled large sums in the past but have not yet fully participated in the 2016 campaign .Preferably everyone in the room would be under 45 who has come to meet HRC and by coming they show they would like to be persuaded to be more engaged. By keeping the meetings word of mouth it will add to the exclusivity and importance of them.

Identify the new performers and promote them .Have your staff Identify the next generation of fundraisers those who have raised in the 27k range and are 35 to 45 years old .Have them mentored by your established fundraisers. Arrange small dinners for them with your established fundraisers so Ideas can be exchanged on how the established fundraisers can teach the 35 to 45 year olds to access their emerging networks.

Over the next three months try to set aside time for the underperforming Obama bundlers and the emerging 35 year olds (preferably non legacies) with HRC as she travels to their communities. Either around an event or separate OTR's .Make sure when this happens it is with this group exclusively.

Obviously the top line narrative of the campaign cannot be experience alone to attract this group. Since the beginning of time, This group has always been a disruptive group … It is my gut feeling that the uniqueness of the possibility of having first woman president resonates much more with the 55 plus set than the 35 plus set

And this group always thinks youth and enthusiasm is more valuable than age and experience. Clinton 92 ,Obama 08.Reagan,the exception as I understand it did attract a youthful group of financial backers(It's morning in America…),although I am not intimate with the particulars of the Reagan campaign having worked for Carter.

I end where I began, while not a precise statistical indicator, an anecdotal indicator to me in a Presidential campaign(Carter Staff 1975) is where the young entrepreneurial money is going. I believe there are ways to promote the campaign to be more accessible to this money which will have intangible political benefits.

For what it's worth…

Of course it goes without saying , but should still be said 47 million is a phenomenal start. Congratulations to all. These observations are made to be disregarded if considered as critical or unhelpful or to be accepted to the extent they are found to be helpful as part of a team effort.

Thank you all for your great effort on behalf of the country and my family and me.

Mitchell

Blumenthal Deposition Transcript Ready for Release

Jun 19, 2015
Press Release

Democrats Renew Call to #ReleasetheTranscript; Details Revealed About Republican Questioning

WASHINGTON— Today, Rep. Elijah E. Cummings, Ranking Member of the House Select Committee on Benghazi, issued the following statement after Sidney Blumenthal's attorneys completed their review of the transcript of his deposition, making technical corrections and taking other steps to prepare it for public release:

"Now that Mr. Blumenthal's attorneys have completed their review, the American people can read for themselves his responses to hundreds of questions Republicans posed during their day-long session. The transcript reveals exactly how Republicans are spending your taxpayer dollars—investigating Secretary Clinton and her personal relationships rather than the attacks in Benghazi. Over the past week, the Select Committee has become a sieve, with anonymous 'sources' repeatedly leaking selected excerpts of Mr. Blumenthal's emails out of context. It's time to end this circus. The Committee should immediately release all of Mr. Blumenthal's emails and his full deposition transcript together."

On Wednesday, Cummings and all Committee Democrats sent a letter calling on Gowdy to release Blumenthal's deposition transcript at the same time as his emails. Gowdy claimed had to be "convinced" about why he should treat Blumenthal differently since he has released no other interview transcripts to date.

Democrats responded that Gowdy is the one treating Blumenthal differently—by releasing emails only from him and no other witnesses, by forcing him to appear at a mandatory deposition unlike all other witnesses, and by sending armed Marshals to his home to serve a subpoena even though he was always willing to cooperate.

Republican Deposition Questions—By The Numbers

The transcript of Blumenthal's deposition includes hundreds of questions posed by Republicans during the day-long session, including the following:

- Blumenthal's relationship/communications with the Clintons—more than 160
- Benghazi attacks – less than 20

- The Clinton Foundation—more than 50
- Security in Benghazi—4

- Blumenthal's alleged business activities in Libya—more than 270
- The U.S. presence in Benghazi—0

- David Brock, Media Matters, and affiliated entities—more than 45
- Ambassador Stevens and other U.S. personnel in Benghazi—0

Updated: Mr. Blumenthal's counsel sent a letter to the Select Committee today urging Chairman Gowdy to release the deposition transcript immediately in light of the numerous and inaccurate leaks from the Committee that are "creating an incomplete and unfair narrative about the deposition, Mr. Blumenthal's knowledge about Libya, and the tragedy occurred in Benghazi."

Hey

Any word - based on your public liaison conversations - about protocol on public speaking (and media) requests?

Second, are you OK with Lisa being on the Friday call? It would be helpful vis a vis the tic toc discussion and Agency team management.

Finally, I know you're swamped with this stuff, so thanks for working through our agency teams. Being able to give folks some of the cleared names has been helpful - there's a lot of scratching at the door (they may hold Lisa's kid hostage next). Let us know if there's something we can do as you go through the balance of the teams.

Mel

POLICY:
Oil sands province considers carbon tax overhaul

Published: Monday, March 23, 2015
Lawmakers in Alberta are considering upgrading its current carbon tax policy to one that is broader in nature, a move that could improve the region's environmental credibility.
Last week, Municipal Affairs Minister Diana McQueen was appointed to lead the debate on revamping the policy. Since 2007, large emissions producers like oil sands and power producers are required to pay $15 per metric ton of carbon produced past their facility limit, purchase offsets or reduce their emissions. About $500 million has been collected from the tax so far and can be used toward emissions-reduction technologies.
Since emissions have continued to grow in Alberta, the province has not received a lot of credit for this policy on the international stage, according to Financial Post columnist Claudia Cattaneo.
"I think Alberta knows, and the government knows, that its current system is not a perfect system," said Chris Ragan, an associate professor of economics at McGill University in Montreal and head of Canada's Ecofiscal Commission. "There is a belief that Alberta can do better in terms of designing a system with better coverage ... that might improve its credibility. And that might feed positively on the market-access issue for getting Alberta's products to market."
The tax has not been overhauled in part because of the collapse of oil prices, but talks are currently underway with multiple stakeholder groups. A broader carbon tax, similar to that of British Columbia, would have support from both the oil community and environmental lobby, Cattaneo wrote.
If the policy was expanded to tax consumers, such as in the form of a gasoline tax, for example, experts said that would decrease pressure to increase taxes for large emitters.
"For good policy on carbon pricing, we need to look further west, at British Columbia," said Amin Asadollahi, program director at the environmental think tank Pembina Institute. "Their emissions have gone down, while their [gross domestic product] has grown, and what they did was economywide carbon pricing."
He said Alberta could start with a low carbon price and gradually increase it. The type of policy would encourage industry to innovate and make it more resilient, while also recycling money back into the local economy, Cattaneo wrote (Claudia Cattaneo, Financial Post , March 19). -- BP

Subject: Big Oil's Blank Check

LEAGUE OF CONSERVATION VOTERS

Dear John:

In January, Big Oil was handed a gift that will help them try to fill Congress with their cronies.

A disastrous Supreme Court ruling has removed any restrictions on how much money big corporations like ExxonMobil can spend to elect their friends and defeat our allies in Congress.

This means that profit-driven Big Polluters can now spend unlimited amounts on elections, drowning out the voices of the majority of Americans who support clean energy and a healthy environment.

Congress must rectify this issue right away. Will you contact your members of Congress to insist they pass legislation reinstating corporate spending limits on elections?

The Supreme Court has handed Big Oil a blank check to spend unlimited amounts on elections.

We must fight back.

Send an urgent message to your members of Congress today to demand action.

Click here to demand that Congress take swift action.

We know that Big Oil has deep pockets. Now, this ruling has allowed them to dig even deeper to influence elections, and destroy our clean energy future in the process.

Consider what kind of damage this ruling could cause: In the 2007-2008 election cycle, before this catastrophic Supreme Court ruling, ExxonMobil spent just $800,000 on election activities due to existing restrictions. With these limits no longer in place, Exxon's record-breaking profits could be tapped without restraint. If Exxon diverted just two percent of their $45 billion in 2008 profits to electoral activities, they could outspend the Obama and McCain campaigns combined.

We can't let this stand.

Send an urgent message to your members of Congress right away.

This Supreme Court decision is part of the disastrous legacy of one of Big Oil's best friends – George W. Bush. It was Chief Justice Roberts and Justice Alito, Bush-appointed justices, who were the key swing votes in this outrageous decision.

President Obama criticized this ruling in his State of the Union address, saying it would "open the floodgates for special interests" to spend without limits in our elections, and called on Congress to pass a bill that fixes this wrong-headed decision.

Please, take a minute to contact your members of Congress now.

After you take action, please spread the word. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Gene Karpinski
President

Guys ---

ODNI called. According to the ODNI representative, the President himself directed that zero staff attend the PBD with PE Obama. As official designees are named - NSA, CoS etc - they are welcome to be read into the brief.

They also added that PE Obama was welcome to discuss this issue + the contents of the PDB with he meets w/ POTUS.

I took the message on board and said I would consult w/ higher and be back in touch.

I supposed we have a few COAs:

--proceed w/ briefing

--pull down brief

--John call Josh Bolten and discuss

My sense is to go with #1 for now, but this is well beyond my area of expertise - if such a thing even exists in the firstplace.

Subject: [big campaign] Wonk Room: McCain would create biggest debt since WWII

New report from the Wonk Room. Great charts and the full analysis at the link.

-AJ

McCain's Budget Would Create Largest Deficit In 25 Years, Largest Debt Since WWII»

Sen. John McCain promises that, as president, he would "cut taxes and balance the budget." But his current economic plan would create deficits as deep as 5.7% of GDP by the end of a two term presidency — the highest federal budget deficit in 25 years — and would accumulate the biggest debt since the second World War, according to a new analysis by the Center for American Progress Action Fund. McCain's current fiscal plan would recklessly exacerbate the fiscal irresponsibility of the Bush Administration further by gutting revenues far below the average level of the past 25 years.

For the past 25 years, deficits have never been more severe than 5% of GDP, with surpluses as high as 2.4% of GDP in the year 2000. Under McCain, yearly deficits would increase sharply, beginning with $505 billion in FY2009 (3.4% of GDP) and skyrocket to $1.2 trillion (5.7% of GDP) by FY2017. In 2018 these deficits would reach 6% of GDP, tied with the largest deficits since WW2 in 1983. Current Bush policies would keep the deficit in 2017 to $660 billion (3.1% of GDP).

According to the study, McCain's economic plan, (which includes a corporate tax cut, a full repeal of the AMT, and an extension of the Bush tax cuts) would leave a debt of $12.7 trillion (the highest since 1951 when America was still holding debt from WW2) by the last budget of a two term presidency starting in 2009 (FY2017). This debt is $3.5 trillion more severe than the one resulting from an extension of current Bush policy, which would leave a debt of $9.2 trillion (43% of projected GDP).

McCain would slash government revenues, which have averaged 18.3% of GDP for the past 25 years, to their lowest levels since before 1962. Revenues would average only 16.3 percent of GDP for the duration of his two terms. Under current Bush policy, revenues would remain above 18 percent of GDP.

This analysis currently incorporates the most generous possible savings McCain has offered thus far: an $18 billion cut of wasteful earmarks and a $15 billion "freeze" in wasteful spending, with the savings grown at the rate of GDP growth over his presidency. These "savings," which come no where near paying for his reckless tax cuts, already include "heavy cuts in after-school programs, student aid, public broadcasting, and job training." To fill the gaping remaining hole, McCain supporters have suggested policies that would lead to "massive cuts " in Social Security.

Subject: stop Medicare cuts

sean patrick maloney
Democrat for Congress

John,

When I voted against Paul Ryan's disastrous budget, I knew the Tea Party would come after me. I just didn't realize it would happen this fast.

Already, right-wing Super PACs – backed by shady billionaires – have launched TV ads attacking me for taking a stand against the Ryan Budget.

The Ryan Budget is wrong, plain and simple, so I was proud to join Democrats and Republicans in opposing it. But GOP extremists are bent on seeing this budget passed and they'll stop at nothing. That's why I'm teaming up with the New York House delegation to stop Ryan and his allies from dismantling Medicare.

But we can't do it alone. If we're going to fight the Tea Party to protect Medicare, we need every single voice we can to show that public opinion is on our side. We need you. Today.

Click here to sign our petition in defense of Medicare and seniors – before the Ryan Budget goes any further.

These new attack ads are lambasting me for voting against a "balanced budget." But there's nothing balanced about the Ryan Budget, which gives tax breaks to the GOP donor base, all at the expense of seniors, women and middle-class families.

I voted "NO" on the Ryan Budget, and I'd do it all over again. But we can't let Paul Ryan and House Republicans get away with gutting Medicare for seniors. My colleagues and I are doing all we can to stop these cuts, but we can't fight this battle alone. We need you with us, right now.

Stand with us: help us stop Medicare cuts by adding your name to our petition here.

Thank you for keeping up the fight,

Sean

Dear Georgetown Family,

I promised myself that if I ever left this wondrous, beautiful place, my message to the entire school would be as brief and concise as possible. So here's a list of preemptive answers to questions that are most likely to be asked:

1. On January 4th I will have left Georgetown to become the Assistant Dean of Career Services at Howard University School of Law.
2. My last day at Georgetown is technically December 31st, but I will be physically on-campus until December 22nd.
3. I will be receiving High-Fives in lieu of a party.

You are all forever in my heart and I thank you for some of the greatest years of my life.

Happy Holidays and New Year,

Hi Matt, Julie Pace from the AP here. I'm writing a profile on John Podesta as he transitions out of the White House and into a possible role on an HRC campaign, if there ends up being a campaign. I was wondering if President Clinton might want to provide a statement on John given their long working relationship.

Happy to fill you in on more details about the story. It will likely run this weekend.

It was a republican led effort to use a wedge issue against him in the election. It passed both houses of Congress with overwhelming veto-proof majorities and when he signed it, I think it was because he felt he had no other options. Had he vetoed it, his veto would surely have been overridden and it would've become a central issue in the campaign. I know he wasn't happy about it. And he expressed that at the time. Today I'm proud of the fact that he asked the Supreme Court overturn legislation that he himself signed.

John --

I want you to be the first to know that we had our best quarter yet. Thanks to you, we raised close to $300,000 -- more than fifty percent over our last quarter.

Everyone on our campaign is extremely grateful for everything you're helping us achieve:

- 12 people in 11 offices, contacting tens of thousands of voters per month;
- More than 400 campaign stops throughout the district;
- Powerful ads that offer a choice between a leading patriot and a corporate congressman;
- More literature, signage and websites, including stoppingthehurt.com

This race is way more important than just another seat in Congress. President Obama and Governor Kaine need General Douglass in the Democratic majority. Holding back risks falling short -- will you go all in for the good of our country today?

Every contribution will help get us closer

On to Victory,

Gary

P.S. We have some real momentum heading into the final month of the election. But our opponent still has corporate cronies, like the Koch Brothers, who are bankrolling even more attacks on General Douglass's patriotism. Go all in with a contribution today.

Paid for by John Douglass for Congress

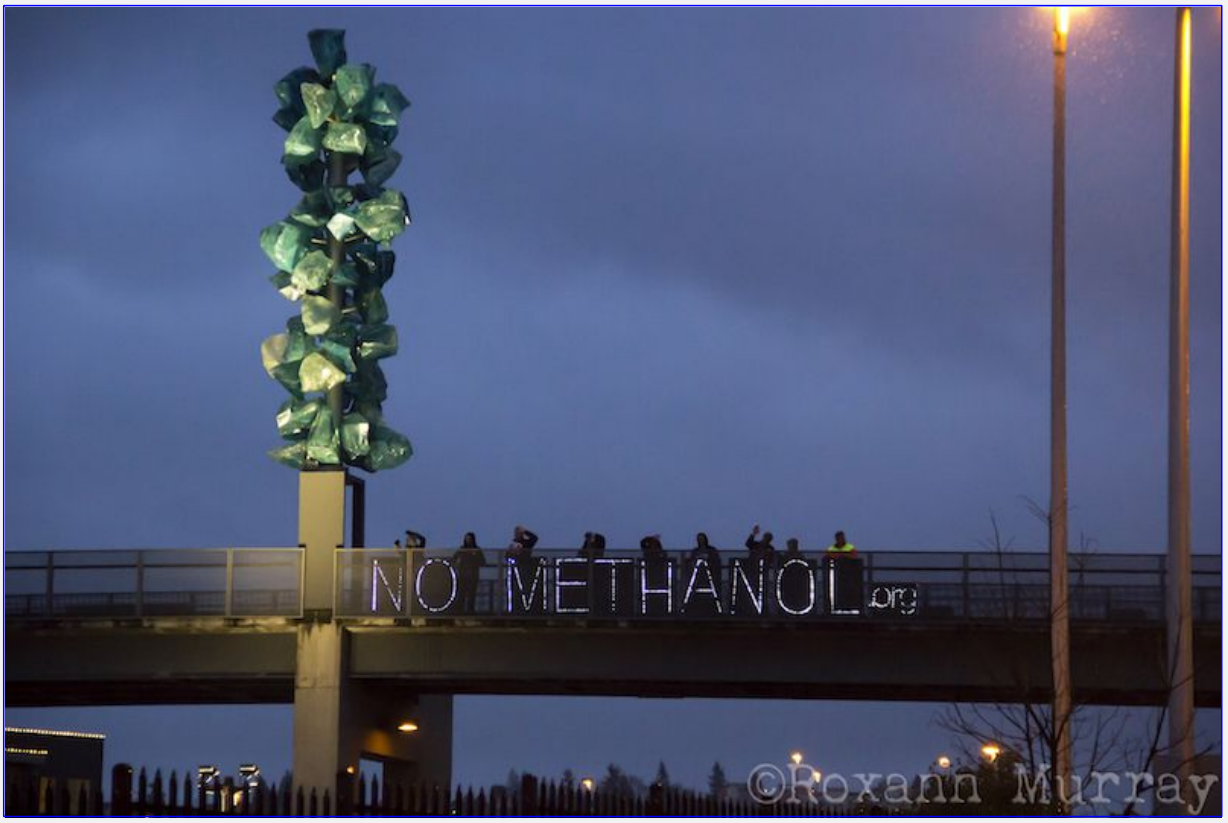
Backbone Campaign

Friend --



#Winning: NWIW, the company that was steamrolling a proposal for the world's largest Methanol Refinery through Tacoma, is now running scared by the mounting opposition to this ill-conceived petrochemical refinery and has issued a plea to pause the environmental review. Instead, we call on the city of Tacoma to fully cease the review and outright abandon the project!

This is a huge victory for "We The People!"

This announcement underscores the powerful potential of ordinary people taking action to protect what they love. We need not settle for false solutions to our climate or economic woes. The regulations engineered by corporate interests have never been sufficient to create the world we deserve. It takes ordinary people like yourselves taking action to revive our democracy back to life and deliver the brighter future we need.

We've shown this dangerous project isn't a done deal. Now, get active to ensure there's #No253Refinery and join the call for a safe and sustainable vision for our future that we can all be prooud of!!!

Backbone is proud and privileged to collaborate with dedicated concerned community members in Tacoma and beyond. RedlineTacoma.org has been leading this effort. From packing scoping hearings, overpass light brigades, to community art builds and more, it's exciting to witness new found friends invigorate and grow this community.

OBAMA BIDEN

John --

Republicans are taking the podium at their convention today, and millions of people will start paying attention to this race for the first time.

The message they'll hear will mirror the distortions Governor Romney has based his entire campaign on -- amplified 10,000 times.

They're going to talk about the economy, but they won't mention that their $5 trillion plan gives big tax breaks to people who don't need them. They won't mention their plan to turn Medicare into a voucher system that could cost seniors up to $6,400 more per year. They'll talk a lot about strengthening the middle class, when their plan is to do the opposite: repeal Obamacare, cut Pell Grant scholarships and Head Start funding, and raise taxes on the average family.

Donate $5 or more today and make sure we have the resources we need to fight back.

There are very real and important differences between Mitt Romney and Barack Obama, and we're going to keep pointing them out. But we've been outraised three months in a row, and now we're getting outspent on the air by as much as three to one in some battleground states.

The other side is banking on their TV ads to be louder than any organizer we've got on the phones and on folks' doorsteps.

That's what we're fighting this week.

We need to be ready. Make a donation of $5 or more today:

https://donate.barackobama.com/This-Week

This week is going to remind us all that we're on the team that fights for everyone, not just those at the top. We're the campaign that's having an honest debate about the issues that matter to American families.

Thanks.

Rarely have I seen one person make such a big difference in such a short space of time. Thank you for all that you did on climate, from China and India to the Clean Power Plan, and all that you did to teach the Prez to use his executive authority and his veto power, and to draw lines about what was and what was not negotiable. I don't think it was a coincidence that on your watch we saw him respond so differently to the 2014 election than he had to the 2010 election. Quite a contrast between the Budget Control Act negotiation and the Executive Actions and veto threats he issued in November of 2014!

What an amazing set of accomplishments you put in place during this tour of duty! I know too that there will be many more to come in the two years ahead because of what you did in the last year. Though overused by the younger generation, the word "awesome" is fully applicable to what you accomplished at the White House.

Warmly,

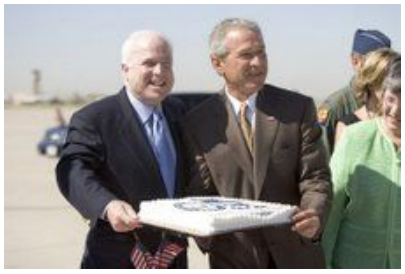
McCain: Not an Agent of Change, Not a Different Kind of Republican – Just Like Bush



Tonight, Senator McCain travels to Louisiana to give a major address where he will try to paint himself as an agent of change and "a different kind of Republican." But McCain is not "a different kind of Republican," – he is just like Bush.

Attached is a document on McCain offering a third term of Bush. We are in the process of putting up more Bush/McCain documents on a range of issues on McCainSource.com – check back soon for more info.

McCain is just like Bush – or worse – on the issues. McCain has supported Bush 100% of the time this year. According to Congressional Quarterly, McCain supported President Bush a majority of the time—supporting Bush as much as 100 percent in 2008 and 95 percent in 2007. [CQ Voting Studies, Accessed, 5/15/08]

- McCain is Bush's strongest supporter of the war in Iraq – and is even more hawkish.
- McCain will escalate Bush's failed economic plan – more tax cuts for big corporations and millionaires and little for the middle class.
- On issue after issue – Social Security, judges, trade, taxes – McCain offers more failed Bush policies.

Like Bush, McCain's campaign is run by lobbyists, for lobbyists. McCain has had 126 lobbyists running his campaign and raising money for him. McCain's lobbyists, including his campaign manager and top adviser, have made millions representing big oil, insurance companies and foreign dictators, instead of families.

Hours after Katrina had made landfall as a Category 4 hurricane, and after the levees had breached....John McCain and President Bush were enjoying birthday cake for McCain's 69th birthday.

Subject:	[big campaign] Making the Chamber foreign money story stick to Boehner

All,

We just sent out a release and a backgrounder to reporters in advance of Boehner's speech in Ohio today. Anything you all can do to amply this would be great.

Here are five questions for Boehner: http://campaignmoneywatch.com/medicenter/five-questions-for-boehner

Here is the release: http://campaignmoneywatch.com/mediacenter/boehner-chamber-advertising

DD

Five Questions for Mr. Boehner About Corporate and Foreign Money in Our Elections

To: Reporters
From: David Donnelly, Director, Campaign Money Watch
Date: October 8, 2010

Background

Rep. Boehner will speak today at a manufacturing plant in West Chester, OH that is owned by United Group Services. The owners of the plant are all long-time donors to Boehner and other Republicans. As Roll Call reported today <http://www.rollcall.com/news/50590-1.html> , "Mark Mosley, Daniel Freese and Kevin Sell, three top executives at the [United Groups Services], have contributed thousands to Boehner as well as other Republican candidates, according to Federal Election Commission records."

All week long, there have been questions raised about the U.S. Chamber of Commerce receiving foreign corporate dues and buying attacks ads against Democrats with funds that could include this money. When asked questions about the commingling of foreign and domestic dues, a Chamber spokeswoman said, "We don't feel obligated to answer that."

At least 22 Republican House candidates are benefiting from nearly $5 million in advertising this week from the Chamber.

Outside special interest groups are not required to disclose their donors because the DISCLOSE Act was opposed by Republicans in Congress. These groups are spending tens of millions of dollars, overwhelmingly largely for Republicans.

Questions

Rep. Boehner, as a leader of his party, ought to answer questions from the media regarding what he thinks of the outside money in general and the possibility that the Chamber is using foreign corporate dues to fund its multi-million dollar ad buys. Here are five questions:

1. Do you believe special interest groups – Democratic or Republican – should be able to spend unlimited sums in elections anonymously without accountability?
2. Do you believe the Chamber should provide evidence that the foreign money it raises isn't funding ads?
3. If the Republicans take the House, can you give us any major policy matter that you'd oppose the Chamber on, or are the Chamber and Republican leadership in lockstep together?
4. If you become speaker, what legislation will you advance to ensure elections are transparent?
5. Do you think it's right that an organization like the Chamber that supports outsourcing of jobs is also apparently outsourcing funding for its operation?

These questions, obviously, are not exhaustive. But we encourage members of the news media to find out what the man who wants to be Speaker thinks about the influence of corporate money in the 2010 elections.

money; sends letters to five Democratic House members

Washington, DC – Stepping up its pressure on candidates benefiting from controversial political spending by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the nonpartisan Campaign Money Watch called on Republican Minority Leader John Boehner and five congressional Democrats to speak out against the use of foreign corporate money in the elections.

The move came one day after the group sent letters to 31 separate federal candidates to urge them to tell the Chamber to pull advertising in their races because of the controversy surrounding the Chamber's acceptance of foreign corporate money into the same account from which it makes political advertising expenditures.

"John Boehner is auditioning to lead the People's House, but if he gets that job, it will be largely because these elections were bought with special interest money," said David Donnelly, Campaign Money Watch's Director. "If John Boehner wants to show he's a true leader, he will speak out today about the foreign corporate money raised by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce – an organization that is spending tens of millions to give him the gavel. To not do so can only be understood as acquiescing to the hijacking of our elections by corporate special interests, or the buying of his silence.

"Whether we are Democrats, Republicans, or independents, we can all agree that foreign corporate money has no role in our elections," continued Donnelly. "All candidates benefiting from the Chamber's spending – including the five Democrats for whom the Chamber began advertising yesterday – should speak out."

The U.S. Chamber reportedly began advertising yesterday to promote the candidacies of five Democrats: Reps. Frank Kratovil (MD-01), Bobby Bright (AL-02), Glenn Nye (VA-02), Dan Boren (OK-02), and John Barrows (GA-12).

"After spending $10.5 million earlier this week attacking Democrats, it will be interesting to note how much the Chamber is spending in these five districts praising them," Donnelly said.

Of the five, Rep. Kratovil is the only cosponsor of the Fair Elections Now Act (HR 6116), which would place elections into the hands of everyday voters. All five Democrats voted against the DISCLOSE Act, which would have required that the sources of the funding of the advertising now running in their districts was made publicly available.

HILLARY RODHAM CLINTON

STATEMENT ON HIV AND AIDS

Yesterday, at Nancy Reagan's funeral, I said something inaccurate when speaking about the Reagans' record on HIV and AIDS. Since then, I've heard from countless people who were devastated by the loss of friends and loved ones, and hurt and disappointed by what I said, and I understand why. I made a mistake, plain and simple.

I want to use this opportunity to talk not only about where we've come from but where we must go in the fight against HIV and AIDS.

To be clear, the Reagans did not start a national conversation about HIV and AIDS. Unfortunately, the opposite was true. That distinction belongs to generations of brave men and women who started not just a conversation but a movement that continues to this day.

The AIDS crisis in America began as a quiet, deadly epidemic. Because of discrimination and disregard, it remained that way for far too long. When many in positions of power turned a blind eye, it was groups like ACT UP, Gay Men's Health Crisis and others that came forward to shatter the silence. They organized and marched, held die-ins on the steps of city halls and vigils in the streets. They fought alongside a few courageous voices in Washington, like U.S. Representative Henry Waxman, who spoke out from the floor of Congress.

Then there were all the people whose names we don't often hear today – the unsung heroes who fought on the frontlines of the crisis, from hospital wards and bedsides, some with their last breath. Slowly, too slowly, ignorance was crowded out by information. People who had once closed their eyes opened their hearts.

If not for those advocates, activists and ordinary, heroic people, we would not be where we are in preventing and treating HIV and AIDS. Their courage – and their refusal to accept silence as the status quo – saved lives.

We've come a long way. But we still have work to do to eradicate this disease for good and to erase the stigma that is an echo of a shameful and painful period in our country's history.

This issue is important to me. At the 1992 Democratic National Convention, when my husband accepted the nomination for president, we marked a break with the past by having two HIV-positive speakers -- the first time that ever happened at a national convention. As First Lady, I brought together world leaders to strategize and coordinate efforts to take on HIV and AIDS around the world. In the Senate, I put forward legislation to expand global AIDS research and assistance and to increase prevention and education. And as Secretary of State, I launched a campaign to usher in an AIDS-free generation through prevention and treatment, targeting the populations at greatest risk of contracting HIV.

The AIDS crisis looks very different today. There are more options for treatment and prevention than ever before. More people with HIV are leading full and happy lives. But HIV and AIDS are still with us. They continue to disproportionately impact communities of color, transgender people, young people and gay and bisexual men. There are still 1.2 million people living with HIV in the United States today, with about 50,000 people newly diagnosed each year. In Sub-Saharan Africa, almost 60 percent of people with HIV are women and girls. Even though the tools exist to end this epidemic once and for all, there are still far too many people dying today. That is absolutely inexcusable.

I believe there's even more we can – and must – do together. For starters, let's continue to increase HIV and AIDS research and invest in the promising innovations that research is producing. Medications like PrEP are proving effective in preventing HIV infection; we should expand access to that drug for everyone, including at-risk populations. We should call on Republican governors to put people's health and well-being ahead of politics and extend Medicaid, which would provide healthcare to those with HIV and AIDS. We should call on states to reform outdated and stigmatizing HIV criminalization laws. We should increase funding for the President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief (PEPFAR). And we should cap out-of-pocket expenses and drug costs, and hold companies like Turing and Valeant accountable when they attempt to gouge patients by jacking up the price of lifesaving medications.

We're still surrounded by memories of loved ones lost and lives cut short. But we're also surrounded by survivors who are fighting harder than ever. We owe it to them and to future generations to continue that fight together. For the first time, an AIDS-free generation is in sight. As president, I promise you that I will not let up until we reach that goal. We will not leave anyone behind.

digital organizing perspective. There is an Out for Hillary group with 14k members that I think some kind of extended engagment over this would be helpful--an AMA with Dominic/ Robby/Dennis, a special Note (which is a long form format over Facebook), re-purposing the Medium piece there, etc would go a long way. Our other option is Reddit, which has an extremely vocal core of LGBT members, but I would prioritize this Facebook group, which is the largest LGBT community of Hillary's supporters I know. These are friendlies, they are already carrying water for us making sure the apology is out there, and they firmly sit in groups 1 and 2 that Dom identified.

Whatever we did to send our LGBT talking points to folks has really worked, they are popping up everywhere on the supporter Facebook groups.

absence of any explanatory information, they assume the worst -- like that this was some cynical political strategy of ours. (Which, I would note, makes no sense -- why would our strategy be to piss everyone off? -- but regardless.)

So I would vote to do a little something just to give people an understanding of how this happened, and then pivot to something else -- maybe that's celebrating the people who really did start a national conversation on AIDS, or something else.

Believe LP is working on a draft that could be a Facebook note or a Medium post, just to give something to react to.

First, as you can imagine, most people are expressing palpable anger and hurt over the comments. I won't belabor the point because I'm sure we all fielded calls, texts, tweets in the last 24 hours over this. But suffice to say, we aren't in a good place with the community right now.

If I had to break things down, I'd put people into three categories: 1) supporters who were horrified at the comment but accept the apology; 2) supporters who are angry and can only be mollified with a longer statement, tv appearance, roundtable, or something else big that shows she "gets it." They will continue to make hay in the meantime; and 3) Bernie folks who are happy to have a new line of attack.

What concerns me is that in that second group are a lot folks from Queer Nation, ACT UP, and other activists who are out, loud, and not afraid of direct action or aggressive confrontation. Given that, I'd love if we could build on yesterday's response -- and quickly. I don't want this to fester.

I assume we're prepping an answer for tomorrow's town hall, but has there been talk in the office of doing more today?

Looking ahead, is it possible to bump up an HIV / AIDS policy rollout? Is there any interest in putting a roundtable conversation or OTR together? (Robbie Kaplan has already volunteered GMHC.)

Would love to know where your heads are at and to be a part of the conversation today about next steps and moving forward.

Thanks,

D.

2012
BARACKOBAMA.COM

John --

This weekend, The New York Times Magazine ran a long analysis of the 2012 election headlined, "Is Obama toast?"

It uses a mathematical formula to conclude who will win this race.

In other words, it says neither you nor Barack Obama has a role to play in this election, because the outcome is essentially predetermined.

We disagree.

The outcome will depend on what we do every single day between now and November 6th, 2012. And I want to give you an idea of how we know that.

Our Republican opponents, from Mitt Romney and Herman Cain to Rick Perry and Michele Bachmann, have endorsed the same set of Tea Party policies that drive the Republicans in Washington: letting Wall Street write its own rules again and giving special treatment to millionaires and billionaires while asking seniors and middle-class families to pay for it.

All of them would return to the failed economic policies that led us into recession.

Yet the Times piece assigns each of them a score on an ideological scale, ignoring the obvious reality that there has been virtually no difference among the GOP candidates -- or between them and the Republican congressional leaders who refuse to do anything to restore economic security for the middle class.

Whoever wins the nomination will no doubt try to appear more "moderate" as they compete for undecided voters in the general election. But they have all made their positions clear. And we will hold them accountable for that.

The only true difference in this race is between their agenda and President Obama's. Facing historic challenges when he came into office, he has fought every day for a fairer economy where everybody who does their fair share gets a fair shake.

He's stood up to credit card companies to ensure they can't target consumers with hidden fees. He's stood up to insurance companies, who can no longer deny health care coverage on the basis of a pre-existing condition. He's stood up to Wall Street to end taxpayer bailouts and rein in the kind of risky financial behavior that nearly toppled our economy.

These dramatic differences between the Republican nominee and President Obama will be crystal clear to Americans as the 2012 election approaches, because our grassroots organization in all 50 states will be having conversations every single day with their friends, families, co-workers, and neighbors.

That grassroots organizational advantage is a critical factor in this election that the Times' "formula" doesn't consider at all.

More than 1 million people have already taken ownership of this campaign. Millions more are organizing their communities on behalf of the President, online and off. This weekend, we had our single biggest day of action of the campaign -- more than 2,000 volunteer events took place across the country, and more than 10,000 volunteers participated.

This work is already having an impact across the country.

We expanded the electoral map in the last election, fighting hard for -- and winning -- states like North Carolina, Colorado, and Virginia so that the entire election didn't hinge on the results in a single state, as it had in 2000 and 2004.

We have no intention of returning to the old electoral map. And the organizing you're doing means we won't have to. Today, we are showing signs of strength in states we didn't win even in the watershed election of 2008 -- states like Georgia and Arizona, where a recent poll had President Obama beating every potential Republican nominee.

The map isn't as friendly to our opponents, who won't be able to compete in traditionally Democratic states because their organization won't compare to ours. Whether you measure donors giving or doors knocked, there's grassroots enthusiasm for President Obama that the other side can't match -- but that the Times doesn't consider relevant.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

The truth is this isn't the first time you've been written out of the story by many in Washington and the media -- and it's not the first time they've been completely wrong about that.

In the 2007 and 2008 campaign, almost everyone in professional politics said it wasn't Barack Obama's "turn" to be president. But millions of people like you took responsibility for the campaign -- knocking on doors, making phone calls, and donating whenever you could.

You proved everyone wrong -- not just about who was going to win the election, but about the ability of everyday Americans to come together and change the course of history.

The entire premise of the Times article is that you won't -- and can't -- do it in 2012.

The election is now less than one year away. No one thinks it will be easy. But there can be no doubt its outcome depends on how hard you and I work over the next 364 days. Right now, we're opening field offices in key states, hiring organizers, recruiting volunteers, registering voters, and getting ready for what's going to be one hell of a fight.

So, is Obama toast? It's up to you.

Dear John,

It was great to meet you in Manchester at the YWCA event for Hillary Clinton. I will continue to serve here as a volunteer through election day on Tuesday. As we discussed, I am currently looking for work and have extensive campaign experience. In 2008, I served as Co-Chair for Hillary's campaign in Connecticut.

I'm a results-oriented leader with fifteen years of professional management experience, and a proven track record of accomplishment in development, communications and government relations. I'd love to bring my expertise and enthusiasm to your team at Hillary for America.

Let me draw your attention to three reasons why you might want to bring me on board.

One, I have a proven track record of running Connecticut's largest city for the past eight years. During this time, Bridgeport's city government focused on and achieved improving the city's bond rating and finances, major economic development projects, innovation and modernization, sustainability and improving communication and civic engagement.

Two, I have a successful track record of and passion for development and fundraising. One of my first development challenges came when I went to work with the Connecticut Democratic Party as Finance Director with then-Chairman, now Attorney General George Jepsen. The party was in the red financially. I put together a comprehensive fundraising plan including direct outreach from the Chairman, prospecting of new donors in the corporate community and private sector, events, direct mail and electronic communications. The plan produced the most successful fundraising events in the Democratic Party's history to date. Events included former President Clinton, Hillary Clinton and President Obama. The strengthened financial state of the party ultimately led to major Democratic gains at both the state and national level. Additionally, as a board member of LifeBridge Community Services in Bridgeport, I raise about $100,000 annually and in my current position, I have raised approximately $5 million dollars for causes including but not limited to Bridgeport's successful gun buy-back program which since 2012 has removed over 1200 guns from our streets and efforts to improve educational outcomes.

Three, I am a senior marketing and communications professional with more than 15 years of experience in the New York and Hartford media markets. I have placed principles in national publications and programs such as the New York Times, the Washington Post, NBC, CBS, ABC and Fox news. I have also been interviewed and quoted extensively as an on-the-record spokesperson for numerous campaigns and advocacy efforts in the Connecticut Post, the Hartford Courant, the New York Times, the Washington Post, Time Magazine and NBC,

ABC, CBS and Fox news affiliates.

The most recent marketing effort I oversaw for the City of Bridgeport was a million dollar campaign focused on attracting investment and economic development to the city and enhancing confidence in Bridgeport's direction by highlighting successful improvements and development currently underway. The campaign involved two advertising firms and utilized television, websites, social media and digital content. Following less than a year of paid media effort, several businesses moved to Bridgeport and confidence improved over 15% as measured by professional market research conducted by the Greater Bridgeport Business Council and Greenberg, Quinlan & Rosner.

Managing and acting as a senior adviser on two statewide campaigns and while working as Political Director at the State Democratic Party, I oversaw and directed a media budget of over $20 million spent on advocating the success or defeat of candidates through TV, digital, radio and direct mail advertisements. These impactful marketing efforts led to the successful election of numerous candidates for local and statewide office and congressional seats.

I look forward to the opportunity to work with Hillary for America to help elect a Hillary Clinton as our next President. I have been actively supporting and contributing to the Clinton's my entire life and it would be a dream come true to work in a professional capacity to help Hillary become President.

Sincerely,

Adam Wood

PS - I would greatly appreciate it if you could forward this to Huma as well. We also met on Friday and she was out of cards. She recommended that I forward this information to you and ask you to pass it along.

Hi Hannah,

Good to talk to you this morning and thanks for all you and your colleagues did for us at the golf tournament. We really enjoyed all of it and especially the chance to visit with him at the villa Friday evening. As I may have mentioned, Dan had not seen him since '92 in Concord.

Below is the radio interview request from Jack Heath who has the top rated morning radio talk show in NH. When the president was running and in office, Jack was the news director at WMUR-TV, our ABC affiliate. Jack interviewed him numerous times up here and at least once in the oval office. He was always respectful and very fair and I am pretty sure WJC will remember him. The Governor, Legislature and Secretary Gardner are making a big deal out of the 100th anniversary of our primary over the next year. A special Commission on which I serve was set up to oversee the commemorative events etc. In my opinion no one has done more to shine a light on the NH Primary and keep it first than WJC with his supportive comments nationally over the years so it is most fitting that he be interviewed about his campaign here and talk about what the NH Primary means for candidates, the races and selection of the ultimate nominees.

If you or anyone else has any questions, please do not hesitate to let me know. My cell is 603-496-9919; office number is below. As noted, Jack would like to do this before Feb. 9, but I am sure will do whatever he can to accommodate the president's schedule. Thanks for considering this.

Hi Terry,
I am interested in taping a 5-10 minute radio for my daily Morning NewsTalk Show "New Hampshire Today with Jack Heath" solely on the President's reflections and memories of his first NH Presidential Primary experience in which he was declared the Comeback Kid.
We are approaching the 1-year point to the 2016 First in the Nation Presidential Primary and I am planning special historic coverage next month. I am interviewing Bill Gardner, NH Secretary of State and one of his favorite reference points is when Bill Clinton finished 2nd in 1992 but essentially won.
As you know, I have interviewed President Clinton on several occasions, including in the Oval Office when I was News Director of WMUR TV. Mr. Clinton also invited me to interview him in White Plains NY when he was President.
My show airs daily on WGIR AM 610, 96.7FM in Portsmouth and on iHeartRadio live daily from 6 to 9am. I would request a pre tape call in interview with President Clinton some morning any day between next week and before February 9th.
The call in number is 6036416565.
Again, the sole topic is his reflection on the NH Primary, why it works and why it is special.

Thanks,
Jack Heath, 6037142607

Obama to vastly expand Pacific Ocean sanctuaries

Powered by LiveIntent

President Obama will announce his intent Tuesday to make a broad swath of the central Pacific Ocean off-limits to fishing, energy exploration and other activities, according to senior White House officials.

The proposal, slated to go into effect later this year after a comment period, could create the world's largest marine sanctuary and double the area of ocean globally that is fully protected.

I know you're swamped but thought this was worth passing along. Len Sistek (former Deputy Assistant Sec Def at the end of the Clinton Administration) who worked for Rep. Lane Evans on the Hill at the House VA Committee is currently running Congressional Affairs at the VA Department. He can be enormously helpful from the inside for whomever is handling the transition so I wanted to pass along.

My New Home

Reporters too often claim to be objective, but in fact none of us are. We are shaped and influenced by our upbringing, our race, gender, and religion or lack of one; our loved ones and friends; and the lives we have lived.

I had a successful, businessman father who, though he grew up in an orphanage and never finished high school, insisted I do well in whatever I did. I went to an Ivy League school, was drafted into the Army at the end of the Korean War, and trained as an interrogator in the Counterintelligence Corps.

I served here in Washington during the McCarthy period and have never forgotten that time. I twice took 18-month sabbaticals in the 1960s to run investigations for Sen. J.W. Fulbright (D-Ark.), then chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The second involved investigating elements of the Vietnam War. Fulbright was the first of several individuals who deeply influenced my thinking about foreign policy and national security... Read More >>

....from a Florida Republican and supporter of Hillary Clinton.

Problem with Hillary is that she is allowing herself to be dragged into the economy which is really not so much of an issue these days (Bernie Sanders is making it an issue), with low unemployment and positive economic stats, Florida and most of areas in country booming, her focus should be on her foreign policy experience, and being the most qualified candidate to deal with turmoil in world and keeping people safe. In contrast to the other candidates, Hillary already knows and has earned the respect of foreign heads of state, would be comfortable on day one in dealing with an international crisis, and her ads and communications to voters should reflect this.

Also, it is my opinion that in her debates, she should act more presidential and not adopt shouting tone of Bernie Sanders and other candidates.

Poll Confirms Massachusetts Election Was Not A Rejection Of Health Care Reform

Following the surprise victory of Sen.-elect Scott Brown (R-MA) in last week's special election, conservatives have attempted to paint the election as a rejection of healthcare reform and progressive policies more generally.

Appearing on ABC's This Week yesterday, Sen. Jim DeMint (R-SC) said, "what happened in Massachusetts" shows that "people are alarmed and angry about the spending, the debt, the government takeovers [including health care]." Conservative Washington Post columnist George Will said on This Week that Massachusetts "really was a health care election." "This was a referendum on a particular piece of legislation that is the signature legislation of the administration, and the people of Massachusetts and the country are hotly angered over its substance," Will said.

Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY), on Meet the Press yesterday, said, "the message in Massachusetts was absolutely clear. The exit polls that I looked at said 48 percent of the people in Massachusetts said they voted for the new senator over health care." McConnell added: "The people are telling us, 'Please don't pass this bill.'"

This "referendum" on health reform meme has become near-conventional wisom, with the media and even some Democrats echoing it. But a new Washington Post/Kaiser/Harvard poll undermines this assertion. The poll suggests that while the election was a "protest of the Washington process," it was not a rejection of progressive policy. Only 11 percent of voters, including 19 percent of Brown voters, want Brown to "stop the Democratic agenda:"

- 70 percent of voters think Brown should work with Democrats on health care reform, including 48 percent of Brown voters.

- 52 percent of voters were enthusiastic/satisfied with Obama administration policies.

- 44 percent of voters believe "the country as a whole" would be better off with health care reform, but 23 percent believe Massachusetts would be better off.

- 68 percent of voters, including 51 percent of Brown voters approve of Massachusetts' health care reform.

- 58 percent of all voters, including 37 percent of Brown voters, felt "dissatisfied/angry" with "the policies offered by the Republicans in Congress."

A different poll, from Rasmussen Reports, cast doubt on the notion that Brown voters were primarily motivated by opposition to health care reform. The poll found that 52 percent of Brown voters said health care was their top issue, while an even greater percentage of people who voted for state Attorney General Martha Coakley (D) — 63 percent — placed it first.

And as the Wonk Room's Igor Volsky noted, Brown "doesn't make a very convincing messenger for opposing the policy behind health reform," considering he voted for his state's health reform legislation in 2006. "He promised to be the 41st vote against reform because Massachusetts had already passed its own health reform bill, arguing that the state shouldn't pay

Brown's victory in Mass. senate race hardly a repudiation of health reform

By Alec MacGillis
Washington Post Staff Writer

Thursday, January 21, 2010; A11

While many are describing the election to fill the late Edward M. Kennedy 's Senate seat as a referendum on national health-care reform, the Republican candidate rode to victory on a message more nuanced than flat-out resistance to universal health coverage: Massachusetts residents, he said, already had insurance and should not have to pay for it elsewhere.

Scott Brown, the Republican state senator who won a stunning upset in Tuesday's election, voted for the state's health-care legislation, which was signed by then-Gov. Mitt Romney (R) and has covered all but 3 percent of Massachusetts residents. That legislation became the basic model for national health-care legislation. Brown has not disavowed his support for the state's law, which retains majority backing in Massachusetts.

Instead, he argued on the campaign trail that Massachusetts had taken care of its own uninsured, and it would not be in the state's interest to contribute to an effort to cover the uninsured nationwide.

"We have insurance here in Massachusetts," he said in a campaign debate. "I'm not going to be subsidizing for the next three, five years, pick a number, subsidizing what other states have failed to do."

In a news conference Wednesday, he said, "There are some very good things in the national plan that's being proposed, but if you look at -- and really almost in a parochial manner -- we need to look out for Massachusetts first. . . . The thing I'm hearing all throughout the state is, 'What about us?' "

Brown's message underscores a little-noticed political dynamic in a country where rates of the uninsured vary widely, from Massachusetts to Texas, where 25 percent are uninsured. Seeking national universal coverage means sending money from states that have tried hard to expand coverage, mostly in the Northeast and Midwest, to states that have not, mostly in the South and West.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Supporters of the national legislation say this transfer is an unfortunate but unavoidable aspect of expanding coverage. But, they argue, the nation is misinterpreting expressions of self-interest in Massachusetts as grand opposition to universal health insurance.

"Massachusetts's reforms continue to be popular in Massachusetts -- sufficiently popular that Brown did not repudiate them," said Paul Starr, a Princeton public affairs professor. "Here is a state that has enacted a similar reform and it is popular. That should encourage people that if it's done at the national level, that it would work as policy, and that it would be popular."

Conservative analysts disagree, saying the Massachusetts law has been less successful than advertised and that this helped motivate residents to cast a vote they knew would set back national reform. In a new report from the libertarian Cato Institute, Michael Cannon argues that the law has covered fewer people than state data suggest and that it has cost residents and businesses more than supporters say. "Things are not as hunky-dory as people have been saying," he said.

Divining voters' motivation is difficult. In a Boston Globe poll taken in October, 59 percent of state voters said they supported the state law, a drop of 10 percentage points from the prior year, and only 11 percent said they wanted the law repealed. There were no exit polls Tuesday to gauge voters' views on health-care reform.

Federal programs often divert money from richer states to poorer ones, but the regional dynamic is more stark in health-care reform. As it stands, the federal government shares the cost of Medicaid coverage based on states' income, ranging from a 50-50 split in the richest states to 80 percent in the poorest.

But under the legislation, that disparity could grow in a way that does not necessarily accord with state wealth. Many states, and not necessarily the poorest, set stringent terms for Medicaid eligibility, while others have eased entry. In Texas, parents qualify for Medicaid only if their family income is below $5,720, while in Virginia, the limit is $6,380. In Wisconsin, New Jersey, Maine, Minnesota, Illinois, Connecticut and the District of Columbia, the cutoff is $40,000 or higher. In Maryland, it is $25,500.

The legislation would set a single standard for Medicaid eligibility, about $28,000 or $33,000 for a family, and the federal government would pay almost the entire cost of newly eligible people. That means that states with looser standards would continue to pay as much as half the cost for a broad swath of people that in other states would be paid for almost entirely by the federal government. This disparity, which would largely benefit Republican-leaning states, would be exacerbated if Congress decided to extend to other states a deal that the Senate gave Nebraska to fund the entire cost of covering newly eligible people.

Both the House and Senate bills attempt to address this disparity: The Senate bill includes extra money for Massachusetts and Vermont; the House bill helps additional states, including New York. But John Holahan of the Urban Institute said Congress could have done more to even out the state-by-state impact.

"It's really striking," he said. "The real beneficiaries of this are the states in the South and the West who are opposing health-care reform."

Some health policy experts say that the legislation in Congress would help Massachusetts by starting to bring down health-care costs nationally and by supplementing the state's efforts with federal funding, which is less vulnerable during economic downturns than deficit-constrained state budgets.

"The notion that 'we have ours so we don't need the feds' is wrong because the long-term viability is at the federal level," said Jonathan Gruber, an MIT economist and paid consultant to the Obama administration.

But what voters heard instead, said Harvard health policy professor Robert Blendon, was Brown's message that the national bills would require Medicare cuts and taxes on some of their health insurance plans. The state reforms had been implemented during better economic times, without a dedicated tax increase and without involving Medicare.

Brown "was pounding away: Massachusetts took care of its own, why are you asking them to pay all these taxes in a bad economic time?" Blendon said.

Americans United for Change Statement on the Massachusetts Special Election

"A Referendum on Health Care Reform This Was Not"

Rasmussen Reports : "56% of Massachusetts voters named health care as the most important issue. That suggests it was a big issue, but Democrat Martha Coakley actually won among those voters by a 53% to 46% margin."

"Fifty-three percent (53%) approve of the way that Barack Obama has handled his job as President."

Washington D.C. – Tom McMahon, Acting Executive Director of Americans United for Change, released the following statement in response to the results of Tuesday's special election in Massachusetts:

"As much as Congressional Republicans wish it to be true, Scott Brown's electoral victory was not a referendum on President Obama or on health insurance reform. The reality they conveniently ignore is that the individual components of reform continue to receive substantial levels of public support – in Massachusetts and across the country – like putting an end to the insurance industry's unscrupulous practices of rescinding policies when people get sick or refusing coverage to those with pre-existing conditions. And that is why we have complete confidence Congress will move full speed ahead and deliver the President the strongest bill possible that holds the insurance industry accountable and guarantees the American people the quality, affordable health care they deserve.

"However, there's no ignoring the anxiety and frustration expressed by many in Massachusetts over an economy still struggling to regain footing since entering the worst recession in generations. While this administration's actions helped pull the economy back from the brink of a depression and the President's economic recovery package continues to create new jobs every day, progress can't come soon enough for so many hurting families.

"But if Congressional Republicans believe the American people's frustration can in any way be interpreted as nostalgia for the failed economic policies from the Bush era that got us into this mess – and if they think this electoral victory was a mandate to continue voting to protect the bottom line of the insurance industry, Wall Street, and energy companies – they would be sorely mistaken."

Subject: 4 GOP Senators voted against this:

Leahy for Vermont

John --

After Donald Trump's outrageous comments about prohibiting any Muslim from entering the United States, Congress needs to reaffirm at every opportunity the core value of religious freedom upon which our country was founded. So this morning, I offered in the Judiciary Committee an amendment to do just that. It was a very simple amendment:

"It is the sense of the Senate that the United States must not bar individuals from entering into the United States based on their religion, as such action would be contrary to the fundamental principles on which this Nation was founded."

This should have passed unanimously, but four Republican Senators voted against it.

The statements and policy proposals coming out of the Republican presidential primary have been alarming. I am glad that Democrats and Republicans have denounced the comments by Donald Trump on Muslims. But it is clear from the vote this morning and the support for Donald Trump in his primary race that we need to be louder than ever to push back on these reactionary statements about Muslims. They threaten to erode what has made our country great.

I am formally on the record against the dangerous notion of barring all Muslim immigrants from this country. Now is your chance to do the same: Add your name to my petition condemning Donald Trump's remarks right now.

Sincerely,

Patrick Leahy

Mr. Trump has said some shocking things throughout his presidential campaign, but this is really beyond the pale.

I condemn these words. I condemn Islamophobia. I condemn Donald Trump's hateful rhetoric. Enough.

Join me in condemning Donald Trump's call to ban all Muslim immigrants. Urge him to stop his divisive rhetoric: Add your name now to say ENOUGH.

For more than 235 years, we have upheld the freedom of religion as one of our country's core principles. It's one of the many things that makes America exceptional as a nation.

Anyone who doesn't understand that religious tolerance is the core of our freedoms is not qualified to be a candidate for president.

Thank you.

Other than one other thing, I like the rest of the edits. The one thing: I think when the legitimate problems underscoring the current law are deferred to end, the memo seems to flow less logically. Moreover, I would like to acknowledge the bad news up front so she isn't thinking we are burying the problems. Principals sometimes don't trust the messenger who appears to be pooh poohing the challenge. If ok with you guys, I would like to get that stuff out of the way and restore that ordering. As I reviewed memo, I found places to tighten and shorten. Again, I think it helps with the flow and the digesting of the info. Other than that, good to go. Thanks.

U.S. Rep. Sander Levin, Change America Now! Coalition, Struggling Out-of-Work Americans Urge Bush and His Republican Allies to Support Immediate Extension of Unemployment Benefits for Millions of Struggling Americans

On Heels of Historic and Stunning Jump in U.S. Jobless Rate, Will Bush's Allies in Congress Help Contribute to an Economic Turnaround -- or Will They Contribute Further to President's Failed Legacy on the Economy?

- Jobless Rate Jumped to 5.5 percent in May from 5 percent in April, the largest monthly increase since 1986
- 49,000 More U.S. Jobs Lost in May; Fifth Consecutive Month of Negative Job Growth, Totaling Nearly 325,000 jobs lost since the beginning of the year

Washington D.C. – In the face of the latest disappointing U.S. Labor Department jobs report finding 49,000 more U.S. jobs were lost in May - the fifth consecutive month of negative job growth totaling nearly 325,000 jobs lost since the beginning of the year, U.S. Rep. Sander Levin (MI-12) joined members of the Change America Now! coalition, advocates, and struggling out-of-work Americans today to urge President Bush and his Republican allies in Congress to support the immediate extension of unemployment benefits for millions of struggling Americans.

The Democratic-led U.S. House is expected to vote as early as Wednesday on stand alone legislation to provide up to 13 weeks of extended unemployment benefits in every state to workers exhausting the 26 weeks of regular unemployment benefits. In states with higher levels of unemployment, an additional 13 weeks would be available, for a total of 26 weeks of extended benefits. In advance of the vote, the CAN Coalition has launched a national grasstops effort urging Members to do right thing and support the extension, including a toll free number to coalition membership generating thousands of calls to Members' offices, direct lobbying, as well as an aggressive local earned media campaign.

U.S. Rep. Sander Levin pointed out to that in many ways labor market conditions are worse than they were in 2002, when President Bush signed an unemployment benefit extension. The Congressman read letters from three of his Michigan constituents who have exhausted their unemployment benefits and are struggling to stay afloat in the Bush economy. He said that unemployed workers today are often less visible, as they do not have to wait in line at unemployment offices to get their checks but rather receive them in the mail. Congressman Levin said that the plight of Americans that are out of work through no fault of their own must not remain invisible to the Congress and the White House.

Bill Samuel, Legislative Director of the AFL-CIO: "The percentage of unemployed workers who have been jobless more than six months is now over 18%. And it's no wonder: the economy has shed 324,000 jobs over the past five months, and there are more than two jobless workers searching for every available job. At about $290 a week, unemployment benefits are no bonanza; but they can be a lifeline to families who have no other source of income. While the Bush Administration and many in Congress are content to wait until things get even worse, the fact is, the number of workers who have been unemployed for more than six months is higher than the last two times Congress enacted a federal program of extended unemployment benefits. Congress has an opportunity to give immediate relief to over a million people who have been jobless for more than six months, and to 3.8 million workers over the life of the program. We cannot afford to wait."

Brad Woodhouse, President of Americans United for Change: "Voting to extend unemployment benefits to millions of out-of-work American families is the very least Bush's allies in Congress can do after voting time and again to enable this President failed policies that have contributed to and even exasperated the economic downturn. We understand many of them believe that more Bush tax cuts for millionaires are the only prescription for the ailing economy – tax cuts that never manage to 'trickle-down' to the people who really need it. But, we hope they can make an exception this time and vote to extend a helping hand to the Americans hit hardest by the Bush economy."

Andrew Stettner, Deputy Director of the National Employment Law Project: "With data confirming the realities faced by workers across the nation, it would show a new level of callousness by Congress and the President to not find a way to immediately enact an extension of jobless benefits."

Jared Bernstein, Economic Policy Institute: "There is simply no good rationale for denying jobless workers an extension to their UI benefits. Any arguments against it-the labor market's still strong, it creates the wrong incentives for job seekers-have been swept from the table by the deepening downturn in the job market."

Dean Ambrosini, 44, of San Diego, CA was laid off last July from BSM Financial LP, a mortgage-banking company in Allen, Texas, where he helped sell housing loans to investors. His unemployment-insurance benefits ran out in February. "I have a resume full of worthless skills and 10 years of experience basically down the drain. I've applied for more than 50 jobs with no luck, including at retailers like Home Depot and Lowe's, even a Burger King near my home. But even that has a 'No Hiring' sign."

Subject: Faculty Handbook Changes

At its January 20th meeting, the Faculty Senate approved a set of changes to the Faculty Handbook, which were either non-substantive or required by law.

1. The FMLA Leave Policy needs to be revised to bring it into compliance with new Federal and DC legal requirements concerning military families. In addition, the separate statements currently in Section V "Benefits" of the Faculty Handbook and in the Human Resources Policy Manual will be replaced by a single document that will appear in Faculty Handbook section IV "Other Policies Governing Employment at Georgetown University." The revised policy can be viewed on the Senate website:

http://facultysenate.georgetown.edu/pending-business

2. In addition to the FMLA Leave Policy, which applies to staff as well as faculty, Section V of the Faculty Handbook contains the Family Care Leave Policy, which applies to all faculty but not staff. This will be moved to Faculty Handbook section III.C.10 "Absence and Leave." No substantive change will be made to this policy. The rest of Section V of the Faculty Handbook will be replaced by a link to the Office of Faculty and Staff Benefits website, which is the current and authoritative source of information about health care, tuition, retirement and other benefits available to faculty and staff. For more information about this reorganization, see "Overview of Proposed Changes to the Faculty Handbook Benefits and Leave Sections" at the Senate website above

The "New Parent Leave Option for Tenure-Line Faculty," which applies to Main Campus faculty only, is not affected by these changes. It can be found on the Provost's website: https://georgetown.app.box.com/s/6qbejgwsnmrqtdlpusmy .

Finally, at its November 13, 2014 meeting, the Senate approved the proposed policy on the confidentiality and transparency of the rank and tenure process, which can be found at the Senate website above. All three of these revisions will go to the Board of Directors for final approval in February.

Subject:	Bill Cahir Memorial Fund

Dear John,

In years past, during the holidays, we've been able to raise tens of thousands of dollars for charities that help our troops and veterans, and I can tell you that they're all so grateful for your support. This year, we want to raise even more for the Bill Cahir Memorial Fund, and hope you can donate whatever you can afford.

To remind you, Bill Cahir was a Marine, veteran, and one of our endorsed candidates for Congress. In the spring of 2009, he was deployed to Afghanistan, where he made the ultimate sacrifice. Bill left behind a wife and unborn twin daughters. Those girls never will get to meet their father. But, the Cahir Memorial Fund was established to help his wife provide for their little girls.

CLICK HERE TO DONATE TO THE CAHIR MEMORIAL FUND.

Bill didn't have to serve this nation in uniform. In fact, he wouldn't have even been recruited to do so. See, Bill was a journalist on September 11, 2001, but felt the call of duty so strongly that he applied for an age waiver to join the Marines and go to war. Bill was 34 then. He went back to war again, and again, when called. It was on his third tour that he died in Afghanistan's Helmand Province.

Donating to the Bill Cahir Memorial Fund will make sure that his daughters receive as good a quality of life as they can without their father there. It will help with everything from basic needs to college.

Ultimately, those girls will carry on the ideals that Bill stood for and that his widow, Rene, will instill in them. So your help will go to a very worthy cause.

On behalf of everyone here at VoteVets.org, I want to thank you in advance. We wish you and yours a very healthy, happy, and safe holiday season, and all the best in 2010.

Sincerely,

Team -

Lippert and I want to be sure we're on the same page in re: staff mtgs and visiting foreign dignitaries around the G-20.

I noticed in an email that Anita sent earlier that Dan T is in charge of arranging staff mtgs around the G-20. If that is the case, we want to be sure we are not off the reservation.

In his protocol calls the last several days, the President-elect has demurred on mtg with visiting leaders (each has requested a meeting) and been equally non committal on meetings with staff.

We had been thinking we would propose that a team of senior, recognizable Democrats (led the Sec. Albright, but also including a finance/econ expert) would take meetings with visiting delegations. Such a posture with get us the benefit of the input from the visiting delegations (as Albright et al would debrief staff or even the President-elect on their meetings) but give us enough distance (since none of these folks like Albright would eventually be serving in an Obama Admin) that we would not own what they say.

Anita and Dan Tarullo, is this different from what you all are thinking/planning? If so, let's synchronize our watches before we get too far down the road.

Thx,
DM

Subject: 13 Days!

Dear John,

There are 13 days left until the primary. Let's work together to make sure everyone knows that Henry is the only candidate with the experience and the vision to lead New Haven towards a brighter future.

Tomorrow is the first televised debate! It takes place at Long Wharf Theater, 222 Sargent Drive. Doors open at 6pm. You can call the box office at 203-787-4282 to reserve tickets. If they are sold out, give our campaign headquarters a call at 203-887-7507. If you can't make it to the debate, please be sure to tune in to channel 30 at 7pm tonight!

The next few days are jam-packed with visits to senior homes, canvasses, barbeques, coffees, and block parties! Let us know if you are interested in attending any of these events. We would love to see each and every one of you these last remaining weeks! Email us for more details so you can mark your calendards and join in on the excitement.

If you would like to see what we've been up to the past few days, check out this article in the New Haven Independent on Henry's Senior Citizen Policy and visit to a Fair Haven Elderly Complex . Henry has also released his solution for the city's pension crisis. Check out the stories in the New Haven Register and the New Haven Independent

We are happy to announce that we received hundreds more lawn signs this morning! The demand is high so email Sam@fernandezformayor.com to get on the list. Indicate the number of lawn signs you would like and your home address - someone from our team will be happy to drop them off.

Remember to email us if you are interested in volunteering. You can also show your support by making an online donation. Shoot us an email or give our campaign headquarters a call at 203-887-7507 any day, any time - we're always there.

13 days until One City!

On Saturday afternoon they have a request in for YOU to do a clean energy event in Reno with Reno City Councilman David Bobzien, one of the leading conservationists/energy advocates in the state. Full details on that event below from Michelle White.

I did not want to confirm the Bobzien clean energy event without your approval because I know you are trying to get to Truckee at a reasonable hour.

Briefings-- They are not yet finished but Michelle is going to power through them tonight. Since you don't have to leave until later tomorrow morning (flight departing HPN at 12:00 pm) do you think that I could bring you the binder in the early AM? I'm worried that it won't be finished until after you're asleep tonight.

BACKGROUND ON BOBZIEN EVENT:

Reno City Councilman David Bobzien is available to do an event with JP after 12p on Saturday. He is a HUGEEEE JP fan and one of the leading conservationists/energy advocates in the state.

We got word that Bernie will be in Reno on Saturday as well and he plans on sitting down with solar workers who lost their jobs due to the net-metering decision in NV (it's really, really wonky). Bernie's event is not yet public, and I think we have a chance to get ahead of him on this, without diving too deep into a very wonky, complicated state issue.

Bobzien suggested that since our campaign probably doesn't want to get too in the weeds of this very specific state issue anyways, we could make it a meeting about energy and conservation in general, and focus on things like the recent SCOTUS decision to temporarily block Obama's effort to combat climate change by regulating emissions from coal-fired power plants. Other topics will include how to create a grid for the 21st century. He is also willing to discuss public land conservation if we want to.

He said even if we make it a more of a general meeting about energy, we all know that the net-metering issue will come up and can all be prepared and probably still get some attention for it.

I think this is a great opportunity to sway some people in the north to Hillary, get some positive coverage, and get ahead of the solar/clean energy issue before Bernie.

For background: Bobzien has not been too out front on the net-metering issue in NV. He thinks what NV Energy and the PUC is doing is wrong, but needs to be cautious in how he approaches it. He said he is very capable of navigating the issue if it comes up and typically sticks to the talking points that we need to do what we can as a state to move towards a clean energy 21st century. He is incredible on these issues and we don't feel any hesitation.

I'm not sure if you were looking for a response, but fwiw, here's my response. Feel free to ignore this email if you were just passing on.

I agree with a couple of the through-lines embedded in this feedback, specifically:

- In general, our stuff looks very polished, which is better than sloppy (!) but not altogether ideal in an election where voters manifestly want what they think is the genuine, unpolished article. We are working on a variety of approaches to feel more grassroots-y and less corporate that I am happy to walk anyone through.
- Our font. It's fat and blocky and sometimes tough to read, and it generally rubs people the wrong way. You may recall that we all disliked it during the branding process, and somehow managed to get rolled by Michael Beirut. We are finally going to make a change here.

Otherwise, though, I find this feedback a little strange. A lot of the notes on the graphic are matters of personal preference masquerading as incontestable fact (and the son's suggested redesign is obviously lousy). Indeed, the only reason these kids even saw this graphic is that it won a multivariate email test -- and actually did very well, raising $85,000. And we routinely get excellent feedback on our work from the graphic design world -- there are dozens of articles from design blogs and publications about how our stuff is the best in the presidential field that I am happy to share!

In any event, keep the feedback coming; we read and take seriously every single piece. Just wanted to defend my team a little bit....

When you have a chance, can you please pass me $20/person if you did indeed partake in the spread? Thank you!

Sounds like we'll do an assessment in the AM and figure out when to re-gather. Will send update in the morning.

We are at 2385 S. Clayton Street, Denver. It’s near the University of Denver.

And if you want, we can go for a quick run in the morning too…up to you.

What time roughly, do you think you will get there? (I have a dinner to go to tonight, ironically with Tom Vilsack, but should be home by 8:45).

SUMMARY

For decades, the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) has been at the forefront in developing standards and building consensus for information security and privacy covering an expansive range of topics from defining security and privacy controls to establishing encryption protocols to preparing guidelines for confidentiality of personally identifiable information (PII).

In recent years, NIST's initiatives have transformed security and privacy standards in both the public and private sectors by harmonizing security and privacy controls for federal agencies and contractors (e.g., NIST Special Publication 800-53 Rev. 4), developing the Cybersecurity Framework for use in the private sector, and integrating privacy controls into the security standards.

This panel of NIST experts will address the latest developments in NIST security and privacy standards and discuss what's ahead in emerging security and privacy issues.

Subject: Just Seven Weeks Left

Joe Sestak for Senate

Dear John,

Now that Labor Day is behind us, we are nearing the November election with less than two months left. We must double our efforts to make sure that our grassroots campaign defeats the Wall Street-backed corporate interests behind Congressman Toomey. With your help we will win in November! Please visit GoJoe today and learn how to get involved with phone-banking, canvassing and spreading our message to Pennsylvania voters.

Creating Jobs for Pennsylvania

There is so much at stake in this U.S. Senate race. Speaking at Carnegie Mellon University, I laid out my plan to lift Pennsylvania out of this recession - creating jobs through benefits to the small businesses that create 80 percent of our new workforce. My proposal for a 15 percent tax credit to small businesses for new hires is one example of my commitment to these engines of our economy. For the full text of my speech, please click here .

Making stops in the Philadelphia area on my Jobs and Opportunity Tour, I spoke about the ways I intend to encourage job growth, reduce crime and address our education system's shortcomings to improve our communities across Pennsylvania. To read about my legislation and future initiatives, please click here .

The last thing that we need is a candidate like Congressman Toomey who has called for investments in big corporations, not people. Our first ad of the general election, below, features Toomey calling for the elimination of all taxes on corporations.

Taking Independent Stances and Solving Problems

I was honored to have former Republican Senator Chuck Hagel join us on the campaign trail in Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. Even though he is a member of a different political party, Hagel spoke out in support of my non-partisan approach to problem-solving: "Sestak has demonstrated during his two terms in Congress that he puts what's best for the country before the interests of his party." Watch here .

I was also proud to welcome Senator Byron Dorgan, a longtime independent voice in the Senate who spoke out against Toomey's push for deregulation. He accurately predicted then that the passage of the legislation would create the "too big to fail" banks now involved in the risky Wall Street gambling praised by Congressman Toomey.

In 1999, Senator Dorgan stated: "I think we will look back in 10 years' time and say we should not have done this, but we did because we forgot the lessons of the past, and that that which is true in the 1930s is true in 2010. We have now decided in the name of modernization to forget the lessons of the past, of safety and of soundness."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Joining me at a campaign event in Philadelphia, Senator Dorgan said: "Mr. Toomey is one of those folks who helped created the wreck. He supports the policies that led to this dramatic problem we face in the country. There are millions of people losing their jobs, losing their homes and losing hope. Joe Sestak is exactly the opposite in terms of his mindset and how he believes we ought to proceed. And it seems to me the people of Pennsylvania have a very significant choice."

Though the recession has taken a toll on working families across the state, I have been most impressed by the sense of community that I have witnessed along my travels. Every day that we campaign, you remind me of the reasons that I entered this race in the first place - to accelerate our economic recovery, put people back to work, protect the Social Security savings of our seniors and fight for the interests of every Pennsylvania family.

Warmly,

Joe Sestak
Democrat for Senate

4 Trillion Reasons China's Currency Isn't Ready for Prime Time

China isn't ready to supply the rest of the world with RMB. So why does it matter if the currency gets the IMF's stamp of approval?

BY PATRICK CHOVANEC
JUNE 16, 2015

A lot of hyperventilation has lately been devoted to the future international role of China's currency, the renminbi (RMB). The latest flurry of excitement centers on China's bid to have the RMB included in the basket of currencies represented in the Special Drawing Rights issued by the International Monetary Fund. According to accepted wisdom, the RMB's inclusion in the SDR basket would be a landmark step, formal recognition of its coming-of-age as a global reserve currency. SDR status, many say, would give central banks the green light to add RMB to their reserves and encourage investors to pour money into Chinese stocks and bonds.

But SDR status is a red herring. What really matters is not whether the IMF uses the RMB, but who else does.

If anything, inclusion in the SDR basket would be a political gesture, not a financial or economic game-changer. That may seem a strange thing to say, given the obvious stock Chinese officials place in winning SDR status. Surely, they wouldn't devote so much effort and make it such a high priority, if it wasn't really important. But China wouldn't be the first country to mistake the form of reserve currency status for the substance.

There are two keys to any nation's currency functioning as a global reserve currency: It must be desirable (as both a means of exchange and store of value), and it must be accessible (people can accumulate bank balances in it abroad). Official recognition can acknowledge these realities, but does not fulfill them, as the United States found out in the wake of World War II.

In 1944, the Bretton Woods Conference designated the U.S. dollar as the world's reserve currency, linked to gold (which the United States owned virtually all of). Washington also made sure that exchange rates to the dollar were fixed to ensure its continued dominance as an exporter. But after the war, the problem quickly became apparent: Europe had no dollars, and no way to earn them. Unless the United States was willing to supply dollars via trade, aid, or investment — in other words, by running a balance of payments deficit — a global economy depending on the dollar as its reserve currency would collapse.

The solution to this dollar shortage was the Marshall Plan, followed by a series of currency devaluations that put its trading partners on a more competitive footing with the United States. Eventually, Washington essentially exported dollars by running large and persistent trade deficits — a state of affairs that continues to this day and would be unsustainable if the United States did not remain a profitable place to invest.

SDR status may fall far short of Bretton Woods, but the principle still operates. Any country that wants its currency to actually function as an international reserve must supply the rest of the world with claims in that currency, either by running trade deficits or by providing large amounts of aid or investment capital. Until now, at least, China's development model has been based on precisely the opposite: running trade surpluses and attracting foreign investment. In the process, rather than exporting its own currency, it has imported an astonishing $4 trillion in other countries' currencies, which it holds as central bank reserves. (In the past few years, China has seen some capital flow outward, drawing down on those huge foreign currency balances by a few billion dollars.)

So where do SDRs fit in? SDRs are a unit of account, assigned a value (based on a basket of widely used and traded currencies), and allocated to countries by the IMF. Think of them as vouchers, which can — in theory, at least — be exchanged for actual currencies. If the RMB were added to the SDR basket — along with the dollar, euro, pound, and yen — it could be argued that countries holding SDRs would be holding some sort of claim on RMB as part of their reserves. The official imprimatur of the IMF might also encourage central banks to hold RMB directly, on their own.

It's possible — but where would the RMB come from? Any RMB sent abroad, in excess of China's (currently modest) balance of payments deficit, would result in China accumulating that much more foreign exchange reserves of its own. In effect, it would be a kind of swap, which could be done (as long as both central banks are willing) with any two currencies. Even using RMB to settle China's payments deficit would leave it stuck holding the excessive quantities of foreign currency reserves it has already stockpiled. Far from eclipsing the U.S. dollar as the lead global currency, sending RMB abroad — absent a significant shift in China's balance of payments — would only perpetuate, and perhaps even exacerbate, China's own reliance on (and exposure to) the dollar and other foreign reserve currencies. Others, including the authors of a recent report by Barclays, argue that SDR status would establish the RMB as a "safe asset," which would encourage investors to buy Chinese stocks and bonds, thereby paving the way for it to serve as a reserve currency. It is certainly true that more liquid, better-developed capital markets in China would make it a great deal more attractive to hold RMB.

But the question, again, is where does the money come from? If foreigners are buying Chinese bonds (or even non-Chinese bonds) with RMB they earned selling (net) exports to China, or if they are buying Chinese goods (or even non-Chinese goods) with RMB they borrowed from Chinese lenders, then the RMB has truly gone global, supplied by (initial) Chinese balance of payments outflows.

But if foreign investors are simply changing their own currency into RMB in order to buy RMB assets in China, that's a capital inflow. From a flow of currency perspective, it's no different from a tourist changing U.S. dollars into RMB at the Beijing airport, or the foreign direct investment that's been flowing into China for years. Each of these transactions involves China importing foreign currency in exchange for goods and assets, not exporting RMB. To the extent that SDR status makes China a more attractive magnet for foreign investors, it actually raises the hurdle that much higher for China to supply the world with RMB reserves.

Many observers seem to believe that anything that raises the RMB's profile puts it on track to becoming an international reserve currency. This is far from the truth.

Adding the RMB to the IMF's SDR basket would certainly raise its profile, but would do nothing to help — and could even complicate — the ability of other countries to acquire meaningful reserve holdings of RMB. Just as was true for the U.S. dollar, the key to the RMB's future role depends not on official designations from above, but on the balance of payments. For the RMB to function as a reserve currency, China would have to develop a profoundly different relationship with the rest of the world economy from the one it has now — a change it is far from clear the Chinese are willing to embrace.

Q. Why was it important for the foundation that some foreign government donations be allowed to continue after Hillary Clinton became secretary of state (i.e. those from governments that had been giving and then continued to do so at a steady pace, as well as new or increased donation that cleared a state department review)? Why do foundation officials believe such donations did not pose any conflicts of interest given Secretary Clinton's role, as some have alleged?

"As with other global charities, we rely on the support of individuals, organizations, corporations and governments who have the shared goal of addressing critical global challenges in a meaningful way. When anyone contributes to the Clinton Foundation, it goes towards Foundation programs that save lives. The majority of this support from governments is for specific, multi-year programs that are improving the lives of millions of people around the world and were underway well before Secretary Clinton took office. It's hard to imagine someone arguing that funding should be cut off for the more than 8 million people getting access to live-saving HIV/AIDS medicine in more than 70 countries, the nearly 40,000 farmers in Malawi, Tanzania, and Rwanda trying to earn a better living or the reduction of 33,500 tons of greenhouse gas emissions annually."

Hillary Clinton 2016: The Anti-'08 Campaign

Mar 23, 2015 6:00 AM EDT

As she inches closer to her expected campaign launch, staffing decisions offer clues into how her operation might work.

This time is going to be different.

So say members of the skeleton team already working for Hillary Clinton, future staffers preparing to make the move from Washington D.C. to the expected campaign headquarters in New York, and some veterans of the 2008 campaign. It's a reflection of what Clinton and her husband want as well as they prepare to launch her candidacy next month: A clear statement that they have learned from missteps and aren't dwelling on what might have been.

Clinton's strategy is still being formulated and her total message has yet to be unveiled, but her early staffing choices are seen as a signal that she is aware of the infighting and drama that plagued her 2008 campaign and is trying to change that.

"If she gets in the race, of course this time will be different. And her team will reflect that," said Nick Merrill, who is currently Clinton's only on-the-record spokesman.

The expected campaign manager, Robby Mook, values organizing as much as he does data, strategy and messaging. He and campaign chairman John Podesta will be tasked with juggling competing interests and personalities within the campaign and outside of it, from the Clintons on down. Communications head Jennifer Palmieri, who left the Obama administration last week, is seen by reporters and operatives alike as someone who can disagree with those who cover the campaign but will do so respectfully and professionally.

During her last campaign, Clinton's team was rife with backstabbing, credit claiming, and finger-pointing. Decisions were often put off indefinitely and then made under duress. Her communications staff could be abusive and uncooperative with reporters. For much of the campaign, she was cloistered from voters, reluctant to even hint at the historic nature of her candidacy. And Bill Clinton, at times one of his wife's greatest assets, was also often huge liability, letting his anger toward Barack Obama show throughout the early months of 2008.

Clinton is expected to announce her next steps in early April. She is in a stage where she doesn't have to report spending on staff or travel, though she will need to do so retroactively once her campaign launches.

In a sign that the interim phase is approaching its end, Clinton has just two public appearances on the horizon, both set for Monday.

In the morning, she'll speak at a Center for American Progress forum on urban issues co-hosted by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees. It's a friendly environment–the moderator for the event is CAP President Neera Tanden, Clinton's 2008 policy director–but it's also a substantive one, where she'll be able to talk about her policy positions in depth.

That night, Clinton will address the awards ceremony for the Toner Prize, presented to journalists in memory of the late New York Times political reporter Robin Toner, who led the paper's coverage of Bill Clinton's 1992 campaign. The irony of the famously media-adverse Clinton addressing a journalism awards ceremony is not lost on reporters who remember that in 2008, her campaign set up a filing center in a men's restroom.

While people joining the campaign are confident about its potential, longtime Clinton supporter Donna Brazile cautioned that staffing itself is just one piece of the dynamic. "If it was just personnel, it would be easy," she said. "But it's about how you deploy all of the available resources at your disposal, how you manage it all, especially in the age of the super-PAC."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

One strategist said that the primary reason people are attracted to working for the Clinton campaign is Clinton herself, but that the team she's building is also a big draw.

Some joining the team, like pollster and strategist Joel Benenson and media adviser Jim Margolis, have deep roots in the two Obama presidential campaigns. Others, like Mandy Grunwald, have more than two decades of history with the Clintons. But plenty of other staffers have a mix of experiences. Marlon Marshall worked in the Obama White House and was deputy national field director in 2012. In 2008, he was Clinton's state field director in Nevada, Ohio and Indiana.

Mook has a loyal following and was described by two people who have worked with him as the only candidate for the campaign manager job who would have joined the team even if he hadn't been given that role.

Kristina Schake, Michelle Obama's former communications director, will be a deputy to Palmieri, while Attorney General Eric Holder's top press aide, Brian Fallon, will leave his job at the end of the month to join as a press secretary. Other early hires for press jobs include the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee's Jesse Ferguson, the Democratic National Committee's Ian Sams and Jesse Lehrich of American Bridge, which has been conducting opposition research on the potential Republican candidates.

Merrill will continue to serve as a spokesman. "You need an infrastructure and operation in place and one guy can't do it all," said Jim Manley, the former top communications adviser to Senate Democratic Leader Harry Reid, referring to Merrill. "They seem to be building that, but we'll have to wait to see how it runs."

Lehrich's hiring is a sign of how much the Clinton/Obama dynamic has changed since 2008. His uncle is David Axelrod, Obama's political messaging guru.

Just as important to defining the team as who's on it is who isn't. Clinton's longtime communications adviser, Philippe Reines–who spent the 2008 cycle as her Senate press secretary–will not be on the campaign staff and has told people close to Clinton that he has made a deliberate decision to back away from day-to-day involvement. Known for his often-aggressive style, his less-central role is viewed as another signal of the Clinton campaign's media relations.

What's not clear is exactly what role those new mid-level staffers will fill. One future staffer who didn't want to speak on the record before the campaign launches and his hiring is announced said he felt comfortable leaving his current job because of his trust in the senior members of the team. Mook in particular is cited as someone who is unlikely to allow intramural disagreements between former Obama and Clinton staffers to disrupt the campaign.

The Democratic strategist said that the current team's organizational chart is a huge change from 2008, when seemingly everyone on the campaign was a senior adviser.

"It's a different season, it's a different set of challenges," Brazile said. "So of course you're driving with a different set of tires."

Hi Mia-

Thanks for your support, and for reaching out with these very thoughtful suggestions. It's great to see a smart young person so deeply engaged in the political process.

First, I've passed on your email to our digital team and asked them to take a look at your recommendations for our social media strategy. Even a big operation like ours is always learning what people respond to online, and evolving to best communicate with people around the country.

I can see that you really care about Hillary Clinton, so I want you to have the most up-to-date facts when you're talking to your friends. Hillary absolutely believes that black lives matter and that our criminal justice system is out of balance. She was the first candidate to address these issues. In her first major speech of the campaign, she said we have to come to terms with some hard truths about race and justice in America and called for an end to the era of mass incarceration. In October, she met with leaders of the BLM movement to discuss their recommendations for making progress. Our policy team also put together an in-depth page on our website that lays out Hillary's full criminal justice proposals, if you'd like to see more details. https://www.hillaryclinton.com/issues/criminal-justice-reform/

We are very proud of the support we have received from the labor movement. 17 national unions and the North America Building Trades have endorsed Hillary so far. These unions, which include the SEIU, AFT, NEA, and AFSCME, represent over 11 million American workers. She will continue fighting for them throughout this campaign and, hopefully, as President of the United States.

I really appreciate your reaching out, and I hope this has been helpful. If you end up in Brooklyn sometime next year we would love to show you around our HQ. Please keep working hard to make Hillary our next President.

Happy New Year. Talk soon.

Best,
John

It worries me that I am one of the only young people I know that plans to vote for Hillary Clinton. Most of my peers support Bernie Sanders. I think that Bernie Sanders is not a strong candidate and his policies are not sound or realistic, but many young people hear "free college" and automatically give him their support.

> I think there are certain issues that the Clinton campaign should address more to get a better response from younger voters. First of all, many young people think that Clinton is wishy- washy on her stance on racial injustice in America. They believe that Clinton has not engaged with the movement ‘Black Lives Matter’ in the way that she should. Second, the youth is concerned that Hillary Clinton accepts money from huge donors, like Super PACs, while the biggest Sanders donors are unions. Why don’t more unions support Clinton? Thirdly, they want to hear more about Hillary Clinton’s education plan. I am familiar with the plan because I have researched it, but most young people don’t have the initiative to actually search fore it.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

My last concern is about the Clinton Campaign's social media team. I think that it needs to be reformed. I understand that the media team is trying to appeal to the youth, in funny ways like 'memes' but that is simply not the way to go. I cringe almost every time I visit the Hillary Clinton Twitter account or view the Clinton Campaign Snapchat story. Young people want to be spoken to like adults, and in some ways it seems like Clinton is just peddling to the masses. It seems to me like Hillary Clintons media team is almost frightened to address the real, pressing issues. The Youth don't want to know 'Why Hillary Clinton Is Just Like Your Abuela', they want to know how she is going to serve this country for the better. Not to mention 'Why Hillary Clinton Is Just Like Your Abuela' was a little disrespectful and cultural appropriating. It is a misguided way to connect with Latino voters.

I want nothing more than to see Hillary Clinton in the Oval Office. I have looked up to her for years now and I am determined to get her elected. But there are huge weak spots in her campaign strategy. I want to help.

Thank you so much,

Obama for America

John --

Midnight Tuesday, September 30th, is the financial reporting deadline for this month.

The resources we have on hand going into October will determine our ability to compete in key battleground states.

Your donation today will help fund time-sensitive voter registration and Get Out The Vote operations -- which need resources immediately to be effective.

Make a donation of $15 or more before Tuesday's deadline and you'll receive an official Obama-Biden yard sign.

Your sign will arrive no later than Friday, October 17th, so you'll have plenty of time to show off your support and remind your friends and neighbors to vote for Barack.

Donate $15 or more and get your official Obama-Biden yard sign

Or you can choose to donate $30 or more and receive an Election Day T-shirt.

Your support has never been more important than it is right now.

You'll help build the biggest voter mobilization movement in presidential history.

Thank you for your support, times. It was a reminder of why we must build a movement that fights for justice on all fronts and forces candidates to talk about the issues that our families care most about, like raising wages, creating a pathway to citizenship, ensuring justice in every community, and prioritizing affordable, quality home care and child care for all families.

The debate stood in stark contrast to our home care roundtable event with Hillary Clinton earlier in the day in Los Angeles. This was the second roundtable event we've held with Secretary Clinton since the Executive Committee directed us to begin engaging presidential candidates on our agenda for working people back in March.

Secretary Clinton listened to the stories of home care providers like Aretha Peters from Cleveland. Aretha's story follows below. You can watch video of the event here , and read a great story in the Los Angeles Times here .

Aretha Peters – home care worker from Cleveland, OH

"I'm a single mom who works hard to provide for my kids. But I only make $8 an hour and I don't have vacation or sick time. I work more than 50 hours a week, yet I'm unable to support my family's basic needs. I struggle to keep food on the table and spend hours in line at the food bank. This month I had to choose between paying a full month's rent and buying new shoes for my eight-year-old to replace her pair with holes in the bottom.

And now Hillary Clinton knows it. She learned from all the home care workers in the room that we are not just making sacrifices; we are making them with love and compassion for others. These jobs aren't easy and we are worth more.

I was encouraged when the Secretary said:

"This movement to give dignity and respect and better pay and benefits and training to home care workers is one of the most important missions that we should take on together. You are on the front lines and the rest of us have to be supporting and advocating for you."

And when she recognized how special home care workers are:

"It's not just anybody who's good at this work. It's not just anyone you can trust in your home. The union, the training, it makes a huge difference."

I was so encouraged to look in her face and see compassion. Secretary Clinton asked questions, she wanted to know more about us. This day has been the highlight of the last two years of reaching out to our fellow home care workers, marching in the streets, and fighting for $15. Hillary Clinton knows we need higher wages, paid time off, sick time, vacation, and a union and why that matters; not just to home care workers, but to our consumers, too.

I want to say thank you to SEIU for this amazing opportunity. I was honored to be at the table with amazing home care workers from across the country.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

I am inspired by Kindalay Cummings-Akers from Massachusetts, who just won $15 an hour with her union sisters and brothers. She made clear that home care workers are a force in the 2016 election, saying the best president is "someone who supports the home care workers and our consumers, especially seniors and veterans. We home care workers will be out there knocking on doors to get word out, talking to our neighbors. Home care workers and our issues should be right out front."

I learned about the training course Regina Sutton from California took part in "This has helped us learn how to be care team. Me as the provider, Karen as the consumer, her doctor, her therapist, we come together and make sure we know the needs Karen has." I think all home care workers and consumers should have access to a program like that.

And Karen Johnson, a consumer from CA, made clear that Regina is such an important part of her life. She shared that her chronic pain drove her to attempt suicide. And then she met Regina. "I like to be independent and make people laugh and now I have that back. And it's just a blessing."

Susie Young told us about the better health outcomes her clients have thanks to the great programs SEIU has built in Washington State. And, Washington home care workers have won the first – and only – retirement plan in the country. "We found our voices. We came out of our shadows. We became invisible no more."

Sumer Spika fought for years to win her union and says her greatest victory is paid time off – as a single mom, I can really relate to that. She is living the struggle of caring for a family on home care wages. "When I first became a caregiver there were no benefits. I found myself in the grocery store with a baby on my hip and a screaming toddler at my side having to choose between buying toilet paper or laundry soap."

Lizabeth Bonilla has been a home care worker for four decades and is sounding the alarm about the senior care gap and is worried about what happens when it's her turn. "I'm 60 years old. It's going to be my turn to be the client. What do I have? Nothing. I have nothing to show for 42 years of my life. If I get sick, I get sick, but I don't get paid. So I have absolutely nothing. Nothing at all. I had to humble myself after 42 years of work to get food stamps."

And Latonya Allen is fired up about the Fight for $15 and spreading the word in the South. "I love the job that I do, I'm very passionate about it. Home care workers don't get the pay they deserve. I've been hurt on the job, with no worker compensation. We have no benefits, no vacation, no sick time. So what I'm asking is for you to please stand by us, walk with us, and help us win a living wage."

Now more than ever, home care workers know what's possible when we stick together and demand change for our families. Together, we will keep uniting with thousands of homecare workers across the country to make a difference for home care workers and all working families in 2016.

I'm going to go back home and tell everyone we need to keep fighting. We are out of the shadows and we are not going to stop until everyone across the nation has a living wage and a union."

John --

President Barack Obama will soon sign comprehensive health care reform into law. A century-long fight will finally be won.

As the President wrote last night, it was you who made this improbable victory possible. It was volunteers knocking on doors, talking to neighbors, and proving once again that Americans, standing together, can change the course of a nation.

Supporters like us now have a chance to add our names as "Co-signers" of this historic legislation -- adding our names next to President Obama's to show our pride in helping to bring about this great achievement.

Organizing for America will establish a permanent archive with all the signatures, so that generations to come will have a record of those who stood together in this moment and won this fight for our future. And I will personally present all the names we collect to the President. Will you add your name?

Co-sign with the President

This is the most significant domestic achievement in decades. And this movement of Americans, committed to improving their country, made it possible.

We turned out for that first cold morning in Springfield, for the canvasses in New Hampshire, for the phone banks in Iowa. We kept fighting when no one gave us a chance and the cynics told us we were clinging to a false hope.

We organized for health reform. We spread the facts on doorsteps, in town halls, and through millions of conversations. Your voice rang through the halls of Congress and filled the pages of local newspapers.

It took many months and tremendous resolve, but we built a national network of support so strong that when the deceptive attack ads choked the airwaves and the pundits declared our effort defeated -- we had what it took to fight our way back.

And we won: the toughest insurance regulations in history, affordable coverage for 32 million without it, relief from skyrocketing costs for small business owners and from rising deficits for our children.

That's the story of how change really happens. And now, hundreds of millions will have better lives because of it.

It's rare to be part of something so meaningful that will help change the course of history. But you are.

Please consider adding your name as co-signer today to commemorate your efforts:

Thank you,

David Plouffe

BLUEGREEN ALLIANCE GOOD JOBS, CLEAN ENVIRONMENT, GREEN ECONOMY

Dear John,

The EPA has proposed new standards to greatly reduce one of the most significant factors contributing to climate change: methane leaks.

Do your part to keep workers safe on the job, while stopping climate-damaging leaks by urging the EPA to finalize these standards!

Researchers recently measured that in the U.S. alone, over 2.4 billion metric tons of methane is released into the atmosphere every year from leaks and outdated equipment in the oil and gas industry. This amount—enough to heat more than 5 million homes each year—is much more powerful in trapping heat than carbon dioxide and stays in the atmosphere for over 12 years. The use of old, wasteful methods used to produce, contain, and transport natural gas is unnecessary and blatant, and you can help stop it.

As of today, we've had nearly 900 concerned citizens send in their comments to the EPA to stop natural gas leaks, but we need YOUR help to reach our goal of 2,000 by December 4.

It takes less than two minutes of your time, and you will be playing a critical role in protecting workers and communities from wasteful practices that are harming our climate.

Send a comment to the EPA today and forward this on to friends and family to ensure a better future for our planet.

Prof. Leon--

It was nice to meet you last night, and I enjoyed the first class even though I'm not officially enrolled. I did confirm this afternoon that Ms Bealer dropped your class today, so there should be an open seat as of today.

Unfortunately, while I'm very excited about the prospect of taking your class before I graduate in May, the Registrar's initial read after my add/drop request is that I am not permitted to register. They have not provided much of a rationale. I am waiting on a response, and I clearly pointed out that I registered through the last chance lottery and am currently #1 on the wait list. I'm not sure what can be done, but right now it appears I will not be permitted to register and forfeit what seems likely to remain an open seat.

I bring this to your attention primarily for situational awareness, but also on the off chance that you might have any influence over this situation. I have been hoping and planning to take this class for nearly three years, and it would be extremely unfortunate if I was barred from doing so by a very minor technicality.

Thank you in advance for your thoughts, and I hope to see you next Monday.

Humbly,

William "BJ" Donovan

Laura, My plan would be to take a flight up first thing. Why don't we plan to do something like this:

9:30 just the two of us.

10:15 exec staff

11:30 senior staff

1:00 all staff

4:00 cgi review

Make any adjustments you need to based on individual schedules and circumstances.

One logistical item--should I book my travel and get reimbursed or do you have a master account with better rates?

Dear Mr. Cory Booker,

My best wishes and success as next New Jersey Senator I have been conducting an inexorable pertinacious correspondence with the White House as well as US Senate Committee on Armed Services pertaining the Dual Headed Monster-Drugs and Terror
To my great astonishment none of my letters has been hitherto responded despite the extraordinary importance of these issues that jeopardize Mankind.
According to my assessment, NATO is on a verge of an Ignominious Defeat in Afghanistan as a result of Narcotic Vegetation Abundance extending on Immense 157,000 hectares converted to Weaponry and Drugs in order to attack innocent people
I believe to have developed an innovative method capable of eradicating Poppy Opium Vegetation by Unmanned Aircraft utilizing defoliants that cause it to dry up within several days inevitably Those dry bushes left behind by pulling out NATO Troops as a souvenir for El-Qaida might have been a restoration of US deterrence intensity eroded to a great extent after Nine Eleven Horrendousness. Substitution of Conventional Belligerency to Herbicidal one would have contributed to improvement of US stance in the World anyway.
Please contact me in order to get Technical Specification required for Unmanned Aircraft Modification for Narcotic Vegetation Desertification as previously described
In favor of entire Mankind Affluence
I suggest exerting an influence on the President to assign the method mentioned above

Sincerely

Gideon Rodeh I imagine thousands of Unmanned Aircraft attack simultaneously the Narcotic Vegetation in South Eastern Asia and Central America transmuting it becoming an Arid Desert

Gideon Rodeh

My edits attached - on privitization, we should try to caveat with "rushing through" since we don't oppose privitization everywhere across the country.

I'm fine with either - They're pretty close to privatizing (currently on a 60 day hold by CMS)

Adding Shapiro for any thoughts.

In his public response Thursday afternoon, Branstad emphasized the federal agency's willingness to approve the shift, despite the delay. "The decision by CMS formally puts the wheels in motion to implement our Medicaid Modernization plan on March 1," the governor said in a prepared statement Thursday afternoon. "The CMS letter effectively gives the green light to Iowa as long as steps are taken to build on the progress already made. Iowa's Medicaid Modernization plan is similar to plans CMS has approved in 39 other states. From the very beginning, our focus has been on improving patients' health outcomes. Current Medicaid patients should continue working with their Managed Care Organizations for a March 1 kick-off."

We're trying to keep this very simple and high-level, no more than two pages, so she doesn't need a podium and can just absorb the closing argument and make it part of her usual stump.

Please send any changes by 6pm. Thanks!

And while I did not know Justice Scalia, and disagreed with his views every bit as much as Mike and Gary, I respected him for his commitment, integrity, and brilliance. (And his votes on the flagburning cases!). But even if I did not, it seems to me that expressing condolences on the sudden death of a national legal leader was the decent and humane thing to do, and I'm grateful that Bill did so.

Sherman Cohn <cohn@law.georgetown.edu> wrote:

I must chime in because I had the honor of knowing Justice Scalia, though we were far from close friends. For a short time, he was a visitor at Georgetown Law, where I first met him. Then, for a short time, he "worked" for me, teaching contracts in a bar review course, and later, also for a short time, he hired me as a consultant at the Administrative Conference of the United States. I also recruited him twice to talk to the annual black-tie banquet of the American Inns of Court, and our paths continued to cross in connection with the American Inns as well as at Georgetown. While we were not close, one of my cherished memories was two hours in a cocktail lounge in San Francisco – he saw me register at the hotel and asked if I had time -- while he waited for his son – the talk was warm and meaningful, and he listened to me even when he disagreed.

Of course, he was a vicious questioner on the Court. I expect that most of us watched him in action. But he was not alone. Going back a decade or two, I experienced the questioning of Justice Frankfurter and Black in a case in which they did not like my position one bit. Frankfurter particularly, and Black a little less so (and with more of a southern graciousness), were just as vicious in their questioning. Of course, he voted in some (many?) cases differently than I would have liked. But, let us recall, he won only when he had four colleagues who went along – and he also did not always win. As far as I know, he was well liked by his colleagues, ever after he skewered them in dissents. His friendship with Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg is well known – and her graciousness yesterday should be the pattern for all of us.

Yes, I disagreed with many of his views and votes. But that does not take away from my admiration of his mind – and of the many hours he spent at Georgetown (I assume elsewhere as well) speaking with students. Indeed, perhaps the latter is a characteristic that we all should emulate.

Thus, I join with Mike Gottesman and Mitt Regan and the gracious words of the Dean – as well as of Justice Ginsburg.

With respect to the votes Justice Scalia cast on the Supreme Court, I'd probably agree with Mike Seidman and Gary Peller 100% of the time. But I don't agree with their disapproval of the Dean's statement. Justice Ginsburg has said roughly the same as the Dean. Whatever one thinks of his jurisprudence, Scalia was an extraordinarily significant figure who also, coincidentally, was a friend of our institution. As for bullying and humiliating advocates who appeared before the Court, nobody on our faculty experienced that anywhere close to what I did. I didn't like it as it was happening, but I never doubted his "brilliance." It would be a sad day if, as an institution, we were incapable of honoring important public figures upon their death simply because most of us disagree with the positions they took. Our public face as an institution of scholars should suggest that we're open-minded and receptive to all views, even if (sadly) it's not always true.

I do think it would have been prudent (if only to fend off the criticisms Mike and Gary have surfaced) to have included a qualifier in the public statement that suggested Scalia's views were controversial and not shared by all in our institution, but I think it's a big stretch to read the statement as seemingly embracing Scalia's views. It doesn't say that, and I didn't think it inferred it, either.

Dean Treanor and Colleagues:

Like Mike Seidman, I also was put-off by the invocation of the "Georgetown Community" in the press release that Dean Treanor issued Saturday. I imagine many other faculty, students and staff, particularly people of color, women and sexual minorities, cringed at headline and at the unmitigated praise with which the press release described a jurist that many of us believe was a defender of privilege, oppression and bigotry, one whose intellectual positions were not brilliant but simplistic and formalistic.

I am not suggesting that J. Scalia should have been criticized on the day of his death, nor that the "community" should not be thankful for his willingness to meet with our students. But he was not a legal figure to be lionized or emulated by our students. He bullied lawyers, trafficked in personal humiliation of advocates, and openly sided with the party of intolerance in the "culture wars" he often invoked. In my mind, he was not a "giant" in any good sense.

It is tricky knowing what to say when a public figure like Scalia, or the late Robert Byrd, or other voices of intolerance, meet their death. But as an academic institution, I believe that we should be wary of contributing to the mystification of people because of the lofty official positions they achieved. I don't want to teach our students to hold someone like Scalia in reverence because he's a "Supreme Court Justice." Our proximity to official Washington provides an opportunity to see many public officials close-up, and to learn that there is nothing special that titles bestow--even a Supreme Court Justice can be a bigot, and there is no reason to be intimidated by the purported "brilliance" that others describe because, when you have a chance to see and hear such people close-up, the empowering effect is often, as it should be, de-mystification. (I was happy to meet Warren Burger as a law student for this very reason). We should never teach our students to be obsequious to those with power.

The "Georgetown Community" could mean many things. In one sense, it is simply a legally constituted set of formal relations, and in that sense perhaps "the Dean," duly appointed by "the President," speaks for that "institution" of formal legal relations.

But there is also a lived community that we inhabit, within the interstices of the formal and contractually defined roles, a community that exists in our relations with each other and with our co-workers and our students, a community that is constituted in our hallways and class rooms and lunch rooms, and in our affection for and commitment to one another, and, for many of us, a vision of how we could all be together in the law school, disagreeing often but always trying to be sensitive and empathic to all members of our community.

That is the "Georgetown Community" that I feel a part of, a lived community of tolerance, affection, and care that so many have built for so long here. That "community" would never have claimed that our entire community mourns the loss of J. Scalia, nor contributed to his mystification without regard for the harm and hurt he inflicted. That community teaches critique, not deference, and empowerment, not obseqiuosness.

Sometimes the two senses of community might merge--the formal, legal institution might be so at one with the lived community that its legitimacy to speak for the "community" flows organically. But that is not our situation.

Sincerely,
Gary

Our norms of civility preclude criticizing public figures immediately after their death. For now, then, all I'll say is that I disagree with these sentiments and that expressions attributed to the "Georgetown Community" in the press release issued this evening do not reflect the views of the entire community..

Express-Scripts (based in St. Louis) is now the 26th corporation (along w/ four major non-profits and 55 confirmed elected leaders) to drop ALEC.

This also makes Express-Scripts the sixth corporation to have their departure from ALEC announced within the last week alone; joining Hewlett-Packard, CVS, Deere & Co., MillerCoors & BestBuy.

Express-Scripts is Twenty-Sixth Corporation to Dump ALEC

Pharmacy benefits manager Express-Scripts told the Center for Media and Democracy today that it has ended its membership in the American Legislative Exchange Council (ALEC), making it the twenty-sixth business to dump ALEC in recent months.

Antoine's Restaurant in New Orleans

Express-Scripts' head of corporate communications David Whitrap confirmed to CMD that the corporation has dropped its ALEC membership but did not provide a reason. The St. Louis, Missouri-based Express-Scripts had been a member of ALEC and its Health and Human Services Task Force since at least 2010 . At the 2011 ALEC Annual Meeting, Express-Scripts sponsored the "Missouri Night" party for legislators from the state at Antoine's Restaurant in New Orleans.

On Tuesday, Color of Change announced that Express-Scripts competitor CVS would be dropping its ALEC membership, along with four other companies . CVS and Express-Scripts are the country's largest pharmacy benefits managers, handling prescription benefits for employers and health plans and using their clout to negotiate discounts from drug makers. After Walgreens terminated a contract with Express-Scripts, many customers were reportedly diverted from Express-Scripts to CVS, tightening competition between the two companies.

Walgreens' move to terminate its contract with Express-Scripts was denounced by civil rights leaders like Al Sharpton, as it would increase prescription drug costs for low-income individuals whose only neighborhood pharmacy is Walgreens, but whose health care plans use Express-Scripts. Walgreens remains an ALEC member and is a member of the ALEC Health and Human Services Task Force.

Express Scripts is the 26th corporation to leave ALEC in recent months. The corporate "bill mill" has come under increasing scrutiny in recent months as the public has become aware of its role in advancing the "Stand Your Ground" law initially cited to protect Trayvon Martin's killer, as well as voter suppression bills, union-busting policies, and other controversial legislation. A full list of corporations that have dropped their ALEC memberships can be viewed here .

Boston Globe: Poll: Mass. Democrats would back Clinton over Warren

By Jim O'Sullivan

August 25, 2014

More than three times as many Massachusetts Democrats would vote for Hillary Clinton if she ran for president in 2016 than would back the state's senior senator, Elizabeth Warren, according to a poll released Monday by Suffolk University and The Boston Herald.

Clinton, the former secretary of state and first lady, would garner 55 percent of the vote among 400 Massachusetts Democrats likely to vote in next month's gubernatorial primary, while Warren -- who has repeatedly said that she is not running for president -- would curry 17.25 percent. Vice President Joe Biden drew just 7.75 percent of the vote. Warren would be the second choice of 27 percent of those polled, while Biden would get almost 24 percent of the back-up vote.

Warren unseated former Republican senator Scott Brown in 2012, with a winning margin of 8 percentage points. On the same ballot, President Obama beat Mitt Romney, the state's former governor, by 23 percentage points. Warren has disavowed on multiple occasions interest in running for president, but has not foreclosed entirely on the option.

The same poll shows Attorney General Martha Coakley leading the gubernatorial primary with more than 42 percent of the vote, with Treasurer Steve Grossman at 30 percent -- portraying a race significantly closer than a series of public polls have showed. Coakley advisers have acknowledged they expect the race to tighten as the Sept. 9 primary draws near and Grossman's on-air presence has outpaced Coakley's.

Former federal health care administrator Don Berwick drew 16 percent of the vote. More than 11 percent of voters were undecided. Asked how they would vote if their preferred candidate loses in the primary, 26 percent of voters said they were undecided, while 60 percent said they would back the Democratic nominee.

Conducted Aug. 21 to Aug. 24 among 400 likely Democratic primary voters, the poll carries an error margin of plus or minus 4.9 percent.

The Suffolk/Herald poll also quizzed 400 Republicans likely to vote in the GOP primary. More than 70 percent said they planned to vote for venture capitalist Charlie Baker over Tea Party-affiliated Mark Fisher, who slightly more than 11 percent of the vote.

When asked to compare Baker to Romney, 44 percent said Romney was a better statewide candidate. Less than 24 percent selected Baker.

By a smaller margin, less than 5 percentage points, Republican voters said Brown was a better candidate than Baker.

The poll showed New Jersey governor Chris Christie, former Florida governor Jeb Bush, Kentucky senator Rand Paul, and Wisconsin congressman Paul Ryan, the GOP's 2012 vice presidential nominee, clustered atop the leaderboard of the Massachusetts presidential primary. Each earned between 10 and 11 percent of the vote.

When the question was asked with Romney added to the list, 49 percent said he would be their first choice, while all the other candidates plunged below 8 percent.

National Review: No, Hillary Doesn't Need to Speak About Ferguson

By Charles C. W. Cooke

August 25, 2014 10:53 a.m. EDT

In Politico, Maggie Haberman notes that Hillary Clinton has not yet commented on the situation in Ferguson:

Hillary Clinton ignored reporters' questions about the racial conflict in Ferguson, Missouri, on Sunday at the end of a book-signing event in Westhampton Beach, a vacation enclave near her rented summer house.

Clinton, the potential 2016 Democratic presidential hopeful who has been vacationing in the Hamptons since the first full week of August, has not yet commented on the situation in Ferguson, a suburb of St. Louis, where an unarmed black teenager named Michael Brown was killed by a police officer two weeks ago.

So what? As a general rule, we really do not need to hear from absolutely everybody in the political class each and every time that something dramatic happens. If Hillary Clinton wishes to pronounce upon the topic, I'm sure she will. If she doesn't, then she doesn't have to. Either way, there's no particular reason we need to hear her take. She's not an elected official. She has no authority over Ferguson, Missouri. She has no more information than anybody else. She is, for now at least, a citizen of the United States. Nothing more, nothing less.

Now, it might be politically interesting that she has stayed silent. Reticence, after all, is not a virtue that is typically associated with the family. But one suspects that this is not why she is being urged to speak. Instead, those doing the urging seem to want to add her voice to whatever agenda they are trying to sell. Haberman writes:

The Rev. Al Sharpton, at a rally in Ferguson last weekend, pushed toward the future, calling on all the 2016 potential candidates, including Clinton and Republican Jeb Bush, to comment on the situation. Clinton is the clear front-runner for the Democratic nomination.

This, frankly, is absurd. At the heart of the situation in Ferguson is a question that neither Clinton nor Bush can possibly answer. That question: "Was the killing of Michael Brown justified?" Neither Bush nor Clinton know the answer to this. Indeed, they cannot possibly know the answer to this. In consequence, asking them to pronounce upon the secondary issues is downright silly. What, pray, can they say? They don't know whether the protests are justified or misplaced because they don't know whether there was any wrongdoing. Presumably neither of them is going to endorse rioting, nor are they likely to defend some of the poor policing we have seen. Worse still, anything either one of them were to say would immediately be taken as an endorsement of one side or another — an endorsement that they cannot and should not be making at this juncture. Let's leave the post-mortems to those involved.

The Courier-Journal: Rand Paul labels Hillary Clinton a "war hawk"

By James R. Carroll

August 25, 2014, 12:07 p.m. EDT

WASHINGTON - Kentucky Sen. Rand Paul is continuing his unrelenting criticism of former Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, saying on Sunday that she was "a war hawk" who could get the United States involved in another Middle East conflict.

Paul appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press," interviewed while on his humanitarian mission to Guatemala performing eye surgeries.

A possible 2016 Republican presidential candidate, Paul went after Clinton, a possible 2016 Democratic presidential candidate.

"I think that's what scares the Democrats the most, is that in a general election, were I to run, there's gonna be a lot of independents and even some Democrats who say, 'You know what, we are tired of war. We're worried that Hillary Clinton will get us involved in another Middle Eastern war, because she's so gung-ho,'" Paul told NBC's Chris Jansing.

"If you wanna see a transformational election in our country, let the Democrats put forward a war hawk like Hillary Clinton, and you'll see a transformation like you've never seen," the Kentucky senator said.

Paul added that he believes "the American public is coming more and more to where I am" on American engagement overseas.

The senator also discussed the shooting of an unarmed black teenager in Ferguson, Mo., that touched off days of protests and unrest, as well as a military-style response from area police.

Paul has been calling for an overhaul of drug laws and sentencing, saying that the legal system is disenfranchising minorities far more than whites and is hurting the ability of those who commit non-violent crimes from getting jobs.

"Let's say none of this has to do with race," Paul said of the Ferguson situation. "It might not, but the belief-- if you're African American and you live in Ferguson, the belief is, you see people in prison and they're mostly black and brown, that somehow it is racial, even if the thoughts that were going on at that time had nothing to do with race."

"So it's a very good chance that had this had nothing to do with race, but because of all of the arrest and the...way people were arrested, that everybody perceives it as, 'My goodness, the police are out to get us,' you know? And so that's why you have to change the whole war on drugs. It's not just this one instance," he said.

"And I don't know what happened during the shooting, so I'm not gonna make a judgment on the shooting. But I do know what's happening, as far as that you look at who's in our prisons," Paul said.

But the senator himself came under fire from Michael Gerson, a former speechwriter for President George W. Bush and now a Washington Post columnist.

Gerson said on "Meet the Press" that "it is wonderful, what he's doing" in Guatemala performing eye surgeries for the poor.

"But he's a senator, and a possible presidential candidate, and his policy views matter," Gerson said.

"He's called for the gradual elimination of all foreign aid. Now, I've seen its effect in sub-Saharan Africa and other places. This would cause misery for millions of people on AIDS treatment. It would betray hundreds of thousands of children receiving, you know, malaria treatment," Gerson said.

"These are things that you can't ignore in a presidential candidate," he added. "This is a perfect case of how a person can have good intentions but how an ideology can cause terrible misery. He will need to explain that. This is his policy views."

The Democratic National Committee, which is responding to Paul just about every time he makes a public statement, pounced on the senator's criticism of Clinton.

"Senator Paul's foreign policy vision is to retreat from our responsibilities abroad by ending all foreign aid to our allies – including Israel," charged DNC spokesman Michael Czin. "That's the vision he's laid out and defended time and time again...If Senator Paul wants to have a debate between his fringe, isolationist vision and that of Democrats who have restored our credibility around the world and brought countless service members safely home, that's a debate we're eager to have."

CBS News: Few Americans identify as libertarian, survey finds

By Stephanie Condon

Sen. Rand Paul, R-Ky., appears to be a competitive contender for the 2016 GOP presidential nomination, but few Americans identify with his political ideology, according to a new survey.

Only 14 percent of Americans identify as libertarian, according to new Pew Research Center data. Fewer, just 11 percent, identify as libertarian and also correctly define the term as "someone whose political views emphasize individual freedom by limiting the role of government."

Additionally, Pew found that self-described libertarians do not always subscribe to libertarian views. For instance, libertarianism is often associated with non-interventionist foreign policy beliefs. Paul over the weekend said derisively, "Let the Democrats put forward a war hawk like Hillary Clinton." However, Pew found that as many as 43 percent of self-described libertarians think "it is best for the future of our country to be active in world affairs." By comparison, just 35 percent of the general public said the same.

In other areas, the views held by self-described libertarians were more in line with typical libertarian believes. As many as 82 percent say "Americans shouldn't have to give up privacy and freedom in order to be safe from terrorism." Nearly three-quarters of the general public said the same thing.

Additionally, more self-described libertarians (56 percent) than the public overall (47 percent) say government regulation of business does more harm than good. Self-described libertarians are also more likely than the general public to disapprove of social safety-net programs and more likely to support legalizing marijuana.

Pew found that men were twice as likely as women (15 percent compared with 7 percent) to identify as libertarian, while college graduates (15 percent) were more likely to identify as libertarian than those with just a high school education (7 percent).

While just 6 percent of Democrats identified as libertarian, 14 percent of independents and 12 percent of Republicans did so.

Pew's data comes from its political typology and polarization survey conducted earlier this year, as well as a recent survey of a subset of those respondents, conducted April 29-May 27 among 3,243 adults.

Esquire blog: Things In Politico That Make Me Want To Guzzle Antifreeze, Part The Infinity

[Subtitle:] Hello, and welcome back to Mena Airport.

Don't say I didn't warn you.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Don't say I didn't tell you that, as soon as Hillary Clinton drifted anywhere within an area code of running for president, all the pre-fabricated skeletons would come waltzing out of the closets. Don't say I didn't caution of the danger inherent in having an entire generation of political reporters the formative political events of which was the constant pursuit of former president Clinton by an incredible posse of grifters, legal highwaymen, Arkansas bunco artists, oppo outlaws, and political opportunists. (Hi there, Joe Scarborough!) Is this my horn which I see before me, the handle toward my hand? Come, let me toot thee.

This brings us back to the bait shop in Arkansas. It would be a capital mistake to believe that Ms. Clinton's years as a senator, and as a presidential candidate, and as secretary of state - to say nothing of the postpresidential popularity of her husband - have somehow put all the ghosts of the 1990s to rest. The political climate is even wilder now, the political conversation, in many quarters, even further detached from reality than it was when Rush Limbaugh openly passed along a report that Vince Foster had died in some Washington pied-à-terre, only to have his body moved to Fort Marcy Park. There are thousands of little Limbaughs now, on the radio and on the Internet. A lot of mainstream political journalism is being practiced by young people whose formative lessons in the business were not Woodward and Bernstein chasing down lead after futile lead, but rather Matt Drudge ruling the world in the 1990s, with all the elite press chasing after him. I would like to believe we all have learned as much as we've needed to learn from that incredible decade of enabled slander. I also would like to believe in unicorns.

Still think I was overreacting? Get a gander at Tiger Beat On The Potomac this morning. Josh Gerstein, his prose shadowy and performed in the minor key of innuendo and scandal, has a long piece about the "secret files" stashed at the Clinton library down in darkest Arkansas, and if you find the general theme of the piece familiar, you are not alone. For more than 20 years, people have treated the Clintons as though they were a subject for one of those History 2 specials on the Templars, or something to be discussed by...The Most Awesome Man On Television.

Secrets Of The Clinton Library.

Bwah-hah-hah-hah-hah-hah!

There's the usual boilerplate about "transparency" and our Right To Know, but Gerstein wastes little time getting himself a seat around the fire at Parker Dozhier's bait shoppe, and he has some tales to tell in the firelight. Pass that jug over here, Billy Ray.

The pardon feeding frenzy: The last-minute pardon of billionaire financier Marc Rich became one of the most infamous moments of Clinton's presidency, sullying the president's reputation as he walked out the door. Less well-known or remembered is the feeding frenzy of clemency applications that flowed into the White House in the weeks before Clinton left office. The list of individuals relaying pardon requests is a who's who of prominent Democratic Party figures.

Yeah, and your point is? I hate to keep bringing this up, but the president's power to pardon is absolute -- so, naturally, a lot of people who know him are going to press their personal cases on him. Even if Clinton's reputation was "sullied," as though that were ever a concern of the people who howled about the Rich pardon, so what?

Many of the requests are already public. What's set to emerge in the coming weeks are the recommendations Clinton got from the Justice Department and his own staffers, including the pros and cons of the most sensitive pardons.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

White House staffers may have disagreed? Glorioski, what was wrong with those Clintons anyway?

3) Vince Foster: The Clinton Library has never released its key files on the death of Vince Foster, a White House attorney and former law partner of Hillary Clinton. Foster killed himself in July 1993 as he was handling various controversies that enmeshed the Clintons in their early months at the White House. The event was emotionally scarring for many in the Clintons' circle and fueled numerous conspiracy theories.

Oh, dear Jesus, can we not go there again? The poor man killed himself in Fort Marcy Park and, in his suicide note, specifically denounced the Wall Street Journal under crazoid Bob Bartley, and the Washington press corps generally, for their tendency to "destroy people for sport." His corpse was then used by horrible people -- like Rush Limbaugh, and Aqua Buddha's new pal, David Bossie -- to flog conspiracy theories as a way of throwing sand in the gears of a Democratic administration. It was the single most indecent act of ratfking in my memory. And now, apparently, it's back.

At the time of Foster's death, he was deeply involved in responding to a lawsuit filed against Clinton's Health Care Task Force. One previously secret document is listed this way in Clinton Library files: "Photcopy [sic] Note from Vincent Foster to Hillary Rodham Clinton [Re: Health Care Task Force lawsuit] (1 page)." Of the half-dozen other handwritten notes Foster saved, several are set for release, but - fueling unending conspiracy theories - several of his other writings are still slated to be withheld on privacy grounds. National Archives and Records Administration records obtained by POLITICO also indicate the forthcoming files include "White House personnel opinions on what to do about disclosure" relating to the Foster saga as well as legal memos about strategies to fight Freedom of Information Act requests seeking White House records about Foster's death.

Just fking shut up, OK, and let the man rest.

6) White House Travel Office affair.

Oh, come on. Really?

Earlier, public statements by the White House downplayed Hillary's role, but the White House's full records on the controversy - including legal advice on how to respond to questions about the first lady's actions - have never been made public. About 2,000 pages of records were withheld from an investigating congressional committee on executive privilege grounds. Now, many of those records are set for release.

Neighbor, how stands the Republic?

And then, of course, the big finish.

7) Whitewater: Notably absent from the recent Clinton Library releases: any of the more than 56,000 pages the White House maintained on the Clintons' Whitewater land deal and the years of investigations it gave rise to.

All of which came to absolutely nothing.

It's too early in the day for this much whiskey.

Mediaite: Sarah Palin Finally Does 'That Ice Bucket Water Dump Thing'

By Matt Wilstein

August 25th, 2014 11:20 a.m. EDT

You would have thought Sarah Palin would have jumped on this bandwagon ages ago. But it wasn't until this weekend that the former governor of Alaska and current media mogul decided to get in on the summer's biggest viral trend after getting nominated by Wasilla Arctic Cat, which makes the snowmobiles her family loves so much.

"At this stage of my life, of my career, aren't I a little too prim and proper for all that ice bucket water dump thing? " Palin asked.

Palin took a page out of Patrick Stewart's book, putting the emphasis on the check she was writing (and bragging about doubling the required amount), then using the ice to make drink (Diet Dr. Pepper instead of scotch). But don't worry, thanks to someone off-camera, you still get to see Palin scream in agony as cold water is abruptly poured over her head, possibly ruining the whopping $200 check she had just finished writing.

As for who Palin nominated, she chose former secretary of state Hillary Clinton and "he whom she recently said is her favorite Republican" (burn), John McCain.

Washington Post: Warren draft group continues 'full steam ahead,' despite senator's complaint

By Nia-Malika Henderson

August 25 at 12:44 p.m. EDT

Normally, when a draft movement crops up for a potential presidential candidate, there is a kind of tacit support and agreement between the would-be candidate and the group,which technically and legally can't coordinate with a the would-be candidate. That's the case with Hillary Rodham Clinton and Ready for Hillary, a group that has raised millions of dollars, gathered reams of information on voters and is basically considered to be Clinton's 2016 campaign-in-waiting.

Well, things are very different for Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.), who progressives really want to draft her for a 2016 presidential run.

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

Warren, time and time again, has said she has no intention to run. Progressives don't care, so they've formed Ready for Warren. But if she's not running, what's the point of Ready for Warren? That's what Warren wants to know.

In a letter to the Federal Election Commission dated Aug. 22, Warren, through her attorneys, again states that there is no Warren 2016. And to the group that really hopes she'll change her mind, she (her lawyers) essentially says: knock it off.

The Senator has not, and does not, explicitly or implicitly, authorize, endorse, or otherwise approve of the organization's formation or activities. To the contrary, Senator Warren has publicly announced that she is not running for President in 2016. Instead, the Senator hopes this organization will focus its attention and energy on maintaining Democratic control of the US Senate and not confuse donors about a non-existent run for President.

Sounds pretty clear, right?

Well, Ready for Warren remains undeterred, despite Warren's pretty clear and public disavowal. Erica Sagrans, campaign manager for Ready for Warren, says the Massachusetts is still their choice, and they will still carry on, with all sorts of activities, including house parties.

We will continue full steam ahead with our campaign to draft Senator Warren to run for president in 2016, because we believe she is the best person for the job. Senator Warren has devoted her life to fighting for working families, and is one of the few politicians willing to take on Wall Street and champion policies that give all Americans a fair shot.

We completely agree with Senator Warren that maintaining Democratic control of the Senate in 2014 must be a top priority leading up to November.

Sagrans, in a comment to She the People, said: "When she ran for Senate, it wasn't her plan. But when she saw that she had a chance to run for Senate and saw that she could make a difference in that role, she decided to do it and the same thing could happen here."

Basically, we're at square one. Warren says she isn't running. Again. Ready for Warren says they really want her to run.

Here's the thing about draft movements. They often don't produce very good candidates for president. Remember Wesley Clarke? How about that effort to draft Colin Powell? Didn't exactly work.

You have to go back to Dwight D. Eisenhower, a military man, who was buoyed by an army of organizers and elected officials who propelled him to the White House in 1952. Running for president is about policies, but it's also about personality. It's about being a good candidate (being good on television and good at giving speeches and debating helps out with that.)

But to put themselves through a grueling years long process of running, candidates have to have a burning desire to actually run for president and to be the president. Warren doesn't seem to have that. At least not yet. Maybe Ready for Warren, a group she doesn't approve of can convince her otherwise. But beyond that, there's still a question of whether she would make a good candidate for president in that backslapping, kissing babies sort of way.

The Hill: Bernie Sanders headed to Iowa

By Alexander Bolton

August 25, 2014, 1:01 p.m. EDT

Sen. Bernie Sanders (Vt.), an independent who caucuses with Democrats, is planning a trip to Iowa next month at the same time Hillary Clinton will be stumping in the battleground state.

Sanders announced Monday that he will attend a series of town-hall meetings on Sept. 13 and 14 in Iowa, which will host the first contest of the 2016 presidential primary.

Clinton, the early front-runner in the 2016 Democratic primary, will be in Iowa the same weekend as Sanders. She plans to attend Sen. Tom Harkin's (D-Iowa) annual steak fry.

Sanders has flirted with the idea of running for president, saying he would consider a campaign if no credible alternative on the left emerged to take on Clinton. He's also said Democrats should not anoint Clinton as their candidate.

And Iowa isn't the only early-voting state Sanders is visiting.

He will travel this week to South Carolina, an important early primary state, to speak in Columbia at an event sponsored by Progressive Voters of America, South Forward and South Carolina Progressive Network.

Sanders also will attend the Fighting Bob Fest, an annual gathering of progressives in Wisconsin, on Sep. 12 and 13. The event is named after the late progressive stalwart Sen. Bob La Follette (R-Wis.).

An announcement issued by Sanders's political operation stated that Sanders will be in Iowa Sept. 12 and 13, but a senior Sanders aide said his boss would be there Sept. 13 and 14, instead.

[Subtitle:] Ronald Reagan and Bill Clinton are the presidents Americans would most want to have as a high school teacher; Barack Obama the one Americans would never want to have

NEW YORK, Aug. 25, 2014 /PRNewswire/ -- As President Obama continues to deal with a number of crises, criticism over his vacation and his job ratings also continue to drift downward. This month, almost one-third of Americans (32%) give the President positive ratings for the overall job he is doing, while almost seven in ten (68%) give him negative ratings. This is down from last month, when 34% gave him positive ratings and 66% gave him negative marks; this is the second time this year (January being the other) that his ratings have been this low.

These are some of the results of The Harris Poll® of 2,537 adults surveyed online between August 13 and 18, 2014. (Full results, including data tables, available here)

After hitting a "high" mark for the past two years in June with a positive rating of 10%, Congress also drifts downward. Last month 9% of Americans gave them positive ratings and this month 8% do so, while 92% of Americans give them negative marks on the overall job they are doing. Looking at the country as a whole, one-third of Americans (32%) say things are going in the right direction in the country, while almost seven in ten (68%) say things have gotten off on the wrong track. Last month, three in ten (31%) said things were going in the right direction, while seven in ten (69%) said things were going off on the wrong track.

If Washington was like a high school yearbook

As kids around the country go back to school, it is interesting to look at some visible politicians in Washington and around the country and harken back to those high school yearbook lists. There was that one person who was class clown and another who was voted most likely to be President. Well, when given a list of 12 politicians, here is how Americans would vote (top two for each category shown):

Class Clown: Joe Biden (21%) and Chris Christie (14%)

Most Likely to Succeed: Hillary Clinton (15%) and Chris Christie/Rand Paul/Elizabeth Warren (7%)

Teacher's Pet: Joe Biden/Nancy Pelosi/Hillary Clinton (9%) and Harry Reid (7%)

Best Hair: Marco Rubio/Elizabeth Warren (8%) and Nancy Pelosi (7%)

Most Likely to be President: Hillary Clinton (34%) and Chris Christie/Marco Rubio (6%)

Most Annoying: Nancy Pelosi (19%) and John Boehner (11%)

Most Popular: Hillary Clinton (13%) and Chris Christie (9%)

Presidents as High School Teachers

While many U.S. Presidents taught law and at the college level, John Adams, Millard Fillmore, James Garfield and Chester Arthur taught at the primary and secondary levels as well. So, what if recent U.S. Presidents were high school teachers? Are there ones people wish they could have had as a teacher and ones they never would have wanted to have? Over one-third of Americans (37%) say they wish they could have had Ronald Reagan as a teacher, while one-quarter (26%) wish they could have had Bill Clinton. Just over one in ten wish they could have had Barack Obama (13%) and Jimmy Carter (12%), while under one in ten wish they could have had George H.W. Bush (6%) and George W. Bush (5%).

On the other side, two in five Americans (40%) say they would never want to have had Barack Obama as a teacher, while three in ten (30%) say they same about George W. Bush. One in ten (10%) say they would not have wanted to have George H.W. Bush as a teacher, while less than one in ten say that about Ronald Reagan (7%), Jimmy Carter (7%) and Bill Clinton (6%).

To see how all the politicians stacked up for the high school yearbook questions as well as other recent Harris Polls, please visit the Harris Poll News Room.

Methodology

This Harris Poll was conducted online within the United States between August 13 and 18, 2014 among 2,537 adults (aged 18 and over). Figures for age, sex, race/ethnicity, education, region and household income were weighted where necessary to bring them into line with their actual proportions in the population. Propensity score weighting was also used to adjust for respondents' propensity to be online.

All sample surveys and polls, whether or not they use probability sampling, are subject to multiple sources of error which are most often not possible to quantify or estimate, including sampling error, coverage error, error associated with nonresponse, error associated with question wording and response options, and post-survey weighting and adjustments. Therefore, The Harris Poll avoids the words "margin of error" as they are misleading. All that can be calculated are different possible sampling errors with different probabilities for pure, unweighted, random samples with 100% response rates. These are only theoretical because no published polls come close to this ideal.

Respondents for this survey were selected from among those who have agreed to participate in Harris Poll surveys. The data have been weighted to reflect the composition of the adult population. Because the sample is based on those who agreed to participate in our panel, no estimates of theoretical sampling error can be calculated.

These statements conform to the principles of disclosure of the National Council on Public Polls.

John,

At Friday's meeting, Hillary made clear Beth Jones was her first choice for Ambassador to Iraq. Since I don't know her, we agreed that I should meet with her today or tomorrow. If she is still the front-runner, would you have someone send me her resume and also reach out to her to ask her to call my office so we can schedule a meeting, perhaps later today or tomorrow?

Thanks.

Cheryl,
John and I were discussing what a potential point of view on Ready for Hillary lists might be and I was saying that I think we need to wait to decide on that until we know what our long-term legal situation will be. At that point, we should sit down and come up with an overall theory of the case on how we want to handle potential help from outside groups.
We have to assume that someone will file a complaint no matter what we do so it seems especially important that everyone is completely on board with whatever decision we make especially the lawyers who need to defend it.
Thoughts?

Subject:	We Need Common Sense Solutions

Dear John & Mary,

Combating terrorism requires common sense measures, backed by legislation from our representatives.

State senators and delegates have rolled up their sleeves to draft a bill prohibiting people on terrorist watch lists from buying guns in Maryland. I will be signing on to cosponsor this important legislation. Seems like common sense, right?

Not to Governor Larry Hogan. Congressman Van Hollen asked the Governor to consider taking all necessary actions to protect our state from terrorism and the Governor dismissed his appeal as "politics" and "silly."

Instead, Hogan has called on President Obama to ban Syrian refugees from Maryland. Governor Hogan is merely feeding the fear incited by Donald Trump and others in the Republican party.

We will not block terrorists by being afraid of refugees or by alienating our Muslim community. We fight terrorism through sensible laws that keep dangerous weapons out of the hands of those who would harm us (including the mentally unstable). And we need all Americans pulling together to combat extremist ideologies.

That's why I voted in 2013 with other sensible legislators to outlaw assault weapons with large capacity magazines in Maryland. Now we should take a similar step to ensure that people on a federal watch list cannot buy guns in Maryland.

Please chip in $3 or more to help me push for sensible gun control measures in Congress .

So why doesn't Governor Hogan support this bill? He should look beyond the NRA and do what it takes to make Maryland's citizens safer. This should not be a partisan issue. This should not be about "politics." And this is not "silly," Governor Hogan.

Please join us in helping Governor Hogan see beyond party lines to keep suspected terrorists from getting a grip on weapons that can be used in more mass killings.

Please chip in $3 or more to help me bring common sense to the gun control debate .

John,

As we have discussed, attached please find my personal invitation to Secretary Clinton to appear at my upcoming forum on the future of work –Next:Economy, which will be held in San Francisco on November 12 and 13.

I would like to stress our willingness to accommodate Secretary Clinton's schedule in any way we can. She could speak at any time during the two days of the conference (November 12 or 13), or we could arrange for her to speak as the special guest at a seated dinner on November 12.

This is also noted in the invitation, but I'd like to highlight that I would be happy to convene a more intimate discussion of the key labor issues related to the technology-driven transformation of the American workforce. Should Secretary Clinton be interested, we would pull together a select group of CEOs, venture capitalists, and labor advocates from among the summit participants for a focused roundtable to dig deeper into these topics.

I want to thank you for your help in getting this invitation to Ms. Lona Valmoro, who schedules Secretary Clinton's appearances. Your assistance is invaluable.

If there is any more information that I can provide on this event, or on O'Reilly Media, please let me know.

Thanks!

Subject:	[big campaign] Rules for the Debate

Lynn Sweet previews the rules for tonight's town hall presidential debate moderated by NBC's Tom Brokaw.

The questions will "be culled from a group of 100 to 150 uncommitted likely voters in the audience and another one-third to come via the Internet." Gallup "has the job of making sure the questioners reflect the demographic makeup of the nation."

"An audience member will not be allowed to switch questions. Under the deal, the moderator may not ask followups or make comments. The person who asks the question will not be allowed a follow-up either, and his or her microphone will be turned off after the question is read. A camera shot will only be shown of the person asking -- not reacting."

"While there will be director's chairs (with backs and foot rests), McCain and Obama will be allowed to stand -- but they can't roam past their 'designated area' to be marked on the stage. McCain and Obama are not supposed to ask each other direct questions."

Ben Smith reports that although the McCain and Obama campaigns agreed to rules that did not allow follow up questions in tonight's town hall debate, moderator Tom Brokaw was not a party to that agreement, "so the campaigns are expecting follow-up questions."

John,

Now I've seen both Sanders and HRC (which was last night).. He is getting the leapers and, as I told her and Matt, we got the thinkers.

Other than making sure she stays fresh and keeps hitting on the economy, there isn't much left to do.
Everything that can be done is being done and done very well.

I think the tide is back in our direction. Remember, the three rules for Iowa: Rule Number one is organize. Rule 2, organize. Rule 3, get hot at the end. John, as Ted Cruz is finding out, the end isn't three weeks out or even two weeks out. It is the last five days.

It could be that Iowa Ds are just too liberal, but I like our position.

Dave.

NARAL Pro-Choice America

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE June 4, 2008

Change We Can Believe In vs. More of the Same

NARAL Pro-Choice America releases candidates' records on critical choice-related issues

Washington, DC – Last night, Sen. Barack Obama secured the number of delegates necessary to move on as the presumptive Democratic nominee for president in the fall. Nancy Keenan, president of NARAL Pro-Choice America, whose organization endorsed Obama in May, said that the real differences between Sens. John McCain and Barack Obama were clear last night.

"NARAL Pro-Choice America congratulates Sen. Obama for securing the Democratic nomination for president and looks forward to working with him as the next pro-choice president in the White House," Keenan said. "There are very real differences between Obama and his Republican opponent, John McCain. Nothing McCain said last night about freedom and privacy from government intrusion should be misconstrued. McCain's more than two decades in office have provided him with a record that he will not be able to deny this fall. McCain may claim to be a moderate and a maverick, but on the issue of choice, he is neither."

Keenan continued that her organization would be targeting pro-choice Republican and Independent women throughout the election season, educating them on McCain's extreme anti-choice record.

"We will continue our efforts to reach pro-choice Americans across this country, especially the critical voting bloc of pro-choice Republican and Independent women," Keenan said. "Once these voters hear that John McCain has voted to block low-income women's access to birth control, supported both of President Bush's anti-choice nominees to the Supreme Court, and even said he would support the overturn of Roe v. Wade, they will support pro-choice Barack Obama for president."

In one of the organization's first outreach efforts since endorsing Obama for president, NARAL Pro-Choice America sent its more than one-million members and activists a comparison of Obama and McCain on critical reproductive health issues, such as access to abortion care, medically accurate sex education, and birth control.

To view the first in a series of Obama v. McCain comparisons, please visit http://www.prochoiceamerica.org/assets/files/obama_or_mccain.pdf.

---------- Forwarded message ----------
From: Steve Phillips < steve@powerpac.org >
Date: Sep 24, 2007 6:31 PM
Subject: Memo
To: Herb Sandler <hms326@gmail.com >
Cc: Susan Sandler < susans@justicematters.org >

From my preliminary review of the memo, I have three observations to make (well, actually four, with governance of the whole project being the fourth, but we should discuss that on the phone).

DISCONNECT OF MESSAGING AND MOBILIZATION
The biggest concern I have is the seemingly total disconnect between the Voter Contact/Mobilization section and the Messaging section. Mobilization does not occur in a vacuum, and effective and strategic messaging can play a big role in mobilizing the targeted constituencies identified in the memo. The massive immigration marches and the recent mass mobilization to Jena, Louisiana did not come about primarily through direct voter contact and organizing; they occurred because mass communication channels (ethnic-specific radio, for the most part, augmented by blogs and text-messaging) conveyed specific messages that framed the issues, touched people deeply, and moved them to action.

The way the memo is drafted now, it looks like ACORN, US Action and some others will go door-to-door, and then Wes Boyd or the Hollywood folks will come up with the mass media. Almost by definition, then, the media and messaging will not be tailored to or effective with the base constituencies. These two areas must be much more closely intertwined, and the folks on the ground need to have input into the media because they're the ones taking the pulse of the community.

LATINOS
The memo correctly points out that prioritizing reaching Latino voters should be a "top priority." Overall, the existing infrastructure is quite weak in the Latino community, especially when it comes to large-scale organizations. The We Are America coalition, however, does show significant promise from everything I hear and could emerge as a significant vehicle for mobilizing this community. It has a cross-section of community-based groups as well as labor, and they are all at the table trying to work together. Much as Los Angeles has changed the face of local politics through a Latino-led labor and community coalition, We Are America could emerge as such a force with sufficient resources and the right leadership.

AFRICAN AMERICANS
This is the area of greatest weakness, and it's somewhat of a national quandry at the moment. We are locked in a vicious cycle of limited existing capacity among the national groups, a reluctance of funders to publicly acknowledge that lack of capacity, and a regular allocation of electoral funding that bypasses the existing groups (NAACP, National Coalition for Black Civic Participation) which, while understandable in the short term, simply perpetuates the problem in the long run.

While We Are America shows promise in the Latino area, THERE ARE NO CLEAR OPTIONS IN THE AFRICAN AMERICAN COMMUNITY. This problem is additionally acute given the possibility of bringing at least three or four Southern states (Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina, and Virginia) into play if Obama does win the nomination. The best and most rigorous operation in the Black community is Anthony Thigpenn's PushBack Network which is building on the excellent and effective work he's done in Los Angeles to nurture community-based and highly-disciplined electoral programs in New York, Mississippi, Kentucky, and a few other states. This operation is not yet at scale, but it would be worth exploring how to help it get to scale or at least solidify its funding. It's my understanding that OSI is giving them a significant grant.

My best thinking, after a couple years of traveling the country and meeting with all manner of activists, is that someone has to develop and invest in a sustained leadership and capacity-building project in the African American community. If it's just left to who has capacity each cycle, then there will never come a cycle where there is capacity. I would look at a very rigorous and numbers-based program that gives limited amounts to existing groups such as NAACP and also has an intensive training and development component. That way, the numbers can identify who has potential and talent, while making sure that a cohort of effective, young organizers is developed. I think that Anthony Thigpenn could oversee such an effort if he had sufficient administrative support to cover his existing work in LA and California. Anthony has nurtured a very, very impressive network of organizers who have gone on to go great work in Oakland, New York (NY Jobs with Justice), and D.C. (national Jobs with Justice).

There might be a better way to configure such a program, but something has to be done to break out of this cycle, and someone has to take leadership on a sustained capacity-building effort that transcends any particular election.

Those are my thoughts for the moment, and I may have more when I've had a chance to read the memo in greater detail.

Steve

John,

This morning, people all over the country are talking about this campaign - and it's all because of you.

Thanks to your support, we crushed our goal, bringing the total raised last quarter to $925,000 before the critical September 30 FEC deadline - almost 90 percent of contributions coming from grassroots donors. It was an incredible outpouring of support. You were joined by nearly 3,000 other donors, determined to move our country forward and stop the Tea Party from doing more damage in Congress.

This is one of the strongest fundraising performances in the country and proves that we're running a winning campaign - I can't thank you enough for making it happen.

Together, we're going to win this thing.

Sean

P.S. It's critical that we keep this momentum going. Our opponent is already on air going after me - the Chamber of Commerce just placed a TV buy to pile on the attacks. We need to respond - immediately - before the lies take hold. Can you donate $20 or more to help me fight back against these Tea Party attacks?

John,
I hope this email finds all well with you and yours.
A good amount of exposure of Hillary holding, feeding and playing with her adorable grandchild would greatly help the public understand her very favorable side. I don't believe could have any potential downside.

One note: I've written this with zero regard for all the current political noise. If you think the tone needs to be adjusted in some way to reflect other concerns, please let me know.

ORGANIZING FOR ACTION

John --

This weekend we learned of the passing of Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia. While we didn't always agree with his rulings, we recognize the passion he held for the law, and his dedication to the institution of the Court.

But now the Supreme Court only has eight members, even as it is about to consider some of the most important issues facing our country -- from climate change and immigration reform, to women's and workers' rights.

Shockingly, Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell's first reaction to this news was to say that the Senate should refuse to do its constitutional duty, and block President Obama from filling the vacancy.

John, the Senate has a responsibility to fairly consider the President's nomination for the court, and we need to make sure they get the message.

OFA is putting together a petition to send a clear message to the lawmakers obstructing this process. Make sure your voice is heard -- sign this petition now.

Let's be clear about what the Constitution says about this: When there's a vacancy on the Supreme Court, the President is required to nominate someone to fill it, and the Senate must give that nominee fair consideration.

Anyone who says otherwise is putting politics first. The longest time a Supreme Court nominee has ever had to wait to get a vote was 125 days, and President Obama has more than 300 days remaining in his term.

The Supreme Court is too important to be held hostage by partisan gridlock.

Stand up for a fair nomination process -- add your name to OFA's petition:

Thanks -- more to come soon,

Sara

Netanyahu: 'I Will Talk to Obama on Improved Israeli Security'

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said he would talk with US President Barack Obama about ways to improve security for Israel when the two men meet in Washington on Monday morning for the first time in over a year. Among the central issues will be the renewal of the ten-year Memorandum of Understanding that expires in 2017, by which Israel received $3.1 billion a year. Israel expects to renew the deal, but wants to expand it to $50 billion over ten years.

Biden Says 'No Tolerance' for Comments from PM's Media Czar

While defending the strength of US-Israel ties as a relationship that can overcome policy disagreements, Vice President Joe Biden lashed out Saturday night against what he called "terrible comments" made by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's media czar appointee Ran Baratz. Addressing the Union for Reform Judaism's biennial conference, Biden told the audience during his keynote speech that "there is no excuse, there should be no tolerance for any member or employee of the Israeli administration referring to the president of the United States in derogatory terms. Period. Period. Period."

Knife, Vehicle, Rocket Attacks Continue as Terror Victim Dies

The wave of stabbing and vehicle attacks continued yesterday as six Israelis were wounded in three separate incidents, while a fourth attack occurred early this morning. On Sunday, four Israelis including a pregnant woman were wounded when a Palestinian rammed his car into a hitchhiking stop at the Tapuach Junction in the West Bank. The attacker was shot at the scene. Later that morning, a Palestinian woman approached a guard at the gate to Beitar Ilit attempting to gain entry. In a video widely shared online, the woman can be seen talking calmly to the guard until she reaches into her bag, produces a knife and lunges at him. Sgt. Benjamin Yaakovovich, a 19-year old border guard, died yesterday of wounds sustained in a vehicle ramming attack at Hilhul Junction last Wednesday.

IDF Calls Up Four Reserve Battalions

Against the backdrop of the ongoing wave of terrorism, the IDF has issued call-up orders to the reservists from four battalions. The plan is to have the reservists replace troops from the standing army who were dispatched to operational activity in Judea and Samaria. Despite the fact that they knew the chances were slim, some IDF officials had hoped that the wave of terrorism would subside and that the plans to call-up reservists, which Yedioth Ahronoth first reported about in October, would be shelved. However, the isolated attacks have since evolved into a reality of daily terrorism, and no solution is currently visible on the horizon.

53% of Israelis Support Killing Palestinian Terrorists on the Spot

A majority of Israeli Jews support the killing of Palestinian terrorists "on the spot," while 58 percent were against Jewish prayer at the Temple Mount during times of heightened tensions, a survey conducted by the Peace Index in October revealed. Fifty-three percent of Israeli Jews agreed with the statement, "Any Palestinian who has perpetrated a terror attack against Jews should be killed on the spot, even if he has been apprehended and no longer poses a threat." This finding may give credence to fears expressed by Israel's Arab public, with 78 percent saying they were "apprehensive of being harmed" in the ongoing violence.

Israel Moves to Green Light 2,200 New Settlements Units

Israel's civilian planning committee for construction in the West Bank moved last week to green light some 2,200 new housing units within existing settlements and retroactively recognize two outposts, most likely in a bid to preempt legal attempts by Palestinians and rights groups to see the sites evacuated. The move is only preliminary and is still subject to changes before the new units break ground." The Higher Planning Council of the Civil Administration agreed to advance a master plan for the Ma'aleh Michmash area east of Ramallah that will retroactively approve two outposts and add thousands of homes to the settlements in the region.

The two presidents also discussed ongoing activities on Egypt's eastern borders, where the Egyptian army has helped maintain's Israel's crippling blockade of the Gaza Strip. The Egyptian president added that if the PA were to take control of the Gaza Strip it could improve living conditions in Gaza and allow for borders to operate "normally," allowing the people of Gaza their daily needs.

Optimistic News: Bridge to be Built between Israel and Jordan

A new bridge will be built over the Jordan River to facilitate the establishment of new industrial and employment zones. The Regional Cooperation Ministry issued a special tender for the construction of the new bridge over the Jordan River, connecting Israel and Jordan in the framework of the new Jordan Gate Project—a new joint industrial and employment zone. This is the first and only infrastructure project being undertaken jointly by Israel and Jordan. It is to be comprised of an industrial and employment zone on either side of the Jordan River that will be connected to one another by the new bridge. The establishment of the new industrial zone is designed to deepen economic and commercial ties between Jordan and Israel,

Act Now: The Greatest Threat to Israel Is Continuing Status Quo

If it retains the West Bank, Israel can be Jewish, but no longer democratic. Or, it can be democratic, but no longer Jewish. For those who love Israel, time is running out.

By S. Daniel Abraham

When it comes to Middle East peace, I admittedly have a strong bias: I am a lifelong Zionist with a profound love for Israel. It's precisely that love that drives me to say emphatically that Israel faces a threat not only from those who want to see it destroyed, but also from demographic realities that can accomplish what those enemies can't.

For me, ahavat Yisrael, the love of Israel, was instilled at an early age — before the birth of modern-day Israel. I remember first hearing the horrifying news of the Nazis' systematic murder of Europe's Jews. I remember reading about refugees struggling to get to the Holy Land, of ships turned away, not only from Palestine, but also from my own country.

I remember the thrill and excitement of the founding of Israel, and the knowledge that Jews no longer would be turned away, that we had a refuge and our own homeland, that we Jews now were responsible for our own survival.

It is those memories and love for Israel that motivate me today to do what I can to point out the existential threat of today's demographic realities, to push for Israel to get back to the peace table, to ensure that people remember the late Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin's words that "separation between Israel and the Palestinians is the best solution for resolving the Israeli-Palestinian conflict" and that, given the choice "between the whole of the land of Israel, which meant a binational state … and a state with less territory, but which would be a Jewish state," as Rabin declared: "We chose a Jewish state because we are convinced that a binational state with millions of Palestinian Arabs will not be able to fulfill the Jewish role of the State of Israel, which is the state of the Jews."

In a few more years it will be too late for Israel to make that choice. The dream of a Jewish democratic state will be lost. For those who love Israel, and want it to remain a Jewish state, the time to act is now.

The greatest existential threat to the Jewish, democratic state of Israel is continuing the status quo.

The numbers speak for themselves. Simply look at the Jewish population, which continues to shrink compared with greater Israel's Arab population. Today's population, from the Mediterranean Sea to the Jordan River, is 52 percent Jewish. By the year 2020, the population is projected to be 49 percent Jewish and by 2030 just 44 percent Jewish.

With those diminishing percentages, it is simply impossible for the state to control all of the biblical land of Israel while remaining both Jewish and democratic. If it retains the West Bank, Israel can be Jewish, but no longer democratic. Or, it can be democratic, but no longer Jewish.

There is, of course, a third choice: Stay a majority Jewish and democratic nation by working with the Palestinians to create a nonmilitarized Palestinian state, with the two living side by side in security and peace.

Israelis, Palestinians and the international community are all in desperate need of a two-state solution. We know that we can only reach a lasting deal through international and regional cooperation, as well as direct negotiations.

The time to act is now.S. Daniel Abraham is an American entrepreneur and founder of the Center for Middle East Peace in Washington. Follow the Center on Twitter.

Negotiate Jerusalem First, Not Last

By Uri Savir

There is no doubt that among all permanent status issues to be resolved regarding the future between Israel and Palestine, the most difficult one by very far is the status of Jerusalem. Emotionally, it is the most loaded issue; politically, it is the most complicated one. From a religious perspective, reaching an agreement between the Jewish and Muslim worlds on the Jerusalem issue seems like "mission impossible."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

But pragmatically, this should not be the case. Analyzing today's situation, one can say that Jerusalem is already de facto a divided city , between west and east. Most Arab neighborhoods, such as Jabel Mukaber, Issawiya, Shuafat and Atur, are now cut off by road blocks and the Temple Mount (Haram al-Sharif) is administered by the Jordanian Waqf in coordination with the Palestinian Authority's Ministry of Waqf and Religious Affairs; only Muslims are allowed to pray there. It is also an open secret that PA officials are active both socially and economically in East Jerusalem.

The majority of Israeli public opinion supports giving up control over the East Jerusalem's Palestinian neighborhoods. According to a poll conducted on Oct. 27 by Mina Tzemach for the Israeli Knesset channel, 50% supports transferring the Arab East Jerusalem neighborhoods to the PA, while 41% oppose it. These results stem from developments on the ground, namely those borne out of the conflict, and not following any negotiations. Nevertheless, they show the road to a resolution of the contentious Jerusalem issue; they could actually serve as the basis to such a resolution.

If negotiations are one day resumed, what remains is to turn this de facto situation into a de jure division between two states and to deal with the future arrangements for the Old City and the holy sites. Jerusalem would become Israel's internationally recognized capital, also by all Arab states. (Today, no government recognizes it; not even the US administration .) East Jerusalem would become the internationally recognized Palestinian capital. The Palestinian government offices could be located in one of the Palestinian neighborhoods inside East Jerusalem.

As for the holy sites, all Jewish sites would come under Israeli sovereignty and all Muslim sites under Palestinian sovereignty.

The Old City should be divided according to the division of the city itself: the Jewish Quarter to Israel and the other quarters to Palestine. Given the historical importance and sensitivities of the Old City, no army or regular police force should be allowed to enter. Both sides should each establish special municipal police forces for public order, overseeing the freedom of worship at the respective religious sites.

This will lead to a situation in which there will be two capitals, actually two Jerusalems: the Israeli Jerusalem (Yerushalayim) and the Palestinian Jerusalem (Al-Quds), which will be each forced to develop infrastructure and economic cooperation.

The road to such a resolution is very difficult, even with political will — which is currently nonexistent. Yet, given today's status quo, it is not a long road. Rather, it is a road that needs very courageous decision-making on both sides, with the help of the international community.

When asked about such propositions, a senior and pragmatic Fatah official who talked to Al-Monitor on condition of anonymity rejected it out of hand. He said, "Jerusalem is to us — the Palestinians, the Arab countries and the Muslim world — not less important than to Israel and the Jewish world. East Jerusalem is occupied and should be returned. We insist that all symbols of Palestinian sovereignty will be present on Haram al-Sharif — a Palestinian police force and a Palestinian flag — and it should be administered by the Palestinian national government. Israel can do the same for the Wailing Wall."

This version of Total Mail Converter is not registered.

He added emphatically that the Palestinian president's office (Muqata, today located in Ramallah) must be relocated to the Old City and suggested Orient House as a suitable location. He acknowledged, however, that after the division of Jerusalem, Palestine could recognize West Jerusalem as Israel's capital.

An Israeli confidant of Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was even more adamant in rejecting a pragmatic compromise formula. He told Al-Monitor on condition of anonymity, "Jerusalem will remain united as Israel's capital, with the existing special arrangements on the Temple Mount for the Jordanian Waqf." He said that once all other issues are resolved, primarily Israeli security in the face of Arab terror, Israel might show certain flexibility on some of the East Jerusalem Palestinian neighborhoods.

Indeed, such a pragmatic solution of turning the de facto situation on the ground into the basis for a legally binding framework is impossible today. As aforementioned, it would require political will and tremendous civil courage on both sides. It would also demand intensive US diplomatic intervention that, today, is not realistic.

Yet, as the diplomatic stalemate can only lead to further violent deterioration, including in Jerusalem, it might be time to reflect on innovative approaches to conflict resolution. If in the Oslo process Jerusalem was purposefully delayed to be the last negotiated issue, in the next peace process — which sooner or later will be born out of necessity — it could be wise to begin negotiations by tackling the Jerusalem issue first. Leaving it open is a dangerous time bomb. A gradual resolution of the Jerusalem issue will facilitate the resolution of the other issues — borders, settlements, security and refugees. Indeed, it might be time for another Oslo secret back channel ; this time with "Jerusalem first" instead of "Jerusalem last."

Uri Savir has spent his professional life working on the strategies of peacemaking in Israel. In 1996, he established the Peres Center for Peace and is currently the center's honorary president.

" Justice Vacated? The Impact of Judicial Vacancies on the Criminal Justice System "

Abstract: Ten percent of federal judgeships are currently vacant, yet little is known on the impact of these vacancies on the criminal justice system. Using data that link arrests to charging to sentencing, I find that prosecutors dismiss more cases during vacancies. Defendants prosecuted during vacancies are charged with fewer counts and more likely to be charged with misdemeanor offenses, yielding a higher rate of guilty pleas and lower rate of incarceration, suggesting more favorable plea deals. Lower rates of incarceration and shorter prison sentences are concentrated among defendants who can afford to retain private counsel. Back-of-the-envelope calculations suggest that the current rate of vacancies has contributed to 6000 fewer prison years per fiscal year compared to a fully staffed court system.

Subject:	Friday, Sept. 25

Dear John:

We have planned for some time to hold a high-level dinner for ~80 people at the Harvard Club in New York on Friday, Sept. 25, hosted by the UN Foundation, to honor the Pope's leadership on climate change and his remarks that day at the UN. Our first inclination was to honor Msgr. Marcelo Sorondo, the Chancellor of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences. Mark Gallogly – whom we met through your suggestion – was kind enough to agree to cover the costs. As we get closer to the date, though, we have been rethinking the potential scope of the event and the guest list – possibly featuring more of an "arc to Paris" theme that ties together the Pope's encyclical with the SDGs and especially the SDG on sustainable energy, such that we might involve the Secretary-General, Christiana Figueres, and/or Kandeh Yumkella and his successor.

Would such an event be of interest to you? From your perspective, is there something useful that we might do – e.g., assemble influential NY Catholics on climate change? If so, we would welcome your counsel on how we might shape the event and whom we might invite – and of course we would be delighted if you could come and make a few remarks.

Thanks, John, as always.

With best regards,
Reid

WILL PALIN VOTE FOR CONVICTED FELON STEVENS?

Senator Ted Stevens was convicted on 7 counts of corruption but Palin still refuses to condemn his actions, call for his resignation, or say whether she will vote for him. Palin talks about how she took on the corruption in Alaska but with Stevens help she was a card carrying member of the corrupt old boys' network.

Ted Stevens Found Guilty on Seven Counts in Corruption Trial

"A federal grand jury indicted Stevens, 84, in July on seven counts of making false statements, for allegedly lying on U.S. Senate financial disclosure forms for the years 1999 to 2006." [ABC News 10/27/08]

After Conviction, Palin Reiterates Confidence in Stevens While Refusing to Call for His Resignation

"I'm confident Senator Stevens will do what's right for the people of Alaska," Palin said in a statement. [AP, 10/27/08]

Palin Has a Long History as a Member of Stevens Corrupt Old Boys Network

As Recently as July Palin said: "I Have Great Respect" For Senator Stevens. During a discussion of Senator Stevens' energy plans for Alaska, Governor Palin said, "I have great respect for the senator and he needs to be heard across America, his voice, his experience, his passion, needs to be heard across America so that Alaska can contribute more, so that we can be producers, so that we can help lead the rest of the U.S. I, again have great respect for him." [Anchorage Daily News, 7/2/08]

Palin Ran Stevens' 527 Group. The Washington Post reported, "Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin began building clout in her state's political circles in part by serving as a director of an independent political group organized by the now embattled Alaska Sen. Ted Stevens. Palin's name is listed on 2003 incorporation papers of the 'Ted Stevens Excellence in Public Service, Inc.," a 527 group that could raise unlimited funds from corporate donors. The group was designed to serve as a political boot camp for Republican women in the state. She served as one of three directors until June 2005, when her name was replaced on state filings." [Washington Post, 9/1/08]

Palin Hired Lobbying Firm Connected To Senator Stevens To Win Federal Funds. The Washington Post reported that, "As mayor of Wasilla, however, Palin oversaw the hiring of Robertson, Monagle & Eastaugh, an Anchorage-based law firm with close ties to Alaska's most senior Republicans: Rep. Don Young and Sen. Ted Stevens, who was indicted in July on charges of accepting illegal gifts. The Wasilla account was handled by the former chief of staff to Stevens, Steven W. Silver, who is a partner in the firm. […] Senate records show that Silver's firm began working for Palin in early 2000, just as federal money began flowing….Palin and the Wasilla City Council increased Silver's fee from $24,000 to $36,000 a year by 2001…The Palin earmarks came when Stevens was chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee and Young was a senior member of the House transportation committee. In hiring Silver, Wasilla found someone who was a member of each lawmaker's inner circle. Silver has donated at least $11,400 to Stevens' political committees and $10,000 to Young's reelection committee in the past decade, according to Federal Election Commission records." [Washington Post, 9/2/08 , emphasis added]

Sen. Ted Stevens' Endorsement Part of Palin Gubernatorial Ad. A campaign commercial for Palin's 2006 Gubernatorial campaign features Ted Stevens' endorsement. Stevens said, "We have a state that needs new management; that needs new people to represent a new generation. And they represent a new vision, new energy, they represent the kind of people that ought to come along and take our places. And it needs a new agenda for all of us to get behind. This of this, when you go to vote, don't go to vote alone, you'll help Sarah become the next governor of Alaska, which we all want to see." [2006 Palin advertisement, accessed 8/29/08]

While Falsely Accusing ACORN and Others of Voter "Fraud," Palin and Republicans Refuse to Condemn Convicted Felon Stevens

"Alaska State Election Law States That a Convicted Felon Cannot Vote. According to the state of Alaska, A person convicted of a crime that constitutes a felony involving moral turpitude under state or federal law may not vote in a state, federal, or municipal election from the date of the conviction through the date of the unconditional discharge of the person." Hi Eryn,

I hope you are doing well! We are still hoping you are able to make it to South Africa. We will probably be here for another couple of years. I wanted to let you (and JDP) know that I left USAID and joined Dalberg as an Associate Partner. I am very excited about this new role and will have a lot of freedom to create my own portfolio.

I will be sad to miss Gayle as she (hopefully) moves over to USAID. It was always the dream to work together at AID when we were running Sustainable Security.

Thanks for everything and keep in touch!

Andrew

MS-

We have been working with Julie Pace of the AP today to lay out a story ahead of tomorrow with some basic teasers on how you came to the decision to run and your rationale for doing so. We had John and Robby talk to Julie, all on background, so as not to get ahead of ourselves in confirming anything officially prior to tomorrow.

John did a run-through highlighting the things you've worked on your whole life, your experiences, including your more recent experiences as Secretary of State, and how it further shaped your views and your approach to problem-solving (the need to be globally competitive, what it takes to remain indispensable, and some examples of seeing the need to make progress in the US when you see things like the Chinese institute universal Pre-K). He went on to detail the last couple of years post-State, and the fact that this was a real decision that you came to after spending the fall thinking through solutions that are commensurate with our biggest challenges. Robby then did a little on the rationale to lay out the basics, that this is a campaign driven by people, etc.

The piece will shorter and process-focused but will get the attention we want it to get, and will go up this afternoon.

Nick
